Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners from the Wolds prison have been treated at outside hospitals as the result of attacks on them in prison; and how many prisoners have been treated by medical services within the prison as a result of attacks since the prison opened.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the numbers of prisoners from the Wolds remand prison who have been treated at outside hospitals and by medical services within the prison as a result of attacks since the prison opened.

Between 6 April 1992, when the prison opened, and 11 October 1993, ten prisoners have received treatment at Hull Royal Infirmary and 24 at the prison's Health Care Centre for injuries sustained in attacks on them by other prisoners.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who represents the Wolds prison on the local criminal justice committee.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about who represents Wolds remand prison on the local Criminal Justice Committee.

Wolds, like all prisons in the locality, is represented on the Committee by the governor of HMP Hull.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Director of the Wolds prison currently receives copies of all relevant Prison Service instructions and advice to governors.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about whether the Director of the Wolds prison currently receives copies of all relevant Prison Service instructions and advice to governors.

All instructions and advice to governors which are relevant to the Wolds are passed to the Director.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he intends to take to integrate the Wolds prison into the rest of the Prison Service.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what steps he intends to take to integrate Wolds prison into the rest of the Prison Service.

The first step was taken on 1 April this year, when the Prison Service Agency became responsible for all prisons, both directly managed and contracted. Since than a number of further steps to integrate the Wolds have been taken, including incident reporting, mutual support on difficult prisoners and performance measurement. It is also intended that the Area Manager will assume part of the supervisory role in relation to the Wolds.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to designate part of the Wolds prison for sentenced prisoners.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what plans he has to designate part of Wolds prison for sentenced prisoners.

We consider that there would be advantages if some sentenced prisoners were introduced to Wolds, and have reached agreement in principle with Group 4. Both the Prison Service and the contractor are considering how best this should be implemented.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether working copies of the consolidated agreement between the Home Office and the contractor, Group 4, for the running of the Wolds prison are held on site by the controller and the director.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about copies of the consolidated agreement for the management of Wolds remand prison.

Both the Director and Controller have consolidated copies of the agreement.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisoners at the Wolds prison are currently held at their own request under rule 43.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the percentage of prisoners at Wolds remand prison currently held at their own request under Rule 43.

On 14 October 0·6 per cent. of prisoners (2 prisoners out of 323) were held at their own request under Rule 43.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what penalties are provided for in the contract with Group 4 to manage the Wolds prison in respect of failure to provide a library service and a bail unit; if these services are in operation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about penalties in the contract with Group 4 for the management of Wolds prison, and about the library service and the bail unit.

The contract with Group 4 permits the Prison Service to withhold in whole or in part the agreed monthly fee for any month in which the management of the prison was unsatisfactory in any respect. The library at Wolds is in operation, and a probation officer for the bail information scheme is in post.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes have been made in the chain of command at Wolds prison since Group 4 took over running it; and what assessment he has made of its effectiveness in the event of a serious incident.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the management of serious incidents at Wolds remand prison.

Incidents at contracted prisons, like those at directly managed prisons, are now routinely reported to the Incident Management Suite Unit at Prison Service Headquarters. It is intended that the suite should be used in the future for the management of serious incidents at all prisons.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the deputising arrangements at the Wolds prison for use in the absence of the controller were last reviewed.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the deputising arrangements for the Controller at Wolds remand prison.

These are currently under review.

Prison Population

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the Department's projections for the size of the prison population in each of the years 1994 to the year 2000.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Projections of long-term trends in the prison population to 2001 were published in the Home Office Statistical Bulletin 6/93 on 30 March 1993, on the basis of the legislation then in force. These projections have been revised on an interim basis, reflecting the changes introduced by the Criminal Justice Act 1993 and taking account of the most recent data. The revised projections for 1994 onwards are:

	Number
1996	51,100
1997	52,100
1999	54,300

These projections are based on an estimate of the effect of the Criminal Justice Act 1993 and are therefore subject to a considerable margin of uncertainty. Further revised projections will be published next March following the full annual updating exercise.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the (a) certified normal accommodation and (b) actual population at each prison in England and Wales; and what were the total figures, at the latest available date.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about Prison Service accommodation and population.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were held (a) two to a cell and (b) three to a cell, on the most recent date for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about cell sharing.

On 30 September 1993, the number of prisoners held two to a cell intended for one person was 7,740, and the number held three to a cell was 93.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the expected capacity of prisons in England and Wales in the years 2000, 2005 and 2010.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the expected capacity of prisons in England and Wales into the next century.

Our current projection indicates that the Certified Normal Accommodation of prisons in England and Wales will be 54,000 places in the financial year 2000-01, assuming that a small proportion of accommodation will be out of use for essential building and repair work. This projection reflects the plans for additional capacity included in the 1992 Public Expenditure Survey. It therefore includes only two of the six new prisons announced by the Home Secretary earlier this month.

We have not made any projection of accommodation levels beyond that year. A revised projection should be available early next year and this will include all years up to 2001-2.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the change in the prison population for each month of 1993.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about monthly changes in the prison population in 1993.

The table below gives monthly changes based on the population on the last Friday of each month.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average monthly change in the prison population in the years 1988 to 1992.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about monthly changes in the prison population in recent years.

The following table gives the average monthly change in the prison population for the years 1988 to 1992.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) sentenced prisoners and (b) people on remand were held in prisons in England and Wales each month in 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 up to the latest date available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the population of (a) sentenced and (b) remand prisoners in Prison Service establishments for each month in 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93.

The information for 1991 is published in Prison statistics England and Wales (Table 1.2 from the 1991 edition, Cm 2157) and I enclose a copy of the table. Information on the monthly population in Prison Service establishments for 1992 up to August 1993 (the latest date for which information is available) is given in the attached table.

[1] Up to 1987 all those in police cells are assumed to be untried remand prisoners. For 1988 onwards estimates have been made of the numbers convicted unsentenced and included with the corresponding prison service establishment figures (see table 1.4). In 1988 the average total population in police cells was 1,047 males and 30 females, in 1989 107 males and three females, in 1990 661 males and in 1991 1,086 males and two females.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what forecast has been made of the change in the size of the prison population relative to the total capacity of prisons in England and Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the prison population and the total capacity of prisons in England and Wales.

The table below compares projections of average population with estimates of the average number of certified normal accommodation (CNA) places available for use to the year 2000-01.

	Population	CNA
1993-94	46,000	48,900
1994-95	49,400	50,300
1995-96	50,700	52,200
1996-97	51,300	52,500
1997-98	52,300	53,100
1998-99	53,400	53,800
2000-01	55,700	53,800

The population figures reflect projections which have been revised on an interim basis, reflecting the changes introduced by the Criminal Justice Act 1993. The accommodation figures assume that a small proportion of accommodation would be out of use for essential building and repair work. The current projections reflect plans for additional capacity included in the 1992 Public Expenditure Survey. They therefore include only two of the six new prisons announced by the Home Secretary earlier this month.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the projected capacity of prisons in England and Wales for each of the years 1994 to the year 2000.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the projected capacity of prisons in England and Wales.

Our current projections for the financial years up to 2000-01 are as follows:

	Capacity
1994-95	50,300
1995-96	52,200
1996-97	52,500
1997-98	53,100
1998-99	53,800
2000-2001	53,800

The figures shown are for average certified normal accommodation places, and assume that a small proportion of accommodation would be out of use for essential building and repair work. The projections reflect plans for additional capacity included in the 1992 Public Expenditure Survey. They therefore include only two of the six new prisons announced by the Home Secretary earlier this month.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what preparations he is making to deal with potential prison overcrowding; and what plans there are to use (a) police cells, (b) temporary buildings or portakabins and (c) prison ships or barges.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about preparations to deal with prison overcrowding.

The Prison Service is making every effort to deal with the increasing prison population without recourse to police cells. There are no immediate plans to use temporary buildings or accommodation barges, although both have been actively considered. The approach currently being taken is to seek to use existing Prison Service capacity to the fullest extent possible, having close regard to the safety of staff and inmates. This approach includes work to reclaim, where possible, inmate accommodation currently being used for other purposes.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the numbers of inmates of the Wolds and Blakenhurst prisons, respectively; and what plans he has to bring them up to their full complement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of inmates at Wolds and Blakenhurst prisons.

Group 4 are contracted to hold a maximum of 320 prisoners in Wolds remand prison. The roll at unlock on 14 October was 323.

Blakenhurst has a target to fill at the rate of approximately 100 prisoners per month, giving a current target of 500 by 26 October. Despite difficulties with the water supply which caused a delay in taking prisoners in August and September, the roll at unlock on 14 October was 531.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the prison population in March 1990; what is the population now; what is the current monthly level of change; and what plans he has to use police cells.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the prison population and police cells.

The prison population on 30 March 1990 was 47,304 and on 15 October 1993 was 46,935. The monthly change (on the basis of last Friday in the month figures) so far this year has been as follows:

	Number
January	+884
February	+1,249
March	+368
April	+116
May	+659
June	+301
July	+926
August	+489
September	+533

We are making every effort to avoid any recourse to police cells. To this end we are making adjustments to the way the Prison Service's estate is used and we are taking action to ensure that all possible inmate accommodation is made operational.

Grendon Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for a further prison run on the lines of Grendon.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about plans for a further prison run on the lines of Grendon.

Proposals for a second therapeutic community run on Grendon lines have in the past received endorsement from both HM Chief Inspector of Prisons and Lord Justice Woolf. We are giving careful consideration to these proposals and the Director of Health Care, Dr. Rosemary Wool, is chairing a task force the terms of reference of which are:

> to determine the strategy for treating/managing those prisoners who are suffering personality disorder and the need for further "Grendon style" therapeutic regimes.

The task force has a membership drawn from the Department of Health, Home Office, special hospitals and independent specialists and has been giving careful consideration to the type of facilities required, the category of prisoners to be provided for, the physical location of any additional facilities and whether another facility wholly dedicated as a therapeutic community is required, or alternately whether units in a number of other prisons would be a more suitable option.

The task force is due to report in January 1994 and until their report is received it would be premature for me to comment further.

Prison Escort Services

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners who have been transported by the Group 4 prison escort service have arrived late at their destinations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many prisoners who have been transported by Group 4 Court Services Ltd have arrived late at their destination.

Of the prisoners delivered by Group 4 Court Services Ltd in the East Midlands and Humberside by the end of September, 1,690 had arrived late at their destinations. To that date Group 4 had been responsible for 42,658 prisoner movements. Of the late deliveries, the majority were late for reasons beyond the control of the Contractor.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of prisoner escorts are carried out by private hire coach and private hire taxi.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the proportion of prisoner escorts carried out by private hire coach and private hire taxi.

The information requested is not held centrally and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been received about the Group 4 prison escort service since Group 4 took over the service in the east midlands and Humberside in April.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of complaints received about Group 4 Court Services Ltd since they took over the court escort and custody service in the East Midlands and Humberside in April.

By 7 October a total of 141 complaints had been received; 13 by the Prisoner Escort Monitor, and 128 by Group 4 Court Services Ltd. Of the latter, 82 were from prisoners and 46 from other sources. By that date Group 4 had been responsible for 50,352 prisoner movements. The number has steadily declined as the service has settled down from a peak of 36 complaints in April. In September only seven complaints were received.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the security arrangements for escorting each category of prisoner between prisons; and what are the average costs per mile.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about security arrangements for escorting each category of prisoner between prisons and the average costs per mile.

In general terms prisoners may be escorted between prisons using a variety of vehicles including contract taxis, coaches, mini-buses, cellular vehicles and secure vans and accompanied by an appropriate number of officers. Category B prisoners, those on remand and category C prisoners may be handcuffed. Handcuffs are not used when category D inmates are escorted to open prisons and are not used routinely on women prisoners.

Other security arrangements include searching of inmates and vehicles, depending on the analysis of the escape risk of each individual prisoner. Special arrangements, including police support, are made for transferring category A prisoners.

Given the wide variety of arrangements for escorts between prisons there is no central record of average costs per mile. This information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many legal actions are pending against Group 4 in relation to its prison escort service.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of legal actions pending against Group 4 in relation to the court escort and custody service.

I am not aware of any such action.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff Group 4 employs to operate the court escort service for the Hull and east midlands region.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of staff employed by Group 4 in the court escort and custody service in the East Midlands and Humberside.

Group 4 Court Services Limited employ 359 staff to operate the court escort and custody service in the East Midlands and Humberside.

Prison Offences

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers have been seriously assaulted in 1993; and if he will provide details.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of officers who have been seriously assaulted in 1993.

Central records provisionally show that in the first nine months of 1993 there were 1,915 cases proved at adjudication where the charge was an actual assault on a member of staff or other person (not including an inmate). There were a further 166 cases proved of attempted assault. No other relevant details are held centrally.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many alleged offences in prisons have been referred to the police, and in how many cases prosecutions have ensued, since the abolition of boards of visitors adjudications.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the referral to the police of alleged offences by prisoners.

The full information you request is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. In a survey for the year starting in April 1992, 98 prisons gave the following information:

547	alleged offences by prisoners were referred to the police
121	were still current at the time of the survey
176	had gone to court
187	had not been pursued by the police
54	had not been pursued by the CPS
9	cases had no information recorded on the outcome.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the numbers of assaults on prison officers per 100 prisoners at each prison in England and Wales for each quarter since 1986.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the numbers of assaults on prison officers per 100 prisoners at each prison in England and Wales for each quarter since 1986.

The available information is for the number of assaults proved at adjudication under the prison discipline system. Data are not available prior to April 1989 as assaults on prison officers, staff, inmates and others (other than gross personal violence to an officer) were grouped together in a single category. The information for April to December 1989, for 1990 and 1991 was published in successive volumes of "Statistics of offences against prison discipline and punishments, England and Wales" (Cm. 1236 for 1989, Cm. 1651 for 1990, Cm. 2066 for 1991). For convenience I enclose copies of the relevant tables.

Provisional information for 1992-93 and for the six months April to September 1993 is enclosed. I regret that more detailed information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many breaches of prison discipline occurred (a) in the 12 months before and (b) in the 12 months after the abolition of boards of visitors adjudications.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service,who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about breaches of prison discipline in the twelve months before and after the abolition of boards of visitor adjudications.

The disciplinary role of the boards ceased with effect from 1 April 1992. In the twelve months from April 1992 to March 1993 there were 89,163 proven offences compared with 89,050 in the previous twelve months.

Market Testing

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what management consultants have been used to advise on market testing and privatisation in the Prison Service; for what purposes; and at what cost.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what management consultants have been used to advise on market testing and privatisation in the Prison Service; for what purposes; and at what cost. Since the launch of the White Paper "Competing for Quality" the following consultants have been used to assist in our market testing work:

Coopers Lybrand
Identification of potential Home Office and Prison Service candidates for testing.

Handley-Walker PLC
Technical and evaluation advice for the market test of warehousing and distribution.

Further Education Staff College
Advice on competitive tendering of prison education.

PDP
Review of the operational specification used in the tendering of prisons management.

PA
Analysis and evaluation of tenders for the management of Blakenhurst and Manchester prisons.

LEK
Development of an analytical framework for the selection of prisons for market testing.

Government Actuaries Department
Analysis and evaluation of tenders for the management of Manchester prison.

Mr. L. Massey
Analysis and evaluation of tenders for the management of Blakenhurst and Manchester prisons.

Mr. G. Lister
Analysis and evaluation of tenders for the management of Manchester prison.

The total cost of these contracts was £263,000.

Mentally Ill and Addicted Prisoners

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current estimate of the number of people who are (a) mentally ill, (b) drug misusers and (c) alcohol addicted in prisons in England and Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the numbers of mentally ill, drug misusers and alcohol addicted prisoners.

A study by Professor J. Gunn, Dr. T. Maden and Dr. M. Swinton[1] of the Institute of Psychiatry, completed in 1991, suggested that of the sentenced population 19·2 per cent. had some form of psychiatric disorder and 19·6 per cent. had been substance misusers prior to coming into prison.

A parallel research study has recently commenced to provide a psychiatric profile of the unsentenced prison population.

Short Prison Sentences

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in prisons in England and Wales have a sentence of six months or less; and what proportion of those are fine defaulters.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many people in prisons in England and Wales are serving a sentence of six months or less and what the proportion of those are fine defaulters.

The latest available provisional information is for 31 August 1993 when there were 3,642 prisoners in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales serving sentences of six months or less.

Fourteen per cent. of the population serving up to six months were fine defaulters.

Penal Change Programme

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultations he has had with the Prison Officers Association concerning the practicability and cost of his programme for penal changes, announced in Blackpool in October.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend has agreed to meet representatives of the Prison Officers Association next month, but the conduct of industrial relations in the Prison Service is a matter for the director general. It will be for the latter to arrange for Prison Service trade unions to be consulted about any matters arising from the implementation of the policies he announced in so far as they may affect the Prison Service and are appropriate for consultation.

Penal Costs

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average cost per person per month of (a) keeping someone in prison and (b) sentencing someone to community-based penalties.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In 1991-92, the most recent year for which figures are available, the average monthly net operating cost of holding a person in prison establishments was £1,915 and the cost of community sentences was between £95 and £110 per month.

Reoffenders

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the percentage of (i) adult and (ii) juvenile offenders who reoffend within two years of receiving (a) a custodial sentence and (b) a non-custodial sentence.

Mr. Maclean: The information is not available in the form requested. The latest available information on reconvictions is shown in the table:

Percentage of offenders given probation or community service orders in 1987 and those discharged from prison in 1987 who were reconvicted of a 'standard list' within two years.

Offender	Those discharged from prison service establishments per cent.	Those commencing a probation order[1] per cent.	Those commencing a community service order[1] per cent.
All males	57	56	55
All females	40	37	41
Males aged under 21	71	66	65
Females aged under 21	51	41	43

Fine Defaulters

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are in prison in England and Wales as a result of fine defaults.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Question about population of fine defaulters in Prison Service establishments.

On 31 August 1993 there were 500 fine defaulters (477 males and 23 females) in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales.

Prison Custody Officers

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison custody officers work at (a) the Wolds prison and (b) Blakenhurst prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoner custody officers at Wolds and Blakenhurst.

There are 122 certificated prisoner custody officers at Wolds remand prison and 266 at HMP Blakenhurst.

Woolf Report

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list progress made to date on each of the recommendations of the Woolf report and timetables for future implementation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the progress made on the recommendations of the Woolf Report and timetable for future implementation.

You will know that Lord Chief Justice Woolf made twelve major recommendations and each of these have been a key priority for the Prison Service. A summary of the progress made is set out below.

Improve Security

The Prisons Security Act is now in force.

The long-term programme for refurbishing prisons to improve security standards is underway.

Many of the recommendations from the Lakes Hadfield Report have now been implemented.

Security audits have been instituted in prisons.

X-ray machines have been installed in all prisons holding category A prisoners.

Revised guidance on procedures for escorting prisoners has been distributed to all establishments.

A new style escort chain is being trialled.

The anti-bullying strategy for the Prison Service was launched in July of this year.

A standardised intelligence system is now in place in every prison security department.

Improve co-operation between Services

A Criminal Justice Consultative Council has been created.

A Criminal Justice Liaison Committee has been set up in each of the 15 prison areas. The links between the Probation Service and the Prison Service are being strengthened with the development of contracts between governors and chief probation officers.

Measures have been taken to reduce the use of remanding purely for psychiatric assessment.

There has been an increase in the number of prisoners transferred as in-patients to hospital for the treatment of mental disorder.

Increase delegation and improve accountability

From 1 April 1993 I have been personally responsible for the day to day management of the Prison Service.

The Prison Service's Framework Document sets out our goals and Key Performance Indicators (KPIs). The Service is given specific targets by Ministers every year in relation to each of the KPIs.

Much greater delegation to governors has taken place this year with budgetary and personnel responsibilities already devolved.

On 1 April 1994 governors of prison establishments will have a new contract which in essence is a specification detailing standards of service delivery.

The strategy for involving the private sector in managing some of our prisons is established with the Wolds and Blakenhurst being fully operational. Manchester has been market tested and further prisons will be named for future market testing.

Improve quality of jobs

A Better Jobs Programme has been initiated throughout the Service.

A comprehensive review of prison officer induction training and development training for existing staff has been undertaken.

There has been significant progress in involving prison officers in suicide awareness, induction, sentence planning and personal officer schemes.

Recognise status and requirements of unconvicted prisoners

A model regime for local prisons and remand centres was issued in November 1992.

New guidance on prison bail schemes was issued in August 1992 and there has been an extension of bail schemes and hostel provision.

Provide active and relevant programmes

There are now 500 NVQ schemes in place in establishments throughout England and Wales. This number is to be extended to 700 during the course of 1994.

There are 180 construction industry training courses running in establishments throughout England and Wales.

80 prison establishments have now run pre-release courses.

During the remainder of this year and into next year 48 establishments will have job search courses running with job clubs in 10 establishments.

15 establishments are running sex offender programmes and about 400 prisoners benefit from these programmes each year.

All female establishments have received new regime guidance.

Every establishment has received guidance on the nature and balance of regime activities.

A review of personal officer schemes has been undertaken.

Many establishments now offer anger management courses and cognitive skills programmes are currently being developed.

The regime monitoring system which measures inmate activity has been extended and improved.

In November 1992 an admissions guide on reception and induction arrangements was issued to all establishments.

All prisoners who were sentenced to 4 years or more after October 1992, and sentenced category A prisoners now have sentenced plans prepared for them. By the end of 1993 sentenced planning will be extended to all newly sentenced prisoners serving one year or more.

In October 1992 new guidance was issued for establishments holding juvenile offenders.

Provide Code of Standards

The Prisons Board aims to approve a Code of Standards for the Prison Service by the end of 1993.

Improve relationships with prisoners

A prisoners' information pack has been issued.

The Board of Visitors' role has changed with their responsibility for adjudications being removed.

A Prison Ombudsman will be appointed.

A series of measures has been taken to improve standards of diets and food distribution in establishments.

A major research project has been commissioned to examine how racial incidents are recorded and dealt with.

A model prisoner compact has been approved by the Board and will be issued to all establishments.

Provide access to sanitation

During 1993-94 £17·5 million will be spent on simple sanitation schemes. This is in addition to other funding for refurbishment schemes.

More than 80 per cent. of places now have access to sanitation.

End overcrowding

Twelve new prisons have been opened since 1991 providing 6,994 places.

Approval has recently been given for a further six new prisons.

Divide large wings into smaller units wherever possible

Whenever major wing refurbishment schemes are considered the requirment to create smaller units is considered.

Develop community prisons

Work has commenced on selecting suitable areas where the clustering of prisons can be piloted.

The opportunities for prisoners to maintain their family ties has been improved with an increase in the frequency and flexibility of duration of visits; further extension of financially assisted visit schemnes is projected for early 1994; and the provision of cardphones has now been extended to all prisons.

The Prison Service remains committed to the policies set out in the White Paper. Further progress will be made as quickly as possible.

Sentences

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the percentage of people sentenced in the courts who received (a) a custodial sentence and (b) a non-custodial sentence each month from January 1992 to the latest available date.

Mr. Maclean: Information on sentencing for both the magistrates court and the crown court for 1992—which is provisional—is given in the tables A to C. Data provided by the Lord Chancellor's Department for committals for trial at the crown court are given in table D.

Right to Silence

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions accused persons in criminal cases have exercised their rights to silence in each six-month period over the last three years; and if he will list such information he has available on the dates, courts, and charges when verdicts of not guilty have been given in such cases over that period.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not collected centrally.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the five categories of crime that have (a) increased and (b) decreased most since 1979, excluding consequences of criminalisation and decriminalisation.

Mr. Maclean: The five largest increases in recorded crime, i.e. notifiable offences recorded by the police in England and Wales, between 1979 and 1992 were:

	Per cent.
Perverting the course of justice	+915
Theft or unauthorised taking from mail	+531
Aggravated burglary in a building	+377
Other criminal damage value £20+ not endangering life	+338
Robbery or assault with attempt to rob	+324

The five largest decreases in recorded crime were:

	Per cent.
False accounting	−67
Unlawful sexual intercourse with girl over 12 but under 16	−56
Theft by an employee	−54
Abstracting electricity	−49
Indecency between males	−33

Classifications with small numbers of offences and those largely affected by legislation and definitional changes have been excluded.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of changes in the incidence of crimes against the person and of crimes against property since 1979.

Mr. Maclean: Recorded crimes against the person and crimes against property both increased by 120 per cent. between 1979 and 1992.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of crimes committed in the London borough of Lewisham in each year since 1985 were crimes related to (a) theft from residential property, (b) theft from commercial property, (c) theft from vehicles, (d) murder and (e) drugs.

Mr. Maclean: The available information relates to notifiable offences recorded by the police and is contained in the table:

Notifiable offences recorded by the police—certain offences as a percentage of all offences in Lewisham

[1] Not available

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many crimes were reported to police in the London borough of Lewisham in each year since 1985; and what percentage in each year resulted in a conviction.

Mr. Maclean: The available information relates to notifiable offences recorded by the police and is given in the table. It is not possible to link recorded crime statistics with convictions, as the information collected on convictions is compiled on a different basis.

Number

	Offences recorded
1985	25,943
1986	27,005
1987	26,384
1988	25,210
1989	26,002
1990	27,959
1992	31,380

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many violent crimes were committed in (a) south-east London as a whole and (b) Lewisham, for each year since 1985.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is contained in the table:

Offences of violent crime[1] recorded by the police

Number

	South-east London (No. 3 Area)	Lewisham
1985	5,792	1,326
1986	6,039	1,444
1987	6,776	1,728

1990	9,163	2,224
1991	10,980	2,821
1992	11,199	2,646

[1] Includes violence against the person, sexual offences and robbery.

War Crimes Act 1991

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are being investigated under the War Crimes Act 1991; what is the cost of these investigations to date; what prosecutions have been brought; how many prosecutions are likely to be brought; and if he will consider abandoning these investigations and/or prosecutions in whole or in part.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Forty-four cases are currently under investigation by the Metropolitan police war crimes unit. The cost of investigations to date is estimated at £3·8 million. No prosecutions have yet been brought under the Act, and I cannot anticipate when, or if, sufficient evidence will be available for any prosecutions to be brought. However, the police and prosecution authorities cannot ignore evidence of war crimes which has been and may be uncovered.

Drink Driving

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate changes in the incidence of drink driving, over the limit drink driving and deaths associated with over the limit drink driving since 1979.

Mr. Maclean: The information available relates to the incidence of drink driving when a driver is over the prescribed alcohol limit.

Estimates of fatal casualties involving illegal alcohol levels are published by the Department of Transport. The table give the number of positive or refused breath tests and revised estimates of the number of fatal casualties in accidents involving illegal alcohol levels:

Exclusion Orders

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many appeals against exclusion orders are outstanding.

Mr. Howard: There are none.

Daylight Saving

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment he has made of the gains and losses of continuing the practice of returning to Greenwich mean time from autumn to spring;

(2) on what issues he has received representations on the use of Greenwich mean time in winter.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The 1989 Green Paper "Summer Time—A Consultation Document" (Cm 722) considered possible losses and gains from returning to Greenwich mean time in winter, in particular as to: the incidence of road traffic accidents; crime; leisure pursuits; energy consumption; communications; travel; trade; agriculture; the construction industry; and tourism. Representations we have received since the Green Paper have focused on that range of issues.

South African Citizens

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many South African citizens have enetered the United Kingdom in each of the past five calendar years.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The number of admissions of South African citizens into the United Kingdom were 123,000 in 1988, 132,000 in 1989, 150,000 in 1990, 138,000 in 1991, and 156,000 in 1992.

Driving Disqualifications

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if disqualifications from driving imposed by (a) courts in the United Kingdom and (b) in courts of other member states of the European Community are enforced in the Isle of Man.

Mr. Maclean: No. Disqualifications imposed by courts in the United Kingdom, or by courts in other member states of the European Community, are not recognised in the Isle of Man.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation that provides for disqualifications from driving, imposed by courts in the Isle of Man, being enforced in the United Kingdom; if he will seek to extend such disqualifications to member states of the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans at present to introduce such legislation.

Young Offenders

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many juveniles were (a) cautioned and (b) prosecuted by the police in (i) London and (ii) Lewisham for each year since 1990; and how many of those prosecuted were committed by the courts;

(2) how many juveniles convicted of a crime in (a) London and (b) Lewisham had committed an offence which was drug related, in each year since 1985.

Mr. Maclean: Information available centrally on juveniles aged 10 to under 17 years in the Metropolitan police district—including the City of London—and courts within the Lewisham area is given in the table.

It is only possible to distinguish centrally offenders who have committed drug offences as opposed to drug-related offences.

Prison Dental Services

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who is responsible for the provision of dental care in each of Her Majesty's prisons; and how this service is monitored.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to reply.

Letter from D. Lewis to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to the Parliamentary Question on this subject which you tabled for written answer on Monday 18 October.

Dental surgeons are appointed to provide dental treatment at each establishment by the Prison Service. The surgeon undertakes work as part of the services he or she provides for the Family Health Services Authority (FHSA) as part of the NHS commitment. The dental surgeon remains subject to General Dental Services Regulations and the FHSA's powers to inspect and monitor performance. The head of health care at each establishment is responsible to the governor for the routine supervision of the service.

Risley Training Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future of Risley as a training prison, with particular reference to the integrated regime.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the future of Risley as a training prison and in particular its integrated regime.

You may be aware of the decision to accommodate 384 vulnerable prisoners in refurbished blocks at Wymott. This was announced by the then Home Secretary in Autumn 1992, in accordance with recommendations made by the Chief Inspector of Prisons. The change was scheduled for November 1993, but is being implemented slightly earlier as a consequence of the recent riot. The transfer of vulnerable prisoners will create additional accommodation in prisons in the north west and midlands. A significant proportion of these prisoners will be drawn from Vulnerable Prisoner Units at Liverpool and Risley.

The integrated regime at Risley has been successful in allowing Vulnerable Prisoners to share daytime activities with selected prisoners from the main prison. Clearly, the future development of the integrated regime will depend on the number of vulnerable prisoners remaining at Risley. The Prison Service intends to provide a full regime for those prisoners transferred to Wymott based on a core programme for sex offenders to address their offending behaviour.

For the present Risley will continue in its present role as a training prison. The development of its future role as a local prison serving the courts is being discussed and plans are being considered for a multi-functional community prison along the lines envisaged in the Woolf Report. Such plans will aim to provide decent conditions and a regime of purposeful activity for all prisoners.

Inland Revenue (Information)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances the immigration and nationality divisions of his Department disclose information to the Inland Revenue without the consent of the individual concerned.

Mr. Charles Wardle: When the Inland Revenue requests it in accordance with procedures agreed with the Inland Revenue.

Hull Prison

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what purpose the special unit at HMP Hull created to house category A inmates was built; when it opened and how many inmates it was designed to hold; how many inmates it held at opening; how many it has held to date; how many it held 12 months ago and how many it holds at present.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Mr. Richard Burden, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the Special Unit at Hull Prison.

The Special Unit opened in 1988 to hold long-term adult male prisoners in category A and B who have a history of disruptive and aggressive behaviour.

The Unit is located on A Wing in Hull which can accommodate 20 prisoners under normal prison conditions. However, given the special role of the Unit, the number of prisoners held would not normally exceed ten.

On opening, the Unit held four prisoners. To date 47 prisoners have been located in the Unit, for varying lengths of time and some prisoners have left and returned for a further period. In October of last year, ten prisoners were held on the Unit and the Unit currently holds five prisoners.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what monitoring has taken place of the workings of the special unit for category A inmates at HMP Hull, what evaluation has been made of its success; and what plans he has for the future of the unit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from D. Lewis to Mr. Richard Burden, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the Special Unit at Hull Prison.

A report evaluating the Hull Unit was completed at the end of 1991. It was prepared by Professor Norman Jepson and the late Mr. Kenneth Elliott, formerly of Leeds University. The report covers the first 2½ years of the Unit. A further assessment, to study whether the existence of this Unit and the other Special Units have had a beneficial effect on the management of long-term prisoners who present persistent control problems in the context of the long-term prison system as a whole, is currently being undertaken by Professor Keith Bottomley. His report is due at the end of the year and will subsequently be published. He will draw on all previous work which has been undertaken and will also have access to work carried out by the Unit's psychologist.

We will wish to consider Professor Bottomley's report before making an informed judgement on the long-term future of Hull and the other Special Units.

Sheehy Report

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he now intends to take following publication of the Sheehy report.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to make an announcement shortly.

Fire Hazards

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) killed and (b) injured in bedsitter fires in each of the last five years.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The number of casualties in fires, attended by local authority fire brigades in the United Kingdom, which started in bedsitting rooms of dwellings in multiple occupation, is given in the table for the years 1987 to 1991.

Fire-related deaths and injuries from fires starting in bedsitting rooms of dwellings in multiple occupancy, attended by local authority fire brigades, United Kingdom.

Year	Fire related deaths	Fire related injuries
1987	40	254

1989	37	229
1990	36	305
1991	28	252

Source: Home Office Fire Statistics, based on reports from local authority fire brigades.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to implement EC fire regulations in respect of offices and businesses;

(2) what discussions he has had with EC institutions with regard to EC fire regulations in respect of offices and businesses during the last year.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We are presently considering revised proposals for Fire Precautions (Places of Work) Regulations to implement the fire safety requirements of European Council directives 89/391/EEC and 89/654/EEC in the light of the recent efficiency scrutiny report on the implementation and enforcement of EC law in the United Kingdom. Those regulations, if implemented, will apply to most places of work with one or more employees.

The Home Office has had no discussions with EC institutions about those proposals or the fire safety provisions of other health and safety directives during the last year.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Licence Applications

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of his Export Control Organisation's time is taken up by (a) licence applications for sensitive destinations and (b) licensing for individual goods for non-sensitive destinations.

Mr. Needham: There are no figures setting out the proportion of time taken up by licensing in different areas and they could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, I would refer my hon. Friend to chapter 9 of the Export Control Organisation's annual report for 1992 in the House Library. This gives a breakdown of the work carried out by each of the licensing sections.

Within these sections the number of staff at grades AA-SEO is as follows:

	Number
Sensitive Destinations Section (SDS)	11
COCOM Licensing Section (CLS)	6
Military and Atomic Licensing Section	13
Industrial Free World Licensing	5

These sections are managed by two G7 officers.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has received from British Nuclear Fuels in regard to (a) the volume of radioactive waste that will be created from facility contamination and (b) the proposed disposal strategy for the decommissioning waste arising as a result of provisional commissioning of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant with uranium nitrate feedstock, in the event that consent for fuel commissioning of THORP is not subsequently granted.

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc and Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, acting jointly with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to assist the European Commission in its preparation of its reports on (a) re-evaluation of the requirements for reprocessing and (b) the preparation of an inventory of nuclear waste holdings in each member state of the European Community.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has received no such request for assistance from the European Commission.

AEA Information

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the future arrangements for the provision of information services by the AEA library to hon. Members and the general public.

Mr. Eggar: This is a management matter for the Atomic Energy Authority.

Nuclear Industry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to implement his Department's interest in implementation of the British Nuclear Fuels-Nuclear Electric fixed price contracts.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 9 March 1993, Official Report, column 500.

Environmental Awareness

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on how his Department plans to meet its target to promote environmental awareness and best practice as set out in his departmental MINIS 93, part Four, environmental section, page 15.

Mr. McLoughlin: Plans for achieving my Department's environmental objectives are shown on pages 3 to 9 of the environmental section, part 4 of the departmental MINIS 93.

The Department has published a number of practical guides on matters relevant to the environmental performance of business, including waste minimisation, alternatives to ozone-depleting substances and export opportunities, and more are planned. A more general booklet, "The environment—a business guide" endorsed by the Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment (ACBE) was launched on 13 October with the aim of helping smaller firms in particular to improve their environmental performance. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

The Department supports or participates in a wide range of seminars and exhibitions to raise awareness of environmental issues and continues to operate a telephone environmental inquiry point—freephone 0800 585794—which provides a comprehensive information and signposting service to business. It is also supporting a number of local environmental self-help initiatives including five local business and environment clubs established under a programme recommended by ACBE.

Together with the Department of the Environment, my Department is also funding the development and administration in the United Kingdom of the European Community eco-labelling scheme, which aims to encourage environmentally sound product and process design, and the European Community eco-management and audit scheme which will encourage the adoption of best environmental management practice.

Export Controls

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the role played by his Department in co-ordination of United Kingdom participation in negotiating in EC instruments relating to export controls and an export licensing policy compatible with single market obligations.

Mr. Needham: My Department is co-ordinating the United Kingdom's contribution to the continuing negotiations on the proposed EC regulation covering export controls on certain dual-use goods and technologies. Other Government Departments and agencies which have an interest in export control matters have also participated fully.

The Government's aim in the negotiations is to enhance enforcement of export controls in the context of the single European market, to ensure that the United Kingdom's ability to apply export controls in line with national foreign and security policy is maintained, and to protect the interest of United Kingdom exporters. The House will be informed of the outcome of the negotiations.

Nuclear Safeguards

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to implement policies to put into effect obligations entered into on nuclear safeguards on United Kingdom facilities since 1979; and how he has ensured such policies have not put the United Kingdom at an unnecessary disadvantage in regard to competitor countries.

Mr. Eggar: Arrangements for the application of International Atomic Energy Agency and Euratom safeguards in the United Kingdom have been negotiated pursuant to the terms of INFCIRC/263 and the Euratom treaty. These site-specific inspection arrangements are confidential to the operator, HM Government and the international inspectorates.

Judgments on what are considered to be appropriate inspection procedures for United Kingdom facilities take into account, as far as possible, accepted international practice at similar plants in other countries. In furtherance of this goal of maintaining common standards, the United Kingdom has played an important role in developing internationally accepted approaches for safeguarding major nuclear facilities, for example at centrifuge enrichment plants and large-scale reprocessing plants.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response Her Majesty's Government have made to the Commission proposal for a Council decision approving the amendment by the Commission of Commission regulation (Euratom) No. 3227/76 of 19 October 1976 concerning the application of the provisions on Euratom safeguards, Com (93) 294 final of 24 June.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to my answers given to him on 31 March, Official Report, columns 210-11, and 21 May, Official Report, column 344, concerning the original Commission proposal to amend regulation (Euratom) 3227/76 of 19 October 1976. A revised version of the proposal detailed in Com(93) 294 final of 24 June, was approved by the Council with United Kingdom support. The text of the amendment was published in EC Official Journal No. L 191/75, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. Tom Thorpe

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the reasons for the departure of Dr. Tom Thorpe from the energy technology support unit at Harwell.

Mr. Eggar: Mr. Tom Thorpe has not departed from the energy technology support unit but continues to work in the unit's strategic studies department, which he joined in June 1989.

Insurance

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to meet officials of the Association of Insurance and Risk Managers in Industry and Commerce.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I have accepted an invitation to meet members of the association to discuss matters such as insurance related to terrorism, environment and employment.

Assisted Areas Status, Southend

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will extend to all hon. Members whose constituencies are included in the Southend travel-to-work area, an invitation to meet him regarding assisted area status for south-east Essex.

Mr. Sainsbury: Decisions on the new assisted areas map were made after the careful consideration of each area's circumstances and are not subject to appeal. I received seven submissions from Southend during the review, all of which were given full consideration. I am not, therefore, meeting any delegations to discuss assisted area status.

Atomic Energy Authority Police

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what joint consultation procedure exists between the police committee of the Atomic Energy Authority police, and that force's Police Federation, and the representative bodies of other ranks at which matters relating to police pay and conditions of service are discussed; what is the membership of the joint body; and on how many occasions it has met in the past five years.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested was provided in my answer to the hon. Member of 28 June 1993, *Official Report,*columns 369-70.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who serves on the police committee of the Atomic Energy Authority police; and how often it has met over the past five years.

Mr. Eggar: The police committee of the Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary (AEAC) is chaired by the AEA's managing director for corporate services and includes senior managers from AEA and British Nuclear Fuels sites and in particular those sites protected by the AEAC. The AEAC chief constable and deputy chief constable also attend meetings of the police committee. The committee has met twice a year during the past five years.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if a Minister from his Department will meet with representatives of the Atomic Energy Authority Police Federation to discuss the ramifications of (a) the Sheehy report, (b) the White Paper on police and (c) matters of general concern to federation members which are not operational matters reserved for the chief constable.

Mr. Eggar: No. Regular meetings take place between representatives of the Atomic Energy Police Federation and AEA management through the Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary joint consultative committee to discuss matters affecting the force.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade to what extent Home Office police regulations are applied to members of the Atomic Energy Authority police.

Mr. Eggar: Home Office regulations do not apply to members of the Atomic Energy Authority Constabulary (AEAC). Their conditions of service are governed by the UKAEA staff conditions memoranda. However, these include many special provisions which apply only to members of the constabulary and which are based on the Home Office police regulations. Broadly, these provisions cover such matters as pay and allowances, duty, overtime, leave, housing, uniform and equipment.

Clean Coal Technology

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will give details of research (a) current and (b) planned to begin within the next 12 months in respect of clean coal technology; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Over 80 projects with a value of £144 million are currently under way in my Department's coal research and development programme. My Department is contributing £28 million to this project portfolio. Over the next 12 months we expect to initiate at least 30 projects on clean coal technology involving British Coal, United Kingdom industry, universities and overseas organisations such as the European Community and United States Department of Energy. Since the end of May of this year we have announced the start of 34 projects committing £7·2 million of Government funding.

To ensure there is adequate support for R and D on clean coal technology the Government announced in the coal White Paper increased support for coal R and D rising from approximately £3 million per annum to £7 million per annum for the period 1993-94 to 1995-96. This will enable research in developing advanced power generation technology and other coal science activities to continue at the Coal Research Establishment, universities and in industry and help ensure that full advantage can be taken of international collaboration.

Companies House

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to (a) publish and (b) consult on the study by SRU Ltd. on the future of Companies House; what assessment he has made on the impact on employment in Wales of any major alteration in the status of Companies House itself as the primary registrar of companies.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The SRU Ltd. report represents advice to Ministers, and I have no plans to publish it at present. During the preparation of the report, there was consultation on a number of issues with Companies House staff and with users of the registry's services, and there will be further consultation when we come to a view on the options before us.

Until a clear picture emerges of what Companies House would look like, no accurate assessment can be made of the impact on employment.

Timeshares

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he has taken on the Office of Fair Trading report on timeshare of June 1990; and if he proposes to press for EC regulations on the subject.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Timeshare Act 1992 provides a mandatory cooling-off period for timeshare contracts entered into in the United Kingdom or under United Kingdom law.

The United Kingdom Government consider that regulation at Community level is also required. The EC Commission submitted a draft timeshare directive to the Council of Ministers in July 1992. Negotiation of the draft directive is continuing and a common position is hoped for in the near future.

Trade Regulation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the nature of the evidence he has received concerning statutory regulation of trade, manufacture, or commerce that constitutes obstruction to their success; and what is the purpose of each respective instrument currently available to him.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: A wide variety of evidence on the impact of regulation on business has been received from a number of sources in business, local authorities, pressure groups and academia. The purpose and effect of all regulatory instruments having an impact on business are currently being examined as part of the Government-wide review of all such regulation. The review aims to establish whether regulation is achieving what it was intended to and how necessary protections can be assured in a way that is least obstructive to trade and industry.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the approximate base load in thermal units of gas he expects to be generated by gas-burning electricity power stations from 1994 onward, the consequential depletion rate of known gas reserves in percentage of those known supplies, and the period he expects such supplies to be available.

Mr. Eggar: The Government's coal review, published in March 1993 as Cm 2235 "The Prospects for Coal", contains a range of estimates of electricity generation from gas-fired power stations over the period 1993-94 to 1997-98 (table 11.3). The Department's Energy Paper No. 59 contains projections of the use of gas in power stations over a longer period up to 2020 (table 4.4). Drawing on these projections, the coal review contains estimates of the period over which United Kingdom gas reserves might meet overall gas demand (paras 7.12 to 7.14).

WALES

National Health Service Provider Units

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the numbers of provider units which have not made price lists for treatments available to purchaser units for the present financial year; what sanctions against late provision of treatment price lists he has authorised; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The provision of contract price lists is a matter for commissioners and providers within a timetable agreed for the national health service in Wales as a whole.

Asbestos

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has in regard to the areas of land in Wales contaminated by asbestos wastes; what representations he has received from owners of small businesses or domestic properties erected on land now found to be contaminated by asbestos; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The 1988 Welsh Office survey of contaminated land in Wales identified three former asbestos waste tips covering, in total, 3·5 hectares. Remedial work has already been carried out at two of these sites.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales has received no representations from owners of small businesses or domestic properties.

Building regulations require precautions to be taken to avoid danger to health and safety caused by substances found on, or in, the ground to be covered by buildings.

Ophthalmology

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were (i) the average waiting times and (ii) the year end waiting list for (a) in-patient and (b) out-patient treatment in ophthalmology for each health authority and for Wales in each year since 1985.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The available information is given in the following tables, which relate to hospital providers in each area. For in-patients median waiting times are available and for out-patients the notional time to clear the out-patient waiting list is given. Further information is available from the Welsh Hospital Waiting List Bulletin 1993 No. 2, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Median waiting time (days) for in-patients admitted from the waiting list during the calendar year[1]

[1] For patients admitted from the waiting list during the calendar year. A median waiting time is such that approximately half the patients waited less than this time to be admitted and half waited longer; median waiting times based on fewer than 50 cases are given in parentheses.
[2] A new information system for collation of hospital activity data was introduced from 1 April 1991. Figures for 1991-92 financial year are therefore not directly comparable with those for earlier years. Only districts for which reliable information has been received from hospitals have been included for 1991-92.
[3] There are no in-patient ophthalmology services provided by hospitals in Powys.
[4] Denotes not available.

Notional time (days) to clear out-patient waiting list at 31 March

Drawing Office

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with staff in the Welsh Office Drawing Office in relation to market testing in-house bids, the application of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 and management reviews of the Drawing Office operation.

Mr. Redwood: My officials have had substantial consultations both with staff and their trade union side representatives about these issues.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on public access to the central register of air photography for Wales following the market-testing exercise in respect of the Welsh Office Drawing Office.

Mr. Redwood: The central register of air photography for Wales is not included in the market test of the Drawing Office and public access to the register is not affected.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with contractors and their representative organisations in relation to the application of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 to private contractors tendering for the Welsh Office Drawing Office functions via the market-testing procedure; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the tender specifications for the market testing of the Welsh Office Drawing Office.

Mr. Redwood: The tender specifications will be issued to those invited to bid, including the in-house team, in the near future.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future location of Welsh Office land use records in the light of the market-testing procedure for the Drawing Office.

Mr. Redwood: The land use records unit is not included in the market test of the Drawing Office.

Urban Safety Management

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in relation to the designation of the canton urban safety management study as a pilot urban safety management scheme for Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: South Glamorgan county council has submitted a proposal and my right hon. Friend has received the hon. Member's letter of support of 20 September.

Cardiff Bay

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what communications he has received from the Wales regional office of the National Rivers Authority with respect to the classification of the proposed impoundment at Cardiff bay as a sensitive water in the at risk of eutrophication category, under the urban waste water directive of the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The National Rivers Authority has yet to submit to my right hon. Friend its proposed list of candidate sensitive areas for Wales in connection with the implementation of the EC urban waste water treatment directive. The NRA has provided its current working list of candidate eutrophic sensitive areas which includes Cardiff bay, assuming the barrage is constructed. A copy of the list has been placed in the Library of the House pursuant to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister for the the Environment and Countryside gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Brighton, Kemptown (Mr. Bowden) on 27 July, column 905.

Wales Engineering Centre

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the Wales engineering centre proposal; what consultations he has undertaken; and if he will place a copy of the Brodie report in the Library.

Mr. Redwood: The initiative to establish the Engineering Centre for Wales was taken in response to the need to raise the image and status of science, engineering and technology and to create awareness of the important contribution these subjects make to wealth creation. It is being driven forward by the Engineering Council, the Royal Academy of Engineering, the Welsh Office and the Welsh Development Agency.

At an early stage, the views of about 100 representatives of industry, academia, various agencies and professional institutions were sought at a workshop held in March 1992. Since then, the views of the centre's key customers have continually been canvassed for consideration in the planning process.

I have arranged for a copy of my Department's engineering skills consultation paper to be placed in the Library of the House.

Welsh Church Act Funds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had in relation to the administration of Welsh Church Act funds in the light of his local government reorganisation proposals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have consulted the two local authority associations and the Church in Wales. The Wales Council for Voluntary Action has submitted a proposal about the future of the funds: I have yet to reach a decision on this.

Radioactive Sulphur, Wylfa

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the leak of radioactive sulphur 35 from the Wylfa nuclear plant on 31 July and 1 August.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Sulphur-35 was released to the atmosphere on 2 August 1993 during shutdown of reactor 1 following equipment failure during refuelling on 31 July. The release was in excess of the weekly authorised limit and was graded as a category 1 incident on the international nuclear event scale—anomaly beyond the authorised operating regime.

The authorising departments considered the release to have resulted in negligible off-site consequences and monitoring of foodstuffs found no activity above European Commission maximum permitted levels. The authorising departments are conducting an extensive investigation into the incident.

Wrexham Maelor Hospital

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the source and scope of the fund that is providing the expenditure for a revolving door at the Wrexham Maelor hospital.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The revolving door at Wrexham Maelor hospital is included within the expansion of the hospital currently under way, which is funded from the major capital building programme for hospital and community health services.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the West Wales training and enterprise council in relation to (a) the deadline for publication of all TEC accounts and (b) the latest estimate for the publication date of the 1992-93 accounts for West Wales TEC.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My officials wrote to all TECs on 24 June 1993 to remind them of their contractual obligations under the TEC operating agreement for the submission of annual reports and audited accounts. This letter was subsequently followed up informally by officials.

A copy of the TEC's 1992-93 annual accounts is available in the Library of the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Family Credit

3. Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual spending on family credit; and what was the spending on family income supplement in 1979.

Mr. Burt: Family credit expenditure for 1992-93 was £864 million. This is 13 times more in real terms than the £24 million spent on family income supplement in 1978-79.

Fraud

7. Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress his Department has taken to reduce the level of fraudulent claims for social security benefits.

Mr. Lilley: Record fraud savings of £558 million were made last year when the Benefits Agency caught over 270,000 people cheating the system. Through a range of measures already introduced or planned for the future we are cracking down on opportunities for fraud.

19. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what extra investment in anti-fraud work his Department is making over preceding years.

21. Mr. Milligan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what extra investment in anti-fraud work his Department is making.

Mr. Burt: To help step up the fight against fraud we have allocated an extra £10 million to the Benefits Agency this year, to be continued in succeeding years. We have also introduced new incentives to encourage local authorities to crack down on housing benefit and council tax benefit fraud.

Pensioners (Incomes)

12. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of pensioner households had an income below half of the contemporary average in 1990-91.

Mr. Hague: In 1990-91, an estimated 34 per cent. of pensioners had income below half the national average before housing costs; and estimated 37 per cent. after housing costs.

16. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of pensioners have some form of second income to add to the basic state pension.

Mr. Hague: Eighty-five per cent. of pensioner units had income on top of state benefits in 1990-91, the latest year for which information is available. State benefits include both basic state pension and income-related benefits.

Benefits

17. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to promote a debate on the balance between selective and universal benefits.

Mr. Scott: Through my hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security's Mais lecture in June and "The Growth of Social Security" published in July we have fuelled a widespread debate on the British social security system. In due course, we will put forward specific proposals for reform. These will be subject to extensive debate in Parliament and elsewhere.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the number of recipients of (a) housing benefit, (b) income support, (c) family credit and (d) invalidity benefit by region and the percentage of the eligible regional population receiving this benefit in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Burt [holding answer 22 July 1993]: I wrote to the hon. Member on 24 August 1993. The information is as follows:

Pursuant to my reply of 22 July in which I said I would let you have such information as is available. I am now pleased to be in a position to give you a reply.

Information on the eligible population for each benefit on a regional basis is not available. Such information as is available is in the tables attached.

1. All figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
2. The regions given for Income Support and Family Credit are the Social Security Administrative Regions used by the Department prior to 1988. The regions given for Housing Benefit and Invalidity Benefit are the Standard Statistical Regions.
3. Figures are given for each benefit. People receiving one benefit may also receive one or more of the others.
4. Figures come from "Point in time" surveys carried out on different dates; care should be taken in comparing figures between benefits.
5. Invalidity Benefit figure includes overseas recipients.
6. Figures for the eligible regional population for each benefit are not available.

Goode Report

18. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the findings of the Goode committee report on occupational pensions.

Mr. Hague: The Government will be giving careful consideration to the committee's detailed recommendations.

Child Support Agency

20. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the first three months operation of the Child Support Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The Child Support Agency is a new business operating under new legislation.

In its first three months of operation the agency issued 177,000 maintenance application forms to parents with care of children, sent 38,500 maintenance inquiry forms to absent parents and made 4,000 maintenance assessments.

We are closely monitoring its performance and I am satisfied that the start it has made in introducing these new arrangements will ensure that parents meet their responsibilities for child maintenance whenever they can afford to do so.

"The Growth of Social Security"

22. Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has had about his Department's publication of "The Growth of Social Security"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: "The Growth of Social Security" was intended to stimulate and inform public debate on the social security programme. The Department has received a substantial number of comments and representations reflecting a wide range of opinion.

Incomes

23. Mr. Boyce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the incomes of the poorest and richest 10 per cent. of households have changed in real terms, after housing costs, between 1979 and 1990-91.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Bristol, East (Ms Corston) on 26 July 1993, Official Report, column 460.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the percentage change in income during the period 1979 to the latest date for which information is available before and after housing costs, of each percentile group in the population.

Mr. Burt [pursuant to his reply, 27 July 1993, c. 1010]: I am advised that a figure was omitted from the table included in my reply. The correct information is:

Real increases in income between 1979 and 1990-91 for each decile group in the income distribution are provided in the table; greater disaggregation would not give statistically reliable results. These figures relate to the United Kingdom and are based on income equivalised for household size and composition.

Note: All estimates are subject to sampling error.

Pensions

24. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people currently contribute to (a) a final salary occupational pension scheme, (b) a money purchase occupational pension scheme and (c) a personal pension; and what is his estimate of the corresponding figures in five years' time.

Mr. Hague: The Government Actuary provisionally estimates that in 1991, 8·4 million people made personal contributions to final salary occupational pension schemes; and 0·7 million made personal contributions to money purchase occupational pension schemes. Figures on the number of people who are making additional voluntary contributions to occupational pensions schemes are not available.

In the financial year 1991-92, 2 million people made personal contributions to appropriate personal pensions in place of the state earnings-related pension scheme, and a further 3 million made contributions to other personal pensions.

The information on the corresponding position in five years time is not available.

Occupational Pension Schemes: The Provisional Results of the 1991 Government Actuaries Department Survey of Occupational Pension Schemes.

Personal Pensions: Inland Revenue, Statistics and Economics Office.

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of pensioners currently have an occupational pension; and how many had one in 1979.

Mr. Hague: The information requested is in the table.

Percentage of pensioners with income from occupational pensions

Pensioner couples	65	70
Single pensioners	32	56
All pensioner units	43	61

Source:

Family expenditure survey and GAD survey of occupational pension schemes.

Notes:

1. Pensioners units are defined as single people above state pension age and couples in which the husband is above state pension age.
2. 1990-91 denotes estimates from a combined sample of the 1990 and 1991 family expenditure surveys (FES). One quarter of the 1991 FES sample has been omitted because of inadequate data on community charge benefit receipt following the delayed issue of community charge bills in April 1991. As a result the sample size in that year is too small to provide reliable estimates of pensioners' incomes. For this reason the remaining data for 1991 have been combined with that for 1990.

Pension Age

25. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the cost to public funds would be of equalisation of the state pension at 60 years.

Mr. Hague: Equalising the state pension at 60 would cost, at today's prices, over £4·5 billion by 2025.

Income Support

26. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients of income support there are in the Cunninghame, North constituency.

Mr. Burt: Information of this kind is not collected for individual parliamentary constituencies. However, I understand from the Benefits Agency that there are 65,441 income support recipients recorded by offices located within Cunninghame, North.

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many men aged between 60 and 65 years were claiming income support in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Burt: The latest available figures show that there were 176,000 men aged between 60 and 65 years successfully claiming income support.

Notes:

1. Source: Income Support Statistics Quarterly Inquiry, November 1992.
2. The figure has been rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. The figure includes men aged 60 but excludes those aged 65 and does not include men receiving income support as partners.

Housing Benefit

27. Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration he has given to reducing the taper for housing benefit assessment.

Mr. Burt: I have no plans, at this time, to cut the housing benefit taper.

Invalidity Benefit

28. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the number of people currently in receipt of invalidity benefit.

Mr. Scott: The estimated average number of people who will be receiving invalidity benefit at any one time during the year 1993-94 is 1,585,000.

Source: The departmental report, 1993.

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many men aged between 60 and 65 years were claiming invalidity benefit in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Scott: On 4 April 1992, the latest date for which figures are available, there were 285,000 men aged between 60 and 65 receiving invalidity benefit.

Notes: Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants, rounded to the nearest thousand.

Pensioners (Shares)

29. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has as to the number of pensioners who own shares.

Mr. Hague: We estimate that in 1990-91, the latest year for which figures are available, 1·5 million pensioner units received income from stocks and shares.

Expenditure, North Yorkshire

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were his Department's capital and total expenditures in North Yorkshire for the last financial year and for each of the previous three years.

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the table. The figures are for administrative spending in the North Yorkshire district by the Benefits Agency and the Contributions Agency since they were established in 1991.

	1991-92 £	1992-93 £
Capital spending	30,953	47,128
Total administrative expenditure	4,427,095	5,029,952

Child Benefit

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has as to the level of child benefit or equivalent paid to the mother of one child in each other EC country.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Comparison of weekly rate of child benefit in EC Member States—For first child at age:

[3] No specific amount; child benefit is means-tested.

[4] No benefit if family income is more than £5,661 per annum.

Family Resources Survey

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what purposes his Department has commissioned a family resources survey; by whom the questions were devised; by whom the data gathered will be analysed; and how and when it will be published.

Mr. Burt: The new family resources survey (FRS) has been commissioned to provide better information about the characteristics and finances of households. The improved data will enable better monitoring of the social security programme and expenditure forecasting. In particular, it will be better geared to provide information on low-income households as the basis for households below average income statistics than the family expenditure survey which is currently used.

The questionnaire content was agreed in consultation with DSS analysts and other interested Departments and finalised with the survey's field contractors after pilot studies.

The field contractors began collecting data for the new FRS last October. After the removal of information identifying individual respondents by the contractors, the data are passed to the analytical services division of DSS.

It is envisaged that a summary statistical bulletin with provisional data will be published, as a publication of the Government Statistical Service, in the second half of 1994.

Absent Fathers

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women have been asked to name an absent father at benefit offices in (a) Edinburgh and (b) Scotland as a whole; how many have demurred; and how many have had income support deducted as a penalty.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Mrs. Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive, who has written further to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. Hepplewhite to Mr. Malcolm Chisholm, dated 16 August 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency I wrote to you on 26 July in response to your Parliamentary Question about the number of women in Edinburgh who had been asked to name an absent father and how many had demurred.

My letter said that between 5 April and 30 June 1993, 37 parents with care of children had been interviewed in Edinburgh in connection with their applications for child maintenance. I also said that, of these, 24 had declined without good cause to co-operate in providing details of the absent parent. However, I have subsequently established that of the 37 interviewed, 12 named the absent parent and only one parent declined without good cause to co-operate. The other figures given are unchanged.

I am sorry for any confusion my earlier reply may have caused.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many successful prosecutions have taken place of self-employed individuals found to be evading national insurance contribution payments; and what has been the value of the revenue recovered in each year since 1984-85 (a) in each region and (b) nationally.

Mr. Hague: The administration of national insurance is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Contributions Agency. She will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from A. Chant to Mr. Alan Milburn, dated 27 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Contributions Agency I am responsible for answering questions about relevant operational matters. I have been asked to reply to your question about how many self-employed individuals have been successfully prosecuted for the evasion of National Insurance contributions (NICs), and the value of the revenue recovered in each year since 1984-85.

When arrears of self-employed (Class 2) contributions are discovered it is the aim of the Agency to obtain current compliance and payment of the arrears at the smallest cost to public funds. If necessary, the Agency will pursue unpaid Class 2 NICs by either civil or criminal prosecution. In my answer to your other separate question about the self-employed I have supplied, in annexes which will be tabled in the Library, details of the number of proceedings undertaken by the Agency and the amounts involved.

We do not keep separate figures for the number of successful prosecutions nor for amounts of money collected in relation to these proceedings, because some cases are resolved before litigation has run its full course or alternatively the money may be collected by instalments. These cases are regarded as an effective part of the litigation process.

I regret that I have been unable to give you the precise information that you requested in your question but I hope that my reply has proved helpful.

Public Bodies

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the names, occupations and current employers of those who currently hold positions in each public body to which he makes appointments; if he will make a statement on the considerations taken into account when making such appointments and if he will list details of the posts and salaries or allowances payable which have changed since the publication of "Public Bodies 1992."

Mr. Burt [pursuant to his reply, 25 June 1993, c. 322-23]: The earlier reply contained incorrect information. The correct information is in the table.

Disability

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide statistics on the basis of the latest analysis of households below average income, for the long-term sick and those on disability benefit to correspond with statistical data for pensioners, recipients of income support and unemployment given in tables A4 and A5 in the latest households below average income report.

Mr. Burt [pursuant to his reply, 19 July 1993, c. 71-72]: I am advised that the reply contained incomplete information. The correct information is as follows:

The households below average income (HBAI) dataset, the family expenditure survey (FES), does not identify all long-term sick or disabled people, and its identification of receipt of disability benefits is imperfect. The estimates are susceptible to these imperfections as well as sampling errors. The results reported in the tables may, therefore, reflect changes in the categories of long-term sick or disabled people identified in the FES, as well as changes in the incomes of such people.

Where figures are particularly uncertain due to sampling error and where the confidence intervals exceed pre-determined limits the estimates are bracketed or omitted. Further information about the effects of sampling errors can be found in appendix 5 of HBAI, a copy of which is in the Library.

The figures in the tables are presented in line with tables A4 and A5 in Households Below Average Income 1979 to 1990-91.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Wheat

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average ex-farm price of wheat received by farmers in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France and (c) Germany in pounds sterling in 1979 and each year since 1984.

Mr. Jack: Information for Great Britain, France and Germany is set out in the following table. Comparable information for the United Kingdom is not available.

Ex-farm price of wheat

Blind and Partially Sighted People

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements her Department makes to ensure that blind and partially sighted people have access to information produced by her Department where it has not been published in alternative media such as Braille, large print or tape.

Mr. Jack: MAFF aims to respond positively and helpfully to all requests for information from blind and partially sighted people. The Department has recently set up a telephone helpline to offer callers unfamiliar with MAFF a clear route into the Department and the information it can provide. Helpline staff would welcome enquiries from visually impaired people at any time. As well as providing a new focal point for information from the Department, the helpline is an additional means of putting callers rapidly in touch with officials who can deal with enquiries on specialist issues. The Department has an equal opportunities unit which provides central advice on meeting special needs.

Computer Consultancies

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list all the computer consultancies employed by her Department and agencies, since November 1991, the tasks for which they were engaged, and the total cost to her Department.

Mr. Jack: There follows a list giving details of the computer consultancies employed by the Department since November 1991 and the tasks on which they were engaged.

I am unable to provide precisely the total cost of consultancies in that period, since that would involve the officials in considerable effort. However, in recent years the annual budget for computer consultancies has varied between £5 million and £7 million.

Ministry of Agriculture Fisheries and Food list of computer consultants employed since November 1991.

Stock-proof Fencing

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make it her policy to introduce legislation compelling adjoining landowners to maintain stock-proof fencing against commons.

Mr. Jack: I see no need to introduce such legislation, since there is a general duty on landowners, whether adjoining common land or not, to contain their livestock and to ensure against straying.

Contracting Out

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all those services or functions contracted out in her Department and agencies, since November 1991, in which the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 were not applied.

Mr. Jack: The application of TUPE depends on the nature of the work awarded and the contractors' own proposals for carrying out the work.

Since publication of the White Paper "Competing for Quality, Buying Better Public Services", the Department's market-testing programme has included the activities listed which have been contracted out under contractual arrangements which did not need to incorporate the 1981 regulations:

Building and Estates Management (Part)
General Recruitment (Up to Grade 7)
Library Services (Books and Journals)
Royal Navy Surface Surveillance (Fisheries Protection Contract)
Relocation Work (Central Science Laboratory)

Information relating to services or functions which are not on the Department's market-testing programme but which have been contracted out since November 1991 cannot be obtained except at disproportionate cost.

Houses

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the member states in the European Community which currently designate agricultural animal status or its equivalent to horses; and if she will make it her policy to adopt such a designation in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Jack: The practice of designating horses as agricultural animals varies among member states. The Government have no plans to adopt a comprehensive designation since this would, in itself, have no significance. What is significant is how horses are treated in specific pieces of national legislation.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the achievements of (a) her policies and (b) her Department in helping small businesses over the last 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if she will publish the performance indicators by which her Department monitors those achievements and the statistical results of such monitoring.

Mr. Jack: The Government continue to help small businesses, through improvements to the business climate, through deregulation and through specific programmes of support and assistance.

This Department has continued to contribute significantly to the process. The completion and implementation of the common agricultural policy reform agreement provides a framework for the development of a competitive agricultural industry for future years. It gives farmers the stability to plan ahead.

In other areas of its work also the Department continues to offer help and assistance. For example:

(i) special rules to enable small producers to claim arable area payments under simplified arrangements that do not require them to set aside land;

(ii) specific arrangements to enable meat from low-throughput abattoirs to be supplied to wholesalers as well as retailers and final consumers;

(iii) the group marketing grant which can assist individual farmers to band together to market their produce more effectively;

(iv) the prospective easing of salmonella controls for poultry producers with small breeding flocks; and

(v) the establishment of small business panels to enable Ministers to hear at first hand the views of small businessmen on the regulatory burden.

All the schemes operated by this Department are closely monitored. Reports on particular schemes are published from time to time.

Pesticides

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research has been undertaken by her Department into the relationship between instances of pesticide contamination of humans and symptoms of depression amongst the farming community.

Mr. Soames: I would advise any farmers suffering symptoms of depression to seek the advice of their doctor in the first instance. Specialist advice on farming issues can be obtained through the nearest Ministry regional service centre.

Fur Farms

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what procedures are required by his Department for mink farmers to follow when mink are moved from one fur farm to another.

Mr. Soames: The Mink (Keeping) Regulations 1975, as amended, require that no mink shall be transported from place to place except in closed cages or other containers constructed in such manner and of such materials as to prevent their escape. There is no requirement to inform the Ministry of the transportation of mink.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information she has about the mink transported from Halifax to Appin in Scotland in September and October 1992; when her Department became aware of the movement; and what action was taken.

Mr. Soames: I have no information on this. There is no requirement to inform the Ministry of the transportation of mink.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessments she has received from (a) the Agricultural Development Advisory Service, (b) the National Rivers Authority and (c) English Nature as to whether the Isle of Wight is free from an established feral mink population; and what assessment her Department has made.

Mr. Soames: Although sightings of mink on the isle have been reported in the press, ADAS has not been presented with evidence to support any claims of a feral mink population, nor has it received any complaints of small animals and poultry, which are easy prey for mink, being taken. Its overall assessment is that, at present, there is no feral mink population on the isle.

A 15-month study of otters and mink in south-eastern Britain, including the Isle of Wight, carried out on behalf of the Hampshire Wildlife Trust and the National Rivers Authority, found no evidence of mink on the isle in late 1991 or again in 1993.

In its response to the Ministry's public consultation exercise, reviewing the Mink (Keeping) Order 1987, English Nature said:

"Although the mink is now well established in England, it is not yet established on the Isle of Wight."

A number of mink farms existed on the isle prior to the introduction of controls on the keeping of mink in 1962. Escapes from these farms could have led to the establishment of a feral mink population many years ago, although there is no evidence that this occurred. Hampshire has a well-established feral mink population and mink are capable of swimming the distance from the mainland. Therefore, there is always the possibility that mink could reach the isle and in the absence of adequate control by the owners and occupiers of land responsible for such control, establish a feral mink population.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give details of the numbers of mink farms which have existed on the Isle of Wight since controls on mink keeping were introduced, with the size of such establishments.

Mr. Soames: Mink keeping controls were introduced in 1962. Since then only one mink farm owner has been licensed to keep mink at premises on the island. Details of mink farms provided in support of licence applications are confidential between the Ministry and the applicant.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information she has on outbreaks of botulism on mink factory farms; and how many resulting mink deaths have occurred on individual mink farms.

Mr. Soames: Botulism in animals is not compulsorily notifiable and therefore complete data are not available. We are aware of an outbreak on one mink farm in September 1992 which resulted in around 1,000 mink deaths.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mink were (a) reared and (b) killed on fur farms in each of the last five years.

Mr. Soames: The Mink (Keeping) Order 1992, which requires that mink farms be licensed by Agriculture Departments, does not require returns of numbers of mink reared and killed to be made. Therefore no official figures are available.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is she will give details of the size of mink cages most often found by officers of the state veterinary service when inspecting mink farms.

Mr. Soames: The majority of mink cages inspected by officers of the state veterinary service were of dimensions being greater than 38 cm in depth, 23 cm in width and 30·5 cm in height.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what work has been carried out to assess the impact on wildlife of the Isle of Wight were a feral mink population to become established; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: No studies have been carried out by the Ministry to assess the possible impact were a feral mink population to become established on the Isle of Wight. Experience in other parts of Britain has shown that feral mink can have a significant effect on local populations of birds and water voles if adequate measures are not taken by landowners and occupiers to control the feral mink.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment officers of the state veterinary service have been made of the extent to which the current cages used for fur farming meet the ethological needs of mink.

Mr. Soames: In monitoring welfare standards on fur farms the state veterinary service operates to the guidelines laid down in the relevant recommendations adopted by the Council of Europe.

Officers of the SVS note any signs of abnormal behaviour in the mink which may indicate that the cages do not meet the ethological needs of the animal. Such abnormal behaviour was observed in only a very small proportion of animals and on no occasion was it considered by officers to be associated with unnecessary pain or unnecessary distress.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give details of reports of feral mink on the Isle of Wight of which her officials were aware in 1983, 1987, 1992 and February 1993.

Mr. Soames: The Ministry is aware of press reports and claims, from time to time, of feral mink on the Isle of Wight. In 1983 a dead mink was reported on the road at Chale and collected by a Ministry official and in 1992 a report was made to the Ministry of a mink being shot at Porchfield. Officials are aware of the recent reports in 1993 of evidence of mink on the River Medina. Their presence has not been confirmed. ADAS has advised the working group, set up by the Isle of Wight county council this year in response to these reports, on appropriate methods of capture and humane despatch of feral mink which can be employed by land occupiers and owners if this proves necessary.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what additional security precautions her officers have advised in order to ensure that mink are securely held in the mink farm on the Isle of Wight in addition to the general provisions of the Mink (Keeping) Orders.

Mr. Soames: The Mink (Keeping) Regulations 1975, as amended, set out the requirements for keeping mink under licence and allow for modifications to the requirements to be made where local conditions may make these appropriate.

The conditions of the licence issued to the Isle of Wight mink farm were drawn up on ADAS advice following inspection of the premises and with regard to the local conditions and the need to prevent mink escaping into the surrounding area. The details of particular licences to keep mink are confidential between the Ministry and the licensee.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the annual cost of (a) animal welfare inspections of mink farms by officers of the state veterinary service, (b) the administration of the Mink (Keeping) Orders by her Department and (c) annual inspections of mink farms by her officials over the last five years to ensure compliance with the security provisions of the Mink Keeping Orders.

Mr. Soames: Information on the annual cost of animal welfare inspections is not separately available.

The costs for administration and annual inspections for compliance with the Mink (Keeping) Regulations 1975, as amended and the issue of licences are as follows:

	MAFF Administration £	Annual Inspections £
1988-89	840	2,270
1989-90	910	2,920
1990-91	700	1,000
1991-92	520	1,710
1992-93	220	1,600

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is taken by her officials when Arctic foxes are found to be present on licensed mink factory farms to ensure that the foxes cannot escape into the countryside.

Mr. Soames: The keeping of Arctic foxes is not subject to control. Ministry officials visiting licensed mink premises confine their security checks to the arrangements for the keeping of mink.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) on how many occasions in each of the last five years welfare inspections of Arctic fox farms were carried out by her officials;

(2) if she will make a statement on the accommodation for Arctic foxes witnessed by her officials during welfare inspections of fur farms.

Mr. Soames: In monitoring welfare standards on fur farms, the state veterinary service operates to the guidelines laid down in the relevant recommendations adopted by the Council of Europe.

Welfare inspections of Arctic fox farms were carried out by officers of the SVS on four occasions in 1989 and once in 1990. Of the two farms visited, the accommodation in one was found to be well constructed and in good condition. On the other farm improvements to flooring were recommended and this was satisfactorily carried out. I understand that both farms have since ceased to operate.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions in each of the last five years officers of the state veterinary service monitored or observed the slaughter of Arctic foxes in fur farms; and if she will give details of the various methods of killing used.

Mr. Soames: Officers of the state veterinary service monitored the slaughter of Arctic fox once in the last five years. The method of slaughter used was by lethal injection.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) whether officers of the state veterinary service have witnessed (a) the gassing of mink on fur farms and (b) the gassing of mink via a box connected to car or tractor exhausts; and if she will give details of precautions taken in the latter case to ensure that the mink die humanely;

(2) what assessment her officials have made of the humaneness of carbon monoxide gassing of mink; and what is the average time to unconsciousness and death noted by officials of the state veterinary service when observing the gassing of mink on fur farms.

Mr. Soames: Officers of the state veterinary service have witnessed the gassing of mink on fur farms by a variety of methods. Killing by exhaust gases from a car or tractor was not observed on any occasion.

The Department has carried out no specific research into the gassing of mink. However, research and observation in other countries have concluded that gassing by carbon monoxide as practised in Britain is humane.

Very few data are available on the average time to unconsciousness and death, but in the cases observed the time has varied between one and a half to seven minutes to unconsciousness with death supervening between three to 15 minutes later. No evidence of undue stress was observed prior to unconsciousness.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research has been conducted into the areas recommended by the Farm Animal Welfare Council for research to determine the optimum enclosure for mink and fox in 1989.

Mr. Soames: The Farm Animal Welfare Council review of fur farming recommended that the industry should carry out research to determine the optimum enclosure for mink and fox. However, the fur farming industry in this country, being one of the smallest in Europe, has so far been unable to support such research and development.

The Council of Europe recommendation on fur farming also contains a recommendation that research should be undertaken in the area of, inter alia, the development of husbandry systems to improve the health and welfare of the animals. Such research is being carried out in other countries such as Denmark, Finland and the Netherlands, whose industries are large enough to bear the costs involved.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken by her Department in respect of the report by the Institute of Fisheries Ecology of evidence of a feral mink population on the River Medina in the Isle of Wight.

Mr. Soames: ADAS has advised the working group set up by the Isle of Wight county council this year in response to the institute's report on the methods of capture and humane despatch of feral mink. The county ecology officer is to hold courses for local landowners and occupiers who are responsible for feral mink control, to ensure that they are able to identify signs of mink and the ways of controlling them.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many times the mink farm on the Isle of Wight was inspected by his officials in each year since 1988 in connection with the security provisions of the Mink (Keeping) Orders.

Mr. Soames: The number of inspections made by ADAS on behalf of the Ministry was as follows:

	Number
1988	1
1989	1
1990	2
1992	2

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the annual income over each of the past five years from mink farm licence fees.

Mr. Soames: The annual income, on a financial year basis, from mink farm licences in England is as follows:

1989-90	4,715
1990-91	3,220

School Milk

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what representations he has made to the Council of Ministers to retain the subsidy for school milk;

(2) what representations he has made to ensure the continuation of the subsidy for school milk.

Mr. Jack: At the Agriculture Council on 20-21 September the United Kingdom, supported by several other member states, argued that the Commission's proposal for a 50 per cent. cut in the rate of school milk subsidy was too drastic a measure for achieving budgetary savings and would threaten the viability of a popular scheme which had played an important role in encouraging consumption of milk and milk products. In the light of these representations the Council agreed to limit the reduction in subsidy to 25 per cent. and to find the balance of the necessary savings by making technical adjustments aimed at improving the cost-effectiveness of the scheme. The Government are satisfied that this represents a sensible compromise which safeguards the viability of the scheme while at the same time taking account of the severe pressure on the Community budget.

Abattoirs

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the throughput in British abattoirs in each month since January 1992.

Mr. Jack: The throughput of abattoirs in the United Kingdom is published each week in a press notice entitled "United Kingdom Slaughter Statistics". Historical monthly figures, including those since January 1992, are given on the reverse of this press notice.

Agriculture Expenditure

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much of the overall expenditure on agriculture, fisheries and food, as shown in the public expenditure White Paper is attributable to (a) agriculture, (b) fisheries, (c) food, (d) forestry, (e) coast defence and (f) all other non-agricultural activities including civil defence for each year since 1985-86.

Mr. Jack: The information available is contained in the 1991, 1992 and 1993 editions of the MAFF/IB departmental report, copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Lupin Seed

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information she has received from the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods about the toxic components of lupin seed.

Mr. Soames: None. The committee is unable to report on this matter pending the completion of additional studies necessary for the safety assessment of two applications to use lupin products in food.

Cereals

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was (a) the total amount paid by each member state of the EEC in cereals co-responsibility levy for each year since the co-responsibility levy has been operative and (b) the total tonnage of cereals produced in each member state of the EEC, showing in each case how much per tonne the co-responsibility levy represented.

Mr. Jack: Information on the total amount paid by each member state in cereals co-responsibility levy, the total tonnage of cereals produced in each member state and the rate of the co-responsibility levy per tonne of cereals each year since 1986 is provided in the following tables.

[1] 1 July to 30 June.
[2] Net rate of levy includes both basic and, where appropriate, additional levies. The basic co-responsibility levy was calculated as 3 per cent. of the common wheat intervention price (5 per cent in 1991-92). The additional levy was charged in cases where the Maximum Guaranteed Quantity was exceeded. The basis of calculation was not consistent throughout this period.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the tonnage and average price of grain exported from the United Kingdom (a) generally and (b) separately for each country to which grain was exported in each year since 1989.

Mr. Jack: The information sought cannot be produced without disproportionate cost to the Department. However, details for each type of grain covering total trade in volume and value, as well as a list of the major trading countries involved and their respective trade, can be found in the annual volumes of the "Overseas Trade Statistics for the United Kingdom" (MA 20) for 1989-91, while figures for 1992 can be found in the December 1992 issue of the monthly version (MM 20) of the same publication. Copies of these publications are in the House of Commons Library.

Details of grain classification within the Standard Industrial Trade Classification Division 04 are shown in the "Guide to Classification for Overseas Trade Statistics" (MA 21), which is also in the House of Commons Library. All the data itself can be found within table VI, section 0, 041-045.99 of the MA and MM 20s.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what was the size of the United Kingdom harvest in (a) tonnes and (b) value, at actual and at 1989 prices in each year since 1979;

(2) if she will list the quantity and value of grain produced in the United Kingdom in each year since 1979 giving value in real and 1990 prices.

Mr. Jack: I assume that my hon. Friend's first question refers to the cereals harvest. As values are not available at 1989 prices, I have answered both questions together showing values in actual, 1990 prices and as deflated by the index of retail prices (1990=100). The information is set out in the table.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give the average price of imported wheat into the United Kingdom for each year since 1979, showing the quantity of all imported wheat in each of these years.

Mr. Jack: The information sought on United Kingdom imports of wheat is as follows:

Agricultural Support

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total of moneys received from the European Economic Community, in connection with agricultural support, subsidies or intervention payments of any kind, in each year since accession; and what has been the net cost of agricultural support, both national and community, after allowing for the moneys received from the European Economic Community.

Mr. Jack: Figures showing receipts from the EC budget and total United Kingdom public expenditure on agriculture in each year since 1972-73 are given in the table. The figures on total public expenditure include spending on the common agricultural policy; this is funded in the first place by the Exchequer and subsequently reimbursed, partly or in full, from the EC budget. The United Kingdom contributes to this reimbursement through its payments to the EC budget; as a net contributor the United Kingdom contributes more to the EC budget than it receives back.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give the total net cost to the Exchequer of support for agriculture and the common agricultural policy, after deducting any relevant refunds and grants received in each year since 1990-91; and if she will also show the amount per head of the population of the United Kingdom which this net figure represents.

Mr. Jack: Figures showing the cost to the Exchequer of total agricultural support and of the CAP in the United Kingdom, since 1990-91, globally and per head of population, are shown in the table. Expenditure on the CAP is funded in the first place by the Exchequer and subsequently reimbursed, partly or in full, from the EC budget. The United Kingdom contributes to this reimbursement through its payments to the EC budget; as a net contributor the United Kingdom contributes more to the EC budget than it receives back.

[3] The bulk of contributions (excluding duties and levies) are based on estimates of domestic GNP, agreed well before the start of the year in question. A difference invariably arises between estimates and outturn figures, and adjustments to contributions are made in following year to correct over/under payments; this leads to consequential correction to the abatement in the year after that. The net contribution is subject to considerable variation as a result of this process.

Food Prices

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average price paid to producers for (a) wheat, (b) beef, (c) milk, (d) eggs and (e) pork in 1960, 1979, 1980 and in each year since 1990, in actual prices, at constant 1960 prices and at constant 1990 prices.

Mr. Jack: The following table shows the average price paid to producers for wheat in the years 1960, 1979, 1980 and each year since 1990. The actual prices and the prices deflated by the retail prices index are given.

Food and Agricultural Statistics

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how her Department was represented at the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe study group meeting on food and agricultural statistics in Europe held in Geneva on 5 to 9 July.

Mr. Jack: The Ministry was represented by two officials from its economics and statistics group.

Fishing Offences

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the names, port of registry, offence and penalties imposed on Spanish-registered ships found guilty in British courts of fishery offences in each year since 1991.

Mr. Jack: Since 1991 there have been six successful prosecutions against Spanish-registered fishing vessels. The details are as follows:

Vessel	Port of Registry	Offence	Penalty
1992
Cantero Cuadrado	Gijon	Fishing without authority within British Fishery limits	£30,000 fine plus £60,000 for the value of the catch
Pakea Laurean	La Coruña	Fishing without authority in British Fishery limits	£20,000 fine plus £2,900 for the value of catch
		Use of undersize net	£2,000 fine and forfeiture of net
		Failure to complete logsheet	£1,000 fine
1993
Vieirasa Neuve	Vigo	Undersize net	£750 fine
		Illegal net construction	£750 fine
Home do Mar	Vigo	Retaining cod[1]	£225 fine
		Failure to record cod in logbook	£90 fine
		Retaining undersized hake	£135 fine
		Retaining undersized megrim	£360 fine and £2,000 for the value of the catch plus costs of £1,000
Capredi Dos	San Sebastian	Retaining haddock[1]	£450 fine
		Retaining cod[1]	£450 fine
		Retaining saithe[1]	£150 fine and £500 for the value of the fish plus costs of £200
Playa de Aldan	Vigo	Illegal net attachment	£480 fine and forfeiture of net
		Retention of undersized megrim	£480 fine plus £1,000 for the value of the fish
		Retention of cod[1]	£600 fine plus £482 for the value of the fish
		Failure to record cod in EC logbook	£600 fine
		Under recording of megrim	£300 fine
		Under recording of hake	£300 fine
		Under recording of anglers	£300 fine
		Other	£600 for costs

[1] Spain does not have quotas for these species in the area of capture.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is she will make it her policy to revoke or suspend British fishing licences on vessels found guilty in British or Irish courts of having a secret fish room, using undersized mesh nets, landing undersize fish or related offences.

Mr. Jack: Powers to revoke or suspend fishing licences under the Sea Fish (Conservation) Act 1992 can be used only in respect of breaches of licence conditions, for example, overfishing, or the failure to carry a logbook. The infringements mentioned in the question would not breach the conditions in any existing UK licences.

Agricultural Products

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the level of United Kingdom self-sufficiency in all agricultural products in 1979, 1985 and each year since 1990.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is set out in the following table.

Self-sufficiency

Northmoor Pumping Station

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what cost-benefit assessment of the proposal to replace the pumps at Northmoor pumping station has been carried out; what options were assessed and what was the benefit-cost ratio of each of the options.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 July 1993]: The National Rivers Authority Wessex region carried out a cost-benefit assessment of its proposals to replace the pumps at Northmoor pumping station in accordance with prevailing Ministry guidelines. The three main options considered by the NRA were: installation of single speed pumps in the existing station; construction of a new station; and installation of new variable speed pumps in the existing station. The implications of taking no action were also considered. The quantifiable benefit: cost ratios of the three options were as follows:

Single speed pumps in existing station	1·5:1
New station	1·2:1
Variable speed pumps in existing station	1·3:1

The last-mentioned option was the one put forward by the NRA as this gave the added gain of environmental benefits, by eliminating extreme fluctuations in controlled water levels.

Sugar

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the price in pound per tonne of raw bulk sugar in the United Kingdom in each month since August 1992.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 July 1993]: Raw beet sugar is not generally traded. Raw cane sugar is imported at about the intervention price for raw sugar, which was 439·40 ecu per tonne for 1992-93—equivalent to £412 at current exchange rates.

ENVIRONMENT

Partnerships for Change

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the initiatives launched and outcome of the Partnerships for Change conference held in Manchester on 20 to 22 September; and if he will place in the Library a copy of his speech made to the conference.

Mr. Yeo: We are preparing a Partnerships in Practice guide to reflect the exchange of experience which took place at the Partnerships for Change conference and to draw out lessons about achieving sustainable development through partnership. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has arranged for a copy of his speech to the conference to be placed in the Library.

Energy Conservation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representation Her Majesty's Government had at the symposium on the environmental benefits of energy conservation organised by the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe in Moscow on 20 to 24 September.

Mr. Yeo: Four representatives from the United Kingdom energy efficiency industry were present at the symposium in Moscow on 20 to 24 September. There was no official from Her Majesty's Government present, but officials from the Energy Efficiency Office, who have regularly attended steering committee meetings of the UNECE, kept in touch with the United Kingdom industry representatives.

Environment Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what matters were discussed and what decisions taken at the Environment Council meeting in Luxembourg on 5 October; and if he will indicate the policy proposals put forward by the United Kingdom and the votes taken on each proposal.

Mr. Yeo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave yesterday to my hon. Friend the Member for Windsor and Maidenhead (Mr. Trend).

Environment Management

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to meet the Engineering Employers Federation to discuss environmental management strategies.

Mr. Yeo: None, but my officials are in regular contact with the federation.

Environmental Assessment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what meetings he has had in 1993 with the Environmental Auditors Registration Association; and what further meetings are planned with the EARA and the Institute of Environmental Assessment.

Mr. Yeo: None, but my officials are in regular contact with both organisations.

Leasehold Reform

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the Advisory Service for Leaseholders seeking to enfranchise or extend their lease under the provisions of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993, to come into operation.

Sir George Young: The leasehold reform co-ordinating committee has now submitted firm proposals to me for a Leasehold Enfranchisement Advisory Service for England and Wales and I am urgently considering its request for Government financial assistance. I therefore hope to be able to make an announcement about the commencement of this service very shortly.

Transport and Security Services Division

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made towards establishing the transport and security services division of his Department as an executive agency.

Sir George Young: I am pleased to announce that the agency, which will be called Security Facilities Executive (SAFE), was established on 15 October 1993. It incorporates all the functions carried out by transport and security services division (TSSD) which comprised custody services, Government car service, interdispatch service, security furniture services and special services group. The divisional director, John King, has been appointed the chief executive following an open competition.

The aim and objectives of the agency are set our in a framework document, copies of which will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. By setting demanding and realistic targets each year, I will be encouraging SAFE to maintain and improve its existing standards of performance. I am confident that the agency will rise to the challenge and continue to enhance the value for money that it offers whilst maintaining its enviable standards of excellence.

For 1993-94, the following have been set for the agency:

Category	Measure	Target
Financial	Outturn on the vote	A surplus of £1·8 million
	Outturn on net running costs	A deficit of £1·1 million
	Outturn on cost recovery in accruals terms	99 per cent.
Efficiency	Unit costs	No increase in real terms
Quality of Service	Regular customer surveys	Average rating of "good" or higher
Environment	Vehicle fuel efficiency	Annual average of 24 miles per gallon

Recycling

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made as to the proportion of (a) plastics, (b) paper, (c) steel and (d) glass produced each year since 1980, which has subsequently been recycled.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 18 October 1993]: The following table, drawn mainly from the Department of the Environment's "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics", shows the known amounts recycled since 1980 (as a percentage of consumption):

per cent

	Plastics	Paper and Board	Steel Cans	Glass
1980	[1]—	29	—	2
1981	[1]—	28	—	3
1982	[1]—	27	—	4
1983	[1]—	25	—	7
1984	[1]—	26	—	9
1985	[1]—	27	—	13
1986	[1]—	27	—	12
1987	[1]—	26	—	14
1988	[1]—	26	8	16
1989	[1]—	27	8	17

Packaging

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures are being taken by his Department to encourage the use of reduced quantities of (a) metals, (b) plastic and (c) paper in packaging; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 18 October 1993]: Over the past two years the Government have been conducting intensive discussions with a range of industries, including the packaging industry, to see what measures can be taken to reduce unnecessary packaging and improve the recycling rates of different packaging materials.

On 27 July we invited all sections of the packaging industry—manufacturers and fillers of packaging and retailers—to draw up a plan for raising current levels of recovery to between 50 and 75 per cent. by the year 2000.

We are asking these businesses collectively to take their share of responsibility for what happens to packaging once it has served its original purpose, while at the same time minimising the use of packaging wherever possible and encouraging reuse wherever practicable.

We have set five objectives which any industry plan must meet:

First, there needs to be an effective organisation, spanning all the relevant business sectors, which can both draw up a plan and put it into action;

Secondly, there needs to be a commitment by business to meet the costs of new collection and processing capacity and of developing a mechanism for raising the necessary finances;

Thirdly, against the background of a build up in capacity to increase recovery levels to between 50 and 70 per cent. by the year 2000, to expand collection and processing capacity within the next year,

Fourthly, to encourage industry to increase demand for recycled material where it meets the appropriate standards;

Fifthly, to safeguard recycling infrastructure for plastic and paper and board, which are currently threatened by subsidised foreign imports.

We have invited leading figures in the industry to report back by the end of October on the action which they have taken to help collection and processing operations to continue, especially for waste paper, board and plastics. And we are asking them to present us with an effective plan for meeting all these objectives, before this Christmas.

Copies of two recent DOE press releases (Nos. 519 and 594) setting out our challenge to the packaging industry have been placed in the Library of the House.

Water Services

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when Her Majesty's Government intend to publish a response to the water regulator Ian Byatt's paper "Paying For Quality"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: In our document "Water Charges: the Quality Framework", my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have today responded to the Director General of Water Services' request for our perspective on the policy context of the review of water company price limits which he intends to complete next summer.

Our safety and environmental standards are already high, but it is right that where necessary they should be further improved to achieve sustainable use of our water. Our privatised companies are already investing £3 billion a year to this end. Their charges are low compared with elsewhere in Europe.

Charges will have to rise to finance further improvements. But they must also be sustainable. We expect that the water companies will continue to make significant efficiency improvements, and the law requires the Director General to be rigorous in identifying the scope for reduced costs.

But we must also strike the right balance between the pace of quality improvements and costs, so that people do not face excessive increases in bills in the short term. In Europe and at home, we have to ask whether our priorities are right, whether benefits justify costs, and whether today's consumers are being asked unnecessarily to pay for long-term benefits.

For our part, we shall look hard at costs in deciding how and when we place further obligations on water companies. We propose to make it a duty for the Environment Agency to do this. Meanwhile we expect the National Rivers Authority and the drinking water inspectorate to do so when they are not legally precluded from taking costs into account.

The Government are also inviting their EC partners to re-examine priorities, for example, in the detailed implementation of the urban waste water treatment directive, so as to focus on the most immediate environmental concerns. The European Commission has already begun a much-needed review of the drinking water directive and we welcome its assurance that its proposals will be fully costed in relation to the likely benefits.

The Director General sought certainty about the obligations that water companies would have to meet in the period 1995-2005. Such certainty facilitates efficiency and cost-reduction. But it is not reasonable to expect society to place itself under a 10-year moratorium on health, safety and environmental improvements: if, for example, a serious risk to health comes to light, we could not take immediate action. But price limits do not need to take account of possible obligations which have not yet been decided upon.

A copy of the response has been placed in the Library.

DEFENCE

Gulf Battle Honours

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) of 24 February, Official Report, columns 657-58, if he will make a statement as to which regiments and corps of the Army and squadrons of the RAF will be able to include the Gulf campaign in their battle honours.

Mr. Hanley: Her Majesty the Queen has graciously approved the award of the theatre honour "Gulf 1991" and the battle honours "Wadi al Batin" and "Western Iraq" to the Army regiments and corps listed. Her Majesty has also approved the emblazonment of the theatre honour "Gulf 1991" on the colours, standards, or guidons of those regiments and corps awarded this honour.

Her Majesty the Queen has also graciously approved the award of the battle honour "Gulf 1991" to the squadrons of the Royal Air Force listed. Squadrons which were involved in direct confrontation with the enemy and demonstrated gallantry and spirit under fire have been awarded the battle honour "Gulf 1991" with the right to emblazon the honour on their standards. Squadrons which operated in theatre and contributed to operations against the enemy have been awarded the battle honour "Gulf 1991" without the right to emblazon the honour on their standards.

Her Majesty the Queen has also graciously approved the retrospective award of the theatre honour "Falkland Islands 1982" to the Army Air Corps for its part in the Falklands campaign.

TRANSPORT

Manchester Airport Rail Link

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has had from the chairman of the Greater Manchester passenger transport authority in regard to the Manchester airport rail link-southern spur; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I have had a number of discussions with Councillor Clarke about the funding of this scheme. I understand that Manchester airport has now agreed to underwrite the expenditure needed for the scheme to go ahead.

M1/M62 Link Road

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the proposed M1/M62 link road.

Mr. MacGregor: Public consultation on proposals for an M1/M62 link road was held between February and June 1992. From the responses it became clear that earlier concern to achieve the economic benefits which were expected to derive from the introduction of a new road into the corridor was no longer a predominant local concern.

At the same time I have been making it clear that the road programme should, wherever possible, be concentrated on widening and improving the existing network rather than building new motorways. Each scheme has to be judged on its merits but here there is opportunity to pursue a solution which avoids driving a new route through green fields.

I have therefore decided not to proceed with development of plans for a new road but to investigate the possibilities for increasing the capacity of the relevant lengths of the two motorways.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when a start will be made on construction of the docklands light railway extension to Greenwich and Lewisham.

Sir George Young: I have been asked to reply.

The Department of the Environment is responsible for the docklands light railway. While the private sector has already shown a welcome interest in building and running the Lewisham extension, we must ensure that proposals are consistent with our manifesto pledge to consider the best means of privatising the DLR as a whole.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each relevant tax year the revenue he has derived from VAT relating to (a) building repairs, (b) non-domestic building and (c) civil engineering projects, with any convenient breakdown into category; and what is his estimate in each case of the consequential increase in price to the immediate client or consumer, and the approximate and total effect of such charges on (i) the retail price index and (ii) the rate of inflation.

Sir John Cope: When the tax regime for construction, buildings and land was revised on 1 April 1989 the increase in revenue was calculated to be £310 million in 1989-90 and £400 million in 1990-91. Since then no further revenue calculations have been made. The assumption made at the time was that changes in VAT would have been fully passed on to clients. Since the clients affected by the tax changes were businesses the direct effect on the RPI and therefore on the rate of inflation would have been negligible and in any case is not possible to calculate.

SCOTLAND

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the regional council directors of police and fire services to discuss the implications for police and fire services arising out of the reorganisation of Scottish local government; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 18 October 1993]: While my right hon. Friend has no immediate plans to meet officials of police and fire authorities to discuss the implications of local government reorganisation for these services, my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State has discussed the question of reorganisation with representatives of police authorities and forces at a meeting of the Police Advisory Board for Scotland. Scottish Office officials meet chief constables and firemasters regularly to discuss police and fire service matters. The existing number of police forces and fire brigades will be retained after reorganisation.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Security Equipment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the guidelines or regulations applying to imports and exports of electro shock equipment.

Mr. Needham: The only export regulation for which I am responsible which applies to what might be regarded as "electro shock" equipment is the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1992. Under head 5001 (d) export without a licence is prohibited in respect of portable anti-riot devices for administering an electric shock or an incapacitating substance, and specialised components therefor. Under head 5001 (f) there is a similar prohibition in respect of riot control vehicles which have been specially designed or modified to be electrified to repel boarders. So far as imports are concerned, any weapon which is designed or adapted to emit an electric shock against another person would be regarded as a prohibited weapon under section 5(1) (b) of the Firearms Acts 1968-1992. Import of such weapons is restricted to those persons legally authorised to hold them in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidelines or regulations are applicable to exporters in respect of (a) manufacture and export of dum dum bullets, (b) export of tear gas, (c) design and construction of prisons for overseas Governments, (d) security equipment such as vehicles for overseas Governments and (e) Frag 12 exploding ammunition; and what particular guidance is given in respect of (i) Israel, (ii) other middle east Governments, (iii) Pakistan and (iv) Thailand.

Mr. Needham: Under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1992, the export to any destination of ammunition, tear gas and certain vehicles and related equipment for military or paramilitary police use is prohibited without a licence from the Secretary of State. I have no responsibility for regulations in respect of the design and construction of prisons for overseas Governments, other than where goods controlled by the order are to be exported from the United Kingdom as part of such projects. In terms of these export controls my Department gives no specific guidance in respect of the countries mentioned by the hon. Member: guidance in respect of weapons of mass destruction is available in a booklet "Non-Proliferation Controls", a copy of which is in the Library of both Houses. Each export licence application is considered on its merits.

Compliance Cost Assessments

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what arrangements have been made to publish compliance cost assessments to show the cost impact on business of complying with proposals for legislation.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: It has been the Government's standard practice since 1 April to prepare and publish compliance cost assessments (CCA) for all legislative proposals which impact on business. We have now agreed formal procedures with the House authorities for doing so as follows:

In the case of primary legislation the CCA will form part of the explanatory memorandum to the Bill.

In the case of statutory instruments laid in draft before the House the CCA will form part of the published text of the draft instrument as a separate annex.

In the case of statutory instruments made without having been laid in draft the CCA will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses when the instrument is laid after having been made and a note that a CCA is available and where it can be obtained from included in the explanatory note.

In the case of private Members' Bills, where the Government consider it is appropriate to prepare a CCA it will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

In the case of private Bills the Government are still considering how the system can be extended to such Bills.

Patent Office

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the arrangements he made for in-house bids for the market-testing programme at the Patent Office.

Mr. McLoughlin: The terms of reference of the market test were set out in a notice to all staff on 6 November 1992, following consultation with the local trade unions. this drew specific attention to the opportunity for making in-house bids.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Redundant Churches

Mr Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will enable denominations to dispose of redundant places of worship to suitable charities for less than full consideration.

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend has today made a direction to this effect under section 4(11) of the Redundant Churches and Other Religious Buildings Act 1969 in favour of the Friends of Friendless Churches. He made a similar direction in May in favour of the Historic Chapels Trust. Copies of the directions have been placed in the Library and I will arrange for this to be done also for any further such directions that he may make.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Mr Spring: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the annual report and accounts for the Veterinary Medicines Directorate is due to be published.

Mrs Gillian Shepherd: The Veterinary Medicines Directorate annual report and accounts for 1992-93 was published on 29 July 1993. Copies are available in the House Library.

The report charts the continuing progress and success of the directorate as a next steps agency, and I would like to congratulate the chief executive and his staff on their considerable achievements during the year.

Habitat Creation Schemes

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if land put into habitat creation schemes can count towards set-aside quotas.

Mr. Jack: Current EC rules for the arable area payments scheme do not allow land withdrawn from production under any other scheme to count towards a producer's set-aside obligation. However, we are pressing for the rules to be changed to allow arable land which is in future withdrawn from production under agri-environment or forestry schemes to count towards set-aside. This would include land entered into the proposed 20-year habitat scheme and the proposed new nitrate-sensitive areas scheme, as well as the farm woodland premium scheme.

EDUCATION

Centre for Young Musicians

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 16 July, Official Report, column 673, what steps he is taking to ensure that children from all inner London boroughs have equal access to the Centre for Young Musicians regardless of parental means.

Mr. Forth: The Department is supporting the central costs of the Centre for Young Musicians at a cost of £100,000 a year for the years 1993-1996. The issue of access is a matter for the centre, relevant local education authorities, self-governing schools and city technology colleges, and parents.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 19 October.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 19 October.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he received from Mr. Vuk Draskovic during their recent meeting on the question of (a) sanctions against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and (b) Kosovo and its status as part of Serbia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary and I saw Mr. Draskovic during his visit. There was an exchange of views at both meetings about matters relating to the former Yugoslavia, including Kosovo and the effect of sanctions on Serbia and Montenegro.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what basis Her Majesty's Government issued an invitation to Mr. Vuk Draskovic to visit the United Kingdom recently; in what capacity Mr. Draskovic was invited; what was the cost to United Kingdom public expenditure of the visit; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Mr. Draskovic was invited to the United Kingdom in his capacity as leader of the Serbian Renewal Movement (SPO). This was an officially sponsored visit which included Mrs. Draskovic and his private secretary, who is also an SPO deputy. Costs for the visit, excluding air fares which are yet to be finalised, come to £5,688.26.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how often the British embassy in Belgrade checks the purity of tap water; what is the reason for these checks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The British embassy in Belgrade does not carry out tests on the purity of tap water, but consults the Canadian and United States embassies, which co-ordinate purity reports from the local department of public health. On every occasion these reports have indicated that the water is drinkable.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what precautions British citizens living in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia are advised to take to avoid hazards that arise out of the consumption of tap water contaminated as a result of the breakdown in purification processes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: None. The British embassy in Belgrade assesses that local water purification processes are functioning normally and has therefore issued no advice to British citizens.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans Her Majesty's Government have to invite elected members of the Opposition or Government of Yugoslavia to Britain in an official capacity.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We hope that the Montenegrin Foreign Minister, Mr. Miodrag Lekic, will pay a short visit to London on 24 and 25 October. There are no plans at present for further visits.

Council of Europe

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the issues discussed and decisions taken at the Council of Europe Special Assembly held in Vienna in early October; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the United Kingdom submission to the Vienna meeting.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The agenda for the Council of Europe summit meeting in Vienna on 8 to 9 October had two broad themes: (I) The role of the Council of Europe in the new Europe and (II) action relating to the strengthening of democracy, respect for human rights and the rule of law.

I shall arrange to place in the Library a copy of the speech made by my right honourable noble and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor who led the British delegation.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on issues discussed and matters decided at the annual conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna, in regard to nuclear safeguards and proliferation; and if he will place in the Library a copy of the United Kingdom documents submitted to the meeting.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The general conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency had a wide-ranging agenda covering all its activities. The Conference passed resolutions on a number of matters relating to safeguards and non-proliferation including the implementation of the safeguards agreement between the agency and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the implementation of United Nations Security Council resolutions 687, 707 and 715 relating to Iraq. A copy of the statement delivered to the plenary by the United Kingdom representative has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response Her Majesty's Government have made to the proposals put forward by President Clinton on 27 September concerning the halting by the acknowledged nuclear weapons states of further production and stockpiling of plutonium and highly enriched uranium for military purposes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A preliminary meeting has been held at official level with the United States at which they set out their proposal. We shall naturally wish to consider very carefully the implications for our nuclear deterrent of the proposal for a cut-off convention. But we recognise the potentially valuable contribution which a multilateral convention prohibiting the production of plutonium and highly enriched uranium for explosive purposes could make to non-proliferation, and we will want to explore these potential benefits fully and positively in our approach to the issue. We are hopeful of being able to work towards a multilateral agreement of the kind proposed by the United States.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response Her Majesty's Government have made to the conduct by China of a nuclear test on 5 October.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Chinese nuclear test on October 5 confirms our belief that the most effective way of restraining nuclear testing is through negotiated and verifiable agreement. We have made clear we do not believe the Chinese test necessarily clouds the prospect for a successful conclusion to comprehensive test ban negotiations, in which we shall seek to play a full and constructive part.

Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council held on 4 and 5 October.

Mr. Hurd: I attended the Foreign Affairs Council on 4 October. My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs also attended.

The Council discussed the Presidency's proposal for a new inter-institutional agreement (IIA) on budget discipline. After addressing the concerns of several delegations, they reached a favourable opinion on the text and joint declarations, and agreed further Council statements. The IIA will be submitted to ECOFIN for confirmation of the Council's agreement.

The Council reached general agreement on detailed arrangements to allow citizens of the union living in a member state of which they are not a national to vote and stand in European elections under the same conditions as nationals of that member state. These arrangements will be finally approved once the Maastricht treaty enters into force.

Sir Leon Brittan reported on his discussions in Washington on 27 September and on progress in the Uruguay round negotiations in Geneva. The Council discussed in detail a number of the non-agricultural dossiers in the negotiations, including textiles, subsidies, steel, civil aircraft, services, including audio-visual services, and the proposed Multilateral Trade Organisation. The Council agreed that the Commission's negotiating position took account of member states' concerns, and invited the Commission to continue with the negotiations. The Council also discussed the Community's trade policy instruments—the Commission is to make proposals for speeding up and making more transparent anti-dumping and countervailing procedures.

Lord Owen and Mr. Stoltenberg briefed Ministers on latest developments in former Yugoslavia following the Bosnian Parliament's rejection of the peace plan. Ministers agreed that the EC should urge all the parties to return to the negotiating table, while preserving those elements of the peace plan already agreed. Ministers also discussed Community assistance to the middle east peace process, on the basis of Commission proposals for a package of medium-term assistance to the region and for an updated agreement with Israel. Ministers agreed that both proposals should be remitted for expert-level study.

The Council discussed the Commission's opinions on the applications of Malta and Cyprus to join the Community. The Council broadly endorsed the opinions' conclusions, and in particular the Commission's plans to begin talks with Cyprus and Malta to help them prepare for accession negotiations.

The Council again considered the draft regulation on dual-use goods—those goods which could have either a civilian or a military purpose. Ministers reiterated their wish to see progress made which accommodated member states' concerns, and asked officials to undertake further work.

Ministers signed new association agreements with the Czech Republic and Slovakia. These replace the association agreement signed with the Czech and Slovak Federal Republic in December 1991.

The situation in Russia was also discussed, and the Council issued a statement of support for President Yeltsin.

The Commission presented a paper on the Community's future relations with Switzerland. It was agreed that this would be discussed at the next Foreign Affairs Council in November.

Meetings were held with Austria, Finland, Norway and Sweden. The meeting registered agreement on a range of issues and took stock of progress so far. There will be further ministerial meetings with all four applicants next month.

Ministers also confirmed their decision made informally in New York earlier in the week in response to Nelson Mandela's call for the easing of sanctions, to lift some sanctions against South Africa. The Community will keep remaining sanctions under review.

The Commission formally presented to Ministers the first draft mandate for negotiations with African, Caribbean and Pacific countries on the mid-term review of the Lomé convention, which governs aid and trade with much of the developing world. The Community will consider its position over the next few months, before entering negotiations with the beneficiary countries in early 1994.

The Council also approved the Commission's negotiating mandate for an EC trade and co-operation agreement with Vietnam.

The Council agreed arrangements for publishing Council votes to follow up the Edinburgh European Council's decisions on openness. Specifically, the Council decided, by seven votes to five—United Kingdom, Belgium, Denmark, Luxembourg and the Netherlands—on a procedure which requires that decisions to publish are proposed by a member state and that a simple majority is required to block publication.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

12. Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of people becoming unemployed return to employment within a month, three months, and six months, according to the latest available figures.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Of those becoming claimant unemployed about a quarter leave unemployment within a month, almost half within three months and nearly two thirds within six months. The majority leaving claimant unemployment go into jobs.

17. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of (a) men and (b) women registered as unemployed in the Greater London area on 1 October.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Claimant unemployment figures for 14 October will be published on 18 November.

Jobplan Workshops

14. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the operation of jobplan workshops.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The jobplan programme was launched in March of this year. By the 24 September 131,842 people had completed a jobplan workshop. More than 90 per cent. are leaving with a positive course of action to follow.

Enterprise Allowance

15. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people benefited from the enterprise allowance in 1992-93; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The enterprise allowance scheme was replaced by the business start-up scheme in April 1991. In Great Britain, in 1992-93 some 41,000 people were helped to start a business.

Public Sector Recruitment

16. Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to rationalise recruitment services in jobs in the public sector.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department has no plans for such rationalisation at present.

Manufacturing Industry, Wales

18. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people were employed in manufacturing industry in Wales in 1983 and at the latest available date.

Miss Widdecombe: There were 213,000 employees in employment in manufacturing industry in Wales in June 1983 and 203,000 in June 1993.

Wage Levels

19. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many workers in the east midlands earn half or less than half of the male median wage.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We estimate that there are about 288,000 such workers.

Working Week

20. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what recent representations his Department has received on the EC proposals for a 48-hour week.

Mr. David Hunt: Since the Social Affairs Council reached a common position on the working time directive in June, my Department has received many representations welcoming the important improvements that we have secured, while supporting the Government's decision to challenge the basis of the directive in the European Court of Justice.

Jobclubs

21. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to extend the jobclub scheme in the north West; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are currently 188 jobclubs in the North West. The number of people helped through jobclubs in the North West in 1992-93 was 31,530. There are 35,235 jobclub places available in 1993-94. Plans have not yet been made for 1994-95.

Casual Workers

22. Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many casual workers he estimates there are in each of the standard regions of the United Kingdom.

Miss Widdecombe: The Labour Force Survey provides quarterly estimates of the numbers of employees in casual employment. The latest available figures are shown in the following table:

Number of employees in casual jobs Spring 1993
(not seasonally adjusted)

Thousands

Standard Region	Casual employment
South East	95
Greater London	29
Rest of South East	67
East Anglia	12
South West	21
West Midlands	28

Northern Region

23. Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to increase employment in the Northern region.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department's aim is to promote a free and flexible labour market to encourage employment in the Northern region as elsewhere. The Employment Service and the five Northern training and enterprise councils deliver a wide range of employment, enterprise and training programmes to help unemployed people in the Northern region find the best and quickest route back to employment.

Equal Opportunities

24. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what progress he has made on achieving equality of opportunity in employment regardless of gender or ethnic background.

Miss Widdecombe: The Government are committed to equality of opportunity. The best employers already recognise the case for employing a work force which reflects the composition of the wider community. The Department continues to encourage all employers to make full use of the skills and potential of all sections of the working population.

Company Agreements

25. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from trade unions concerning decisions of major firms to abrogate previous agreements.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government believe that employers must be free to decide, in the light of the circumstances and needs of their business, whether to bargain with a trade union. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received a number of representations on this subject. We remain convinced that the voluntary approach is best.

School Leavers

26. Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many 1993 school leavers within the Greater London area are currently unemployed; how many 1992 school leavers are still unemployed; and what percentage each represents of the total number of school leavers each year.

Miss Widdecombe: Information is available only for 1992 and shows that while 7 per cent. of 16 and 17-year-old school leavers in Greater London became unemployed, more than 90 per cent. went into further education or employment.

Training for Work

27. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a further statement on the implementation of training for work.

Miss Widdecombe: Training for work began on 29 March and was warmly welcomed by TECs for the flexibilities that it gives them in helping long-term unemployed people. The programme provides attractive training opportunities and at July there were 137,000 taking part.

28. Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many women workers in the west midlands earn half or less than half of the male median wage.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We estimate that there are around 245,000 such workers.

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the training for work programme; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The national follow-up survey shows significant increases in the proportions of employment training leavers going into jobs and gaining qualifications. These improved results, together with the additional flexibilities we have built into training for work, show that our adult measures are effective.

Sellafield

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the latest health and safety report on Sellafield.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The latest report published on health and safety at Sellafield was about an investigation into a higher than normal aerial discharge of radioactivity from the B204 ventilation stack. The report concludes that the potential doses to the public were very low.

Employment Service

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has completed his review of the Employment Service's framework document; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The Employment Service has been a next steps agency since 2 April 1990. My Department recently completed a review of the agency's existing framework document, in accordance with the Government's commitment to evaluate next steps agencies. The new framework document was published on 1 October and I placed copies in the Library on that date.

Social Affairs Council

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EC Social Affairs Council held on 12 October.

Mr. David Hunt: I and the Minister of State for Employment attended the meeting of the Labour and Social Affairs Council on 12 October in Luxembourg.

The main discussion took place on the draft directive on the protection of young workers. I made it clear that, while the United Kingdom already has strict regulation to protect the health and safety of young workers, the Government could not accept unnecessary restrictions which would prevent the continuation of well-established and harmless patterns of work for young people below minimum school leaving age such as paperboys and girls. Nor could we accept special restrictions on the working hours of 16 and 17-year-olds which were not related to genuine health and safety needs.

In the event, the Council reached agreement at a political level on significant changes to the draft directive to reflect the United Kingdom's concerns. The United Kingdom Government will not be required to implement key parts of articles 8 and 9 of the draft directive dealing with daily and weekly hours of work, and restrictions on night work, for 16 and 17-year-olds for a period of four years after the directive is implemented—that is, a total of six years from final adoption. This exemption is renewable at the end of this period by a Council decision on the basis of a report from the Commission. The agreement reached also ensures that young people below school leaving age can continue, as now, to undertake light work such as newspaper deliveries from the age of 13.

This settlement is a satisfactory one for the United Kingdom, reflecting recognition by the Community of our high standard of health and safety provision overseen by the Health and Safety Commission and our particular national traditions.

The Council also discussed the draft directive on European Works Councils for which unanimity is required. We made it clear that the United Kingdom Government would, if necessary, vote against the text under discussion which is opposed by employers throughout Europe as being unnecessary, unworkable and damaging to European competitiveness. The Belgian Presidency noted that the draft directive would be taken forward by the other 11 member states under the social protocol provisions of the Maastricht treaty once these are in force.

There was also a brief discussion on the draft directive on non-standard employment, which requires unanimity. It was apparent that a number of member states had problems with the existing text and the Presidency decided that further consideration needed to be given to the draft directive before it could be further considered by the Council.

Finally, Commissioner Flynn made a brief presentation on the contents of his forthcoming Green Paper on the Future of European Social Policy and outlined a Commission proposal for a decision on a programme to combat social exclusion.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Employment Rights

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further steps he will adopt to create equality of opportunity between the two main religious traditions in employment in the light of the report from the census 1991.

Mr. Atkins: Equality of opportunity in employment is a central objective of the Fair Employment Act (NI) 1989 which established the Fair Employment Commission and the Fair Employment Tribunal. A comprehensive review of employment equality is to be undertaken in 1995 by the Central Community Relations Unit and the consultation process has already begun. It would be premature to draw firm conclusions on the findings of the religion report of the census 1991 which are still being analysed.

Eastern Health and Social Services Board

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total expenditure, less capital expenditure, of the Eastern health and social services board in each of the past five years; and what proportion of this expenditure was for management and administration in each year.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Year	Total revenue expenditure £	Administration as percentage of revenue expenditure
1987-88	391,887,667	4·76
1988-89	427,129,689	4·80
1989-90	451,324,493	5·15
1990-91	503,603,666	5·59
1991-92	539,250,381	6·55

Roads

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to improve the roads structure in the constituency of South Down with particular reference to the A class roads and the B8—Castlewellan to Newry road; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: In addition to a substantial programme of maintenance work, a number of minor improvement schemes will be completed on the A2, A22, A24, A25 and B8 during the 1993-94 and 1994-95 financial years. Work on the Church street-Scotch street scheme in Downpatrick is currently programmed to start in 1997-98 financial year subject to the completion of the statutory processes and the availability of the necessary funds.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Category A Prisoners

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what changes have been made to the written criteria for selecting prisoners for security category A since 1991; and on what grounds the criteria have been changed.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

' Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about changes to the criteria for selecting prisoners for security category A since 1991.

The Hadfield/Lakes report of the security audit of custody arrangements for category A prisoners and of an inquiry into DOC1 division noted that only some 20 per cent. of prisoners notified from prisons to Prison Service headquarters as potential category A prisoners were subsequently designated category A. The report concluded that Prison Service headquarters were applying a rigorous selection process but too many prisoners were being submitted by prisons for consideration. They recommended that the referral criteria be reviewed.

This recommendation was accepted. Fresh guidance has been included in the Prison Service manual on security to assist prison staff to identify more readily and selectively those prisoners who, because of the nature and circumstances of their offences or alleged offences, need to be notified to headquarters for consideration for category A.

Prisons

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to take to establish a more austere regime in prisons.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Prison Service remains committed to the policy on regimes set out in the White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice". Our aims are to require sentenced prisoners to participate in a demanding, constructive and disciplined regime centred on work training and essential education; to challenge prisoners to confront their offending behaviour and to work with them to reduce the likelihood of their re-offending.

The programme of work to achieve these objectives set out in the corporate and business plans for the Prison Service, copies of which are in the House of Commons library. These include substantial development of regime activities and a continuing programme to improve the physical conditions in prisons.

New Prisons

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) where the six new prisons, recently announced at Blackpool, will be located;

(2) what is his timetable for opening six new prisons; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Alun Michael, dated October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the proposals to build six new prisons and the new prison building programme.

The six new prisons to which the Home Secretary referred on 6 October are in addition to the current new prison building programme. The construction of the first two of these prisons was announced in the Autumn statement last year. On 2 September 1993 the Home Secretary announced that the design, construction, management and potential financing of the prisons would be contracted out to the private sector. I expect that the further four prisons which were announced on 6 October will be procured in the same way.

Sites at Fazakerley in Merseyside and at Bridgend in South Wales have been identified for the first two prisons. The proposal to build a prison on the Fazakerley site is the subject of a non-statutory public local inquiry beginning on 26 October 1993. We will be shortly submitting to the local planning authority a Notice of Proposed Development seeking outline planning clearance to build a prison on the site at Bridgend. Work is currently in progress to identify suitable sites for the other four prisons.

If we obtain planning clearance for new prisons on the sites of Fazakerley and Bridgend we expect that the two prisons would open in 1997-98. It is too early to indicate a timetable for the other four prisons.

It is also too early to indicate the cost of six prisons which will be assessed on the basis of value for money obtained for the complete financial package comprising both capital and operating costs. Outline proposals and expressions of interest in the first two prisons will be invited shortly.

Twenty new prisons have opened since 1983 and Doncaster prison is due to open next year. The attached table shows the total cost of constructing each establishment and the main construction firm.

Prison	Location	Date of opening	Estimated total cost (includes capital costs, claims and property services agency's resource costs) (£K)	Main construction contractor

Parish Constables

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for implementing his proposal for parish constables; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Charles Wardle: It is our intention that 20 pilot schemes should be up and running by Christmas. Costs in this financial year should be de minimis. No estimate can be made about future costs at this stage.

Police Paperwork

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for the implementation of each of his 16 recommendations into cutting police paperwork.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend will publish the consultants' report and recommendations on 20 October. He is keen to see the recommendations in this area implemented as quickly as possible and expects to see substantial progress made in a matter of months. A fuller and more detailed timetable for implementation will require wider discussion between criminal justice system agencies.

DNA Testing

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for implementing his proposal for new rules on DNA samples; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend intends to introduce legislation to implement these proposals as soon as a suitable opportunity arises. The timetable thereafter will depend upon the speed of progress which such legislation makes. It is too soon to offer reliable estimates of the costs and savings to which the proposals will give rise.

Cautioning

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give details of his plans to limit repeat cautioning; what rules will apply; what type of offences will be affected; and what criteria will govern decisions by the Crown Prosecution Service in relation to prosecution or caution;

(2) what is his timetable for implementing his proposal on repeat cautioning and cautioning for indictable offences; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean: I intend to publish supplementary guidance to the police later this month and to allow interested parties two months in which to comment on it. I shall send a copy of the draft guidance to the hon. Member.

The guidance will leave the police with their existing discretion on whether to caution or prosecute, but it will strongly discourage, save in exceptional circumstances, the use of cautions for the most serious offences or for offenders who have been cautioned previously. In cases of doubt, it will continue to be open to the police to seek advice from the Crown Prosecution Service, whose decision whether prosecution is warranted will be governed by the code for Crown prosecutors.

It is too soon to offer a reliable estimate of the cost implications of these changes.

Police Bail

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his timetable for implementing the proposal for police to be allowed to attach conditions to police bail; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95;

(2) what is his timetable for implementing his proposal for automatic custody for anyone convicted of serious offences who is subsequently accused of the same category of crime; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95;

(3) what is his timetable for implementing a new power of arrest for breach of police bail; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95;

(4) what is his timetable for implementation of the proposal to allow courts to revoke bail when new information comes to light; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean: We intend to introduce legislation to implement these proposals as soon as a suitable opportunity arises. The timetable thereafter will depend upon the speed of progress which such legislation makes. It is too soon to offer a reliable estimate of the costs and savings to which the proposal will give rise.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the White Paper on the criminal injuries compensation scheme.

Mr. Maclean: It is intended that a White Paper setting out the Government's plans for the new tariff scheme will be published later this year.

Community Sentence Review

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to announce the conclusions of the review on community sentences.

Mr. Maclean: This review, originally expected to be concluded at the end of 1994—beginning of 1995, has been expedited for completion by summer 1994. In the meantime, further guidance will be issued to the probation service as and when conclusions are reached on significant matters which need not await full formal publication of the revised standards themselves.

Safer Cities Project

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to announce his decision on the next phase of the safer cities project; and how much it is intended to give to each of the cities named in the new phase.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Ten local authority areas have been shortlisted for the first group of new projects in the second phase of the safer cities programme:

Blackburn
Burnley
Greenwich
Lambeth
Leeds
Manchester
Newcastle
Merthyr Tydfil
Plymouth
Sheffield

We plan to set up at least six new projects before the end of 1993-94.

Organisations with appropriate experience have been invited to bid to manage two or more of these projects. Tenders were invited in response to this invitation on 5 October and are currently being evaluated. My right hon. and learned Friend expects to be in a position to announce decisions about the areas chosen and the successful contractors to run the projects before the end of the year.

The running costs of individual projects will be met by payments to contractors under the terms of the invitation to tender and are subject to the outcome of the evaluation. The size of the grant budget available to these projects for local crime prevention activity has not yet been determined.

Squatters

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for implementing his proposal for faster court proceedings for evicting squatters; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean: I intend to introduce legislation to implement this proposal as soon as a suitable opportunity arises. The timetable thereafter will depend upon the speed of progress which such legislation makes. It is too soon to offer reliable estimates of the costs and savings to which the proposal will give rise.

Terrorism

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his timetable for implementing his proposal for a new offence of gathering information for terrorist purposes; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95;

(2) what is his timetable for implementing his proposal for a new offence of possession in relation to terrorist activities; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Howard: I intend to take the earliest legislative opportunity to create new offences of collecting information likely to be useful to terrorists and of possessing items intended for terrorist purposes. There are no resource implications for this financial year. Thereafter they are likely to be minimal.

Victims of Crime

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for implementing each of the 11 recommendations of the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice on victims of crime; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean In its report the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice made 19 recommendations to help victims and other witnesses, 11 of which were specifically directed at government and have been accepted.

Some of those recommendations relate to measures which are already in place or are being implemented, while others may require legislation. It is accordingly too soon to set a timetable for implementation or to offer reliable estimates of costs.

New Criminal Legislation

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for ending the presumption in favour of bail for anyone accused of offending on bail; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean: I intend to introduce legislation to implement a proposal removing the presumption of a right to bail for those charged with serious offences which appear to have been committed while on bail as soon as suitable opportunity arises. The timetable thereafter will depend on the speed of progress which such legislation makes. It is too soon to offer a reliable estimate of the costs and savings to which the proposal will give rise.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his timetable for allowing retrials where juries have been nobbled; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95;

(2) what is his timetable for implementing a new offence of witness intimidation; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95;

(3) what is his timetable for barring those on bail from serving on juries; and what is his estimate of the cost of this proposal in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean: We intend to introduce legislation to implement these proposals as soon as a suitable opportunity arises. The timetable thereafter will depend upon the speed of progress which such legislation makes. It is too soon to offer reliable estimates of the costs and savings to which the proposals will give rise.

Right to Silence

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for abolishing the right to silence; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean: We intend to introduce legislation to allow adverse inferences to be drawn from a suspect's silence as soon as an opportunity arises. The timetable thereafter will depend upon the speed of progress which such legislation makes. It is too soon to offer reliable estimates of any costs and savings to which this proposal may give rise.

Young Offenders

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many additional secure places he intends to provide (a) for 15 and 16-year-olds on remand in fulfilment of his predecessors promise in February 1991, (b) for 15 and 16-year-olds on remand in addition to (a), (c) for 15 and 16-year-olds sent to secure accommodation by a court following conviction, (d) for 10 to 14-year-olds on remand, (e) for 10 to 14-year-olds following conviction other than those sentenced to a secure training order and (f) for 12 to 14-year-olds made subject to a secure training order.

Mr. Maclean: The provision of local authority secure accommodation is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. A programme is currently under way to create an additional 60 to 65 places in local authority secure units. This represents the number of new places estimated to be necessary to end the remands of 15 and 16-year-old boys to Prison Service establishments. The estimate is being kept under review.

Courts have no powers to send 15 or 16-year-old juveniles directly to local authority secure accommodation on conviction—although, if the appropriate criteria are met, they may send boys in this age group directly to young offender institutions run by the Prison Service, for whom no additional accommodation is presently required. Similarly, they have no powers to direct the removal of 10 to 14-year-olds to secure accommodation either on remand or following conviction.

The intention is that places in which the custodial element of the proposed secure training order for 12 to 14-year-olds should be served should be provided by agreements with suitable public, voluntary or private organisations. No final decision has been taken on the number of such places to be provided.

Parish Constables

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will outline his job description for a parish constable; what qualifications will be required; and what is the proposed level of pay for the job.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Pilot schemes currently under development will be based on the two most common "blueprints" for parish constables which the publish have suggested. In the "parish special constable" scheme, the parish special constable, like other special constables, will have the power and authority of a police constable and will be expected to provide assistance to the regular police. He or she will be under the operational control of the chief constable, but the parish or local council—or councils, if groups of small parishes are involved—will be consulted on some of the constable's duties through a service agreement between the parish and the chief constable. At this stage we do not propose that the selection criteria, training arrangements and employment conditions of the parish special constables will differ from those already provided for special constables.

In the "parish warden" scheme local parish or town councils will be asked to authorise a volunteer to assist both the community and the police by dispensing crime prevention advice, encouraging local watch schemes, and by acting as a channel for information, warnings and advice. The duties and qualifications of parish wardens will be resolved through discussion between the parish, the volunteer, and the local people.

Stop and Search

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for implementing his proposal for new stop and search powers for the police to stop terrorists; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Howard: I intend to seek new powers for the police to stop and search vehicles for counter-terrorist purposes at the earliest legislative opportunity. There are no cost implications for this financial year. Thereafter they would depend upon how the powers were exercised by the police but are unlikely to be significant within the overall budget of police forces.

Criminal Cases Review Authority

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for the setting up of a Criminal Cases Review Authority; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean: The Government have accepted the recommendation of the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice for the establishment of a Criminal Cases Review Authority. We have put in hand the detailed preparatory work which will be necessary before the new system can be put into place. At this stage, however, it is not possible to offer a precise timetable for the introduction of the new arrangements.

The costs of a new authority are one of the matters which are still being considered and it would be premature to offer an estimate of the financial resources that might be required in a particular financial year.

Police Bail

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the type of condition he intends police may apply to police bail.

Mr. Maclean: Under the Bail Act 1976 a court may attach conditions to the grant of bail if it considers that is necessary in order to ensure that, for example, a defendant surrenders to custody, does not commit an offence while on bail, and does not interfere with witnesses or otherwise obstruct the course of justice. I intend the police to be able to attach conditions for similar purposes to bail which they grant. I do not consider it appropriate to specify the precise nature of such conditions, which will vary according to the circumstances of the individual case.

Prisons (Drug Tests)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for introducing urine testing for drugs in prison; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 19 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about drug urine testing in prisons.

Detailed plans, including a timetable, for the introduction of drug urine testing are still being developed. There has been no estimate of the cost.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the ruling that people who have had previous convictions for unrelated matters can have their award for compensation from the criminal injuries compensation scheme reduced or refused.

Mr. Maclean: Details of the rules of the new tariff scheme will be given in a White Paper to be published later in the year. It is expected that the basic rules for eligibility will remain largely as before.

Lenient Sentences

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for extending the Attorney-General's right of appeal for lenient sentences; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year and in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean: We shall lay the necessary order before Parliament at the earliest appropriate opportunity. Our preliminary estimate is that the number of additional cases likely to justify referral to the Court of Appeal, and any additional costs, will be low.

Drugs

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the findings of research carried out for his Department by Sheffield university on drug use by young people.

Mr. Maclean: We intend to publish the report by Sheffield university by the end of this year.

Trespassers

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his timetable for implementing his proposal for new powers for the police to stop trespassers disrupting lawful activities; and what is his estimate of the cost in this financial year.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We intend to introduce legislation to implement these proposals as soon as a suitable opportunity arises. The timetable thereafter will depend upon the speed of progress which such legislation makes. It is too soon to offer reliable estimates of the costs and savings to which the proposals will give rise.

Rape Trials

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when, and through what process, he intends to abolish the judge's mandatory warning to juries in rape trials about the truthfulness of women; and from what date he intends the changes to apply.

Mr. Maclean: We intend to introduce legislation to abolish this requirement as soon as a suitable opportunity arises. The commencement date will, of course, depend upon the progress which such legislation makes.

British Citizenship

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to grant British citizenship to the wives and widows of service men who served in the defence of Hong Kong during the second world war; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have no power to grant British citizenship to this group of people unless they meet the residence requirements of the British Nationality Act 1981 or quality under the Hong Kong selection scheme; and I do not think that I would be justified in bringing forward legislation to dispense with the normal statutory provisions in their case. The Government have on many occasions given an assurance that these wives and widows may come to the United Kingdom with a view to settlement at any time. I readily repeat that assurance. It would then be open to them to apply in the normal way to be registered or naturalised as British citizens when they met the statutory requirements.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has as to the percentage of gross domestic product spent on pensions in each EC country.

Mr. Hague: The latest information available on pensions expenditure in each member state of the EC is contained in the Eurostat publication "Digest of Statistics on Social Protection in Europe, Volumn 1: Old Age". This publication covers the years 1980-1988 and covers questions of definition and incomplete information which are important in interpreting the data.

The Eurostat study "Social Protection Expenditure and Receipts 1980-1991" includes revised and more recent information on that part of social protection expenditure which is directed to the elderly, but it does not allow the identification of expenditure on pensions.

Copies of both publications are in the House of Commons Library.

National Insurance

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps will be taken to ensure that the national insurance scheme will provide the same range of benefits to widowers and widows; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: We have no plans to extend the current widows' benefits provisions to widowers, but we will keep the position under review.

Benefit Investigations

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants have had their benefit stopped for investigations; and how many were subsequently reinstated in each year since 1987.

Mr. Hague: The administration of benefit fraud is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. I understand that he has written to the hon. Member about this matter.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Mike Gapes, dated 12 August 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking, how many claimants have had their benefit stopped for investigations; and how many were subsequently reinstated in each year since 1987.

I regret that on this particular occasion I am unable to answer your question as the Sector Fraud organisation does not record information in this way.

I am able to say, however, that it is not general practice to "stop" a customer's benefit until it is certain that it is correct to do so. The decision to withdraw benefit has to be made by an Adjudication Officer and, as such, is not within the remit of any officer connected with the investigation of alleged fraud.

I must also point out that only a very small percentage of the Benefit Agency's customers will ever have any dealings with a member of the Sector Fraud organisation as the vast majority of customers are honest and trustworthy.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many invalidity benefit claims were referred to the Benefits Agency medical service less than six months after winning an appeal against disqualification in (a) April, May and June 1992 and (b) April, May and June 1993;

(2) how many invalidity benefit recipients who were carrying out voluntary work activities were referred to the Benefits Agency medical service in April, May and June, broken down by (a) numbers disqualified and (b) numbers found incapable of work.

Mr. Scott: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Supplementary Benefits

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what savings his Department has made as a result of the abolition of single payments in the former supplementary benefit system, for each year since 1988.

Mr. Scott: The supplementary benefit scheme was replaced in 1988 by income support and the social fund. The different nature and scope of the schemes means that direct comparisons cannot be made between them.

No precise estimate of any savings resulting from the abolition of supplementary benefit single payments can therefore be made.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals against disqualification from invalidity benefit were heard in (a) April, May and June 1992 and (b) April, May and June 1993; and how many were successful.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available in the form requested. However, in April, May and June 1992 a total of 1,311 appeals were heard against a variety of invalidity benefit decisions. Of these, 681 were decided in the appellant's favour. Information for the later period is not available.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for invalidity benefit were received from people previously in receipt of (a) sickness benefit, (b) income support and (c) statutory sick pay in the year 1992-93.

Mr. Scott: The information is not available. Such information as is available is in the table. Information about invalidity benefit recipients previously receiving income support is not available.

Spells of invalidity benefit commencing in the period 2 April 1990 to 30 March 1991 immediately in continuation of entitlement to:

	Recipients
Sickness benefit	87,000
Statutory sick pay	128,000

Notes:

(i) Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants, rounded to the nearest thousand.

(ii) 30 March 1991 is the latest date for which figures are available.

(iii) Figures exclude cases where there has been a break in incapacity of eight weeks or less.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list changes made to benefits for long-term sick and disabled people, since April 1988 together with an estimate for each year to 2000 of the cost or savings for each change.

Mr. Scott: For a list of changes I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Bristol, East (Ms Corston) on 26 July, c. 715-16.

An estimate of the costs and savings in each case as requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants were in receipt of invalidity benefit in (a) Edinburgh, (b) Scotland and (c) the United Kingdom in each of the past five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Scott: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

For such information as is available I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Dundee, East (Mr. McAllion) on 20 July at columns 280-81.

Community Action

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what national insurance arrangements have been made for community action participants.

Mr. Hague: Community action which was announced in the Budget statement on 16 March will commence on 27 July. Participants will not be liable to pay national insurance contributions while they are taking part in this new work experience project. Furthermore, their future contributory benefit entitlement will normally be protected by the award of "approved training" credits.

Income-related Benefits

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has plans to change the way contributions to personal pension schemes are taken into account in income-related benefits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State plans to lay before Parliament amendments to the regulations on the treatment of such contributions in the income-related benefits. It has been the intention since 1988 that when assessing earnings for the income-related benefits a deduction should be made of half of any contributions to a private pension scheme, and administrative practice has been in line with this. But the current regulations do not correctly reflect this policy. In consequence awards have been made since July 1988 which are incorrect in law at a total cost of £8 million. Amendments to the income-related benefits regulations will be introduced to bring the legislation fully into line with existing policy and administrative practice.

Income Support

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what steps his Department is now taking to review the entitlement to income support of claimants in the light of the Court of Appeal's decision in the case of Percival White v. Chief Adjudication Officer; and what guidance has been issued to those adjudicating claims for income support in relation to inquiries initiated or procedures adopted in view of the court's ruling;

(2) what steps he has taken to assure nursing home residents, their relatives, and the proprietors of homes in which they reside affected by the judgment of the Court of Appeal in the case of the Percival White v. Chief Adjudicating Officer that, if income support claims are reviewed and payments discontinued alternative payments will be made by the district health authority responsible for providing the resident with in-patient treatment and care.

Mr. Burt: When the decision of the Court of Appeal has been published it will be studied carefully to ascertain whether any income support claimants, other than those involved in the case, will be affected. The decision confirms the existing policy and it is, therefore, expected that the number of people affected will be small. Most people whose care in a nursing home has been arranged by a health authority are already being assessed as patients. However, the vast majority of people in nursing homes are private residents and there is no question of their being regarded as in-patients.

General guidance can only be issued when the decision has been studied in detail. However, the Central Adjudication Services will give advice to adjudication officers who require assistance with similar cases.

I understand that the Department of Health issued advice to regional and district health authorities in 1991 on their responsibilities in this area.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by premium the deductions made from the income support of claimants who are also subject to a deduction for voluntary unemployment.

Mr. Burt: Only recipients of the family premium were found to have deductions when benefit was reduced because of voluntary unemployment, but the numbers in the sample are too small to give a reliable estimate.

Source: Income Support Statistics Annual Enquiry, May 1992.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how long the figure set as the level of fuel debt which leads to a deduction from and direct payment of income support has been in operation;

(2) what is the basis for the figure set as the level of fuel debt which can lead to a deduction from and direct payment of income support.

Mr. Burt: The minimum amount of fuel debt which can lead to direct payment to the fuel company is set at the level of the personal allowance for a single claimant aged not less than 25 years old.

The figure has been set since the introduction of income support in April 1988.

Child Maintenance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many applications for child maintenance have been made by parents with care who (a) are or (b) are not in receipt of income support or family credit;

(2) in how many cases of the child support maintenance application forms returned to Child Support Agency centres, the parent with care has refused to authorise him to collect maintenance;

(3) if he will make a statement on the work of the Child Support Agency in its first three months at each of the four Child Support Agency centres presently operating;

(4) what was the average time taken by each Child Support Agency centre, during the first three months, to complete a maintenance assessment, from the date of maintenance inquiry form being sent to the absent parent;

(5) how many maintenance assessments have been carried out by each child support centre since the launch of the Child Support Agency in April;

(6) how many (a) maintenance application forms and (b) maintenance inquiry forms have been sent out by the Child Support Agency at each of the Child Support Agency centres; and how many in each case have been returned:

(7) how many of the maintenance assessments prepared by the Child Support Agency since April relate to children living with parents who are on income support and family credit.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Mrs. Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Ms R. Hepplewhite to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 26 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking about various aspects of the work of the Child Support Agency in its first three months of operation.

I have attached as an annex to this letter a table providing information about the number of maintenance application and maintenance enquiry forms which have been issued, the number of these which have been returned and the number of maintenance assessments which have been completed.

You asked also for a breakdown of the number of applications and assessments made in relation to parents who are in receipt of benefit. As you will be aware, Alistair Burt, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Social Security, pointed out in his reply of 13 July to a question from Frank Field MP reported at Column 482 of the Official Report that, after only three months' operation, it is too early to provide such a breakdown which is reliable enough for publication, and we do not currently collect information about the number of maintenance assessments made in relation to this group. It is also too early to provide reliable information on average clearance times, such as that which you have requested.

You asked also about the number of applications received where the parent with care has refused to provide authority for the collection of maintenance. Whilst information is not available in this form, you may wish to know that some 2,300 have so far been referred for interview in connection with the requirement to co-operate.

Although it is too early to draw any overall conclusions from the data so far available my view is that the Agency has made a steady start in introducing the new arrangements for ensuring that parents meet their responsibilities for child maintenance whenever they are able to do so.

I hope you will find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Annex

The number of Maintenance Application/Maintenance Enquiry Forms sent out by the Agency at each Agency Centre, the number returned and the number of assessments in the period 5 April to 30 June are as follows:

Maintenance Application Forms

	Issued	Returned
Hastings	51,000	24,500
Falkirk	37,000	18,000
Dudley	54,000	29,000
Belfast	35,000	18,500
TOTAL	177,000	90,000

Maintenance Enquiry Forms and assessments completed

	Issued	Returned	Assessments made
Hastings	9,500	3,500	920
Falkirk	7,000	3,000	780
Dudley	14,500	6,500	1,900
Belfast	7,500	3,000	400
TOTAL	38,500	16,000	4,000

Notes:

(i) These figures have been rounded and are provisional, so may be subject to amendment.

(ii) Birkenhead and Plymouth Centres are not yet operational and their caseloads are currently handled by Dudley and Hastings respectively.

Recovery of Payments

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to improve the performance of his Department in the recovery of overpayments of social security benefits.

Mr. Burt: The administration of benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 27 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what plans he has to improve the performance of his Department in the recovery of overpayments of social security benefits.

The report of the Efficiency Scrutiny into the Management of Departmental Debt in December 1989 identified a number of key issues concerning recovery of money owed to the Department, the major concern was the priority given in the Department to benefit delivery over revenue collection. In order to take forward the recommendations of the Efficiency Scrutiny an Information Study was conducted over a 6 month period ending in June 1991.

Following the recommendations made in the above reports various initiatives have been implemented in the overpayment recovery field. An Income Support recovery yield target for the financial year 1992-93 of £30 million was issued in August 1992. This was a 45 per cent. increase over the amount collected in 1991-92 and yet it was exceeded, the total recovery being £38·2 million. Further targets have been introduced for 1993-94 amounting to £54 million with recovery on non Income Support overpayments also being included.

The BA are actively pursuing the establishment of a Central Recovery Group to collect outstanding overpayments of Income Support where the customer is no longer in receipt of benefit.

In addition to the above BA staff have been issued with revised training material and a good practice guide aimed at assisting in the identification, calculation and recovery of overpaid benefit. The Overpayment Recovery Guide, a manual which assists staff in their recovery work, has been comprehensively rewritten and the letters which notify customers of overpayments and request repayment have been drafted in plain English. The procedure for referring cases for civil action, should recovery break down, has also been streamlined and is showing positive results.

Work is also proceeding to develop Information Technology to assist in the overpayment process.

I hope you will find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also appear in the Library.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in how many cases in each of the last five years civil enforcement action has been taken in either the county court or the sheriff's court to recover sums owed by way of social security benefits.

Mr. Burt: The administration of social security benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member shortly and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 29 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking in how many cases, in each of the last five years, civil enforcement action has been taken in either the County Court or the Sheriffs' Court to recover sums owed by way of Social Security benefits".

The information you have requested is shown below.

Year ending 31 March

	County court	Sheriff's court
1990	250	84
[1]1993	6,657	1,235

[1] The reasons for the 1993 figures being higher than previous years are that the work has been devolved from a central location to Area Offices which has led to increased efficiency. In addition, in July 1992, the process for referring cases was streamlined and the proceedings limit was reduced from £300 to £50.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a breakdown by benefit of the number of recipients of benefits other than income support, where deductions are being made for the recovery of overpayments under section 71 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992.

Mr. Burt: The administration of benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 27 July 1993:

I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking for a breakdown by benefit of the number of recipients of benefits, other than Income Support, where deductions are being made for the recovery of overpayments under section 71 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992.

I regret that I am unable to provide the exact information you requested. Overpayments are recovered by virtue of both sections 71 and 74 of the Social Security Administration Act 1992. The relevant section is noted on individual claims to assist in the adjudication process only. These details are not collated locally and therefore no central records can be maintained. Obtaining the information you requested could be done only at disproportionate cost.

However, you may be interested to know that recovery by deduction from non Income Support benefits to recover overpayments is currently being made on 21,142 claims. These overpayments are being recovered by virtue of both sections 71 and 74 of the 1992 Administration Act. I can advise that of these, 15,494 are for benefits administered by our District Offices with the following details for those benefits administered centrally;

	Number
Attendance Allowance	607
Family Credit	607
Invalid Care Allowance	3,146
Mobility Allowance/Disability Living Allowance	740
Disability Working Allowance	6

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy of this letter will appear in the official report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what amounts have been recovered by way of overpayments of benefit in each of the last five years.

Mr. Burt: The administration of benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 27 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what amounts have been recovered by way of overpayments of benefit in each of the last five years.

I regret that I am unable to provide the information you requested for the last five years. Centrally collected information on Income Support overpayments is held only from April 1991, when the first central target was set for Income Support recoveries. Information for all the other non-Income Support Benefits is being kept from April 1993 and recovery performance will not be known until April 1994.

In 1991/92, £24·2m was recovered from overpayments of Income Support, against a target of £18m. This figure rose to £38·2m in 1992/93, against a target of £30m. A target of £54m has been set for 1993/94 for recovery of all benefits and the current year end outlook shows that this target will be exceeded.

I hope that you find this reply helpful. A copy of this letter will appear in the Official Report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many invalidity benefit recipients were found (a) medically incapable of work, after examination, (b) capable of work, after examination, or (c) medically capable of suitable alternative work (i) in April, May and June 1992 and (ii) in April, May and June 1993;

(2) how many invalidity benefit recipients were referred to the Benefits Agency medical service (a) in April, May and June 1992 and (b) April, May and June 1993.

Mr. Scott: The administration of invalidity benefit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 27 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for social security asking (i) how many invalidity benefit recipients were referred to the benefit agency Medical Service (a) in April, May and June 1992 and (b)

April, May and June 1993 and (ii) how many invalidity benefit recipients were found (a) medically incapable of work, after examination, (b) capable of work after examination, or (c) medically capable of suitable alternative work (i) in April, May and June 1992 and (ii) in April, May and June 1993.

The complete range of information requested is not available. This is because for operational reasons, figures for Scotland and Wales are not available. The full range of information will be available from April 1994. The figures available also include sickness benefit recipients as separate figures are not held. The figures below therefore relate to England only.

(1a) Sickness benefit/invalidity benefit referrals to BAMS in April, May and June 1992 = 172,637.

(b) Sickness benefit/invalidity benefit referrals to BAMS in April, May and June 1993 = 170,788.

(2a) Sickness benefit/invalidity benefit recipients found medically incapable of work after examination:

(i) in April, May and June 1992 = 33,847

(ii) in April, May and June 1993 = 28,275

(b) Sickness benefit/invalidity benefit recipients found capable of work after medical examination:

(i) in April, May and June 1992 = 5,148

(ii) in April, May and June 1993 = 3,280

(c) Sickness benefit/invalidity benefit recipients found medically capable of suitable alternative work after medical examination:

(i) in April, May and June 1992 = 11,442

(ii) in April, May and June 1993 = 14,586

I hope that you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the districts of the Benefits Agency which have not received the equal opportunities validation symbol; and what are the reasons for their failure in each case.

Mr. Burt: The administration of Benefits Agency staff is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available, and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Win Griffiths, dated 26 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am, therefore, replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking if he will list the Districts of the Benefits Agency which have not received the equal opportunities validation symbol; and what are the reasons for their failure in each case.

The Disability symbol of 2 ticks and 2 dots was introduced by Employment Services for use by employers who wished to show their commitment to employing people with disabilities. All Districts within the Benefits Agency were encouraged to use the symbol and many in fact did so.

In June this year, the symbol was revised and criteria for its use were introduced. The Benefits Agency, in common with other Government Departments and Agencies, is currently looking at the implications of using the new symbol and complying with the criteria. This in no way affects the way we treat disabled people and our policies and procedures are in line with best practice and Civil Service policy on the employment of people with disabilities.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Sick Notes

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps are taken to ensure that sick note reminder forms BF60B are sent to claimants prior to the expiry date of the existing sick note.

Mr. Scott: The administration of sickness and invalidity benefit are matters for Mr. Michael Bichard the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. M. Bichard to Mr. Jim Wallace, dated 27 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what steps are taken to ensure that sick note reminder forms BF60B are sent to customers prior to the expiry date of the existing sick note.

Guidance to Benefit Agency staff is that form BF60B should be issued if the current medical statement expires before the order book runs out. In both Lerwick and Kirkwall Benefit Offices, which deal with customers in your constituency, form BF60B would be issued to a customer at the same time as the renewal order book where the medical statement expires during the currency of that order book.

The computerisation of incapacity benefits is still developing. The latest improvement to the system, introduced on a rolling programme to District Offices from May 1993 to January 1994, will automatically issue form BF60B whenever an order book is issued that extends beyond the date of the current medical statement.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Office Accommodation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee how many hon. Members currently share an office.

Mr. Ray Powell: One hundred and thirty-six hon. Members are accommodated in double rooms, 27 in treble rooms and 12 in rooms of four Members. Twenty-one have desks in open plan accommodation in the Cloisters.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee if he will issue a questionnaire to hon. Members to discover their office accommodation needs and their level of satisfaction with current office accommodation.

Mr. Ray Powell: It has been the objective of successive Select Committees responsible for Members' accommodation to work towards a situation where every Member who so wishes is able to have a room of his or her own. Progress towards that goal is a high priority for the Accommodation and Works Committee in consultation with the Serjeant at Arms and the Parliamentary Works Directorate. I shall therefore arrange for my hon. Friend's suggestion to be considered.

Commonwealth Parliamentary Association

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee in what circumstances the premises of the United Kingdom branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association would have to vacate its office at short notice to make way for a military guard of honour; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: Matters relating to Westminster Hall are the joint responsibility of the Lord Great Chamberlain, the Speaker and the Lord Chancellor.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Lord President of the Council how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Newton: The Privy Council Office, which includes the private office of the Lord Privy Seal and Lord President as well as the Judicial Committee and Privy Council proper, spent £10,885 in financial year 1992-93 on official hospitality.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. John M. Taylor: In 1992-93 expenditure on official hospitality in the Lord Chancellor's Department was £20,697·44p.

WALES

Transport Funding

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give all details of European regional development funds which have been allocated for transport initiatives in the last 12 months and which are proposed for the next 12 months.

Sir Wyn Roberts: No ERDF funds have been allocated to specific transport initiatives, but ERDF grant has part-financed various transport measures including provision of park and ride facilities, bus routes and new passenger rail services. It is too soon to indicate what schemes or initiatives might be submitted for approval in 1994.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Redwood: The amount spent by the Welsh Office on official hospitality in 1992-93 was £38,382.

Valleys Programme

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when details of the latest programme for the valleys will be published.

Mr. Redwood: Details of the new programme for the valleys, launched by my predecessor on 1 April are set out in a brochure which I have published today. Copies have been sent to those Members in valleys constituencies. I have also placed copies in the Library of the House.

Under the previous programme for the valleys, launched in June 1988, 2,000 acres of derelict land were cleared in the biggest venture of its kind in Europe, 2·6 million sq ft of industrial floor-space was provided and £700 million of private sector investment was generated. In addition, 24,000 jobs were created or safeguarded.

My aim for the new programme will be to build on this success, to complete the process of restoring prosperity to the valleys area and to fulfil the aspirations of its people. The new programme has five key aims:

- to create more, better quality jobs;
- to improve training, education and transport;
- to improve the environment;
- to improve people's health;
- to improve the quality and choice of housing.

I expect total public expenditure under the new programme to exceed £1 billion.

HEALTH

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent on official hospitality in her Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: In 1992-93, the Department of Health spent £246,374 on hospitality.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Sir John Wheeler: £535,299.

Audit Review Group

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make available copies of the follow-up report of the audit review group.

Sir John Wheeler: I have arranged for copies of the report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

TRANSPORT

Railtrack

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the Government's intention with regard to the time scale for the privatisation of Railtrack.

Mr. Freeman: As we said in the White Paper "New Opportunities for the Railways", Cm 2012, the Government would like to see the private sector owning as much as possible of the railway in the longer term. No target date has been set for the transfer of Railtrack to private sector ownership.

Relief Road, Manchester

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what procedures he intends to implement in order to assess the environmental impact of the proposed Greater Manchester western and northern relief road.

Mr. Key: If the scheme goes ahead following the public consultation, the proposals will be assessed in terms of the impact on existing communities, air and water qualities, the landscape, agriculture, nature conservation, heritage values and recreation. An environmental statement, describing those impacts and the measures we intend to take in mitigation, will be published in accordance with EC directive 85/337.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport, excluding its agencies, spent £231,547 on official hospitality during 1992-93.

Exhaust Pollution

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies have been done by his Department on the linkage of asthma and bronchial disorders to exhaust pollution in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 18 October 1993]: I have been asked to repy.

The Department is funding a research project which will examine the effects of the December 1991 air pollution episode in London when the highest recorded peak of nitrogen dioxide occurred.

In addition, the Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants which was established by the chief medical officer last year has set up a sub-group on asthma which will make recommendations on research relating to asthma and air pollution.

The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him by my right hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 10 March at column 616, which stated that the MRC is sponsoring some research into factors contributing to the rise in asthma and has set up a working party to examine the aetiology of asthma under the chairmanship of Professor A. J. Newman Taylor. It is considering a range of possible contributory factors to current levels of asthma, including air pollution. The Department is represented on the working party and on the MRC committee on toxic hazards in the workplace and the environment, both of which will consider areas of need for further research.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Waldegrave: The expenditure by my Department, excluding expenditure in respect of the Prime Minister's office, on official hospitality in the financial year 1992-93 was £33,320.

Initiatives Programme

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what arrangements he has made for making payments to projects approved under the Office of Science and Technology's White Paper initiatives programme.

Mr. Waldegrave: Payments associated with such initiatives began earlier this month. Parliamentary approval to this new expenditure will be sought in a supplementary estimate for the Cabinet Office: Office of Public Service and Science: science vote—class XVIII, vote 2. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure of up to £400,000 for agreed projects is being met by a repayable advance from the contingencies fund.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Blakenhurst Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many disturbances have occurred at Blakenhurst since it opened; and if he will provide details.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 18 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about disturbances at HM Prison Blakenhurst.

The Prison Service does not classify incidents as 'disturbances', but records a range of different types of incident which disrupt the smooth running of establishments.

Since Blakenhurst began receiving prisoners on 26 May 1993, there have been four incidents of concerted indiscipline, and two rooftop demonstrations; all six incidents were passive throughout. These are the details:—

9 August 1993: 50 prisoners refused to return to their cells at the end of evening association. They were protesting about the quality of the food and about the imminent transfer to training prisons of a number of prisoners. They returned to their cells after 3½ hours.

13 September 1993: 62 prisoners refused to return to their cells after evening association. Their complaints included the timing of meals, lack of available work, poor choice of video entertainment and new restrictions on access around the houseblocks. The incident was resolved after 3½ hours.

20 September 1993: 60 prisoners refused to return to their cells at the end of evening association; they did so after one hour.

23 September 1993: a prisoner climbed onto the roof of the segregation unit to protest about his location in the unit. He remained there for 4 hours. No damage was caused.

24 September 1993: another prisoner climbed onto the roof of the segregation unit to protest about his location in the unit. He surrendered after 3 hours 50 minutes.

9 October 1993: ten prisoners refused to return to their cells after evening association. Four of the prisoners were due to be relocated in the segregation unit following an alleged assault on two staff members. The situation was resolved after 2½ hours.

Cautions

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were cautioned by the police in (a) 1990, (b) 1991 and (c) 1992, (1) in total, (2) for indictable offences, (3) for indictable only offences, (4) for either way offences or (5) for summary offences.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested for the years 1990 to 1992—which is provisional—is given in the table.

Number of persons cautioned by type of offence 1990 to 1992[1]
England and Wales

	1990	1991	[1]1992
All offences	269,112	278,765	321,294
Total indictable	166,349	179,885	216,163
Indictable only	1,703	1,577	1,736
Triable either way	164,646	178,308	214,427
Summary offences (excluding motoring)	102,763	98,880	105,131

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what number and percentage of people cautioned in 1990, 1991 and 1992 had (a) no previous cautions, (b) one previous caution, (c) two previous cautions, (d) three previous cautions, (e) four previous cautions, (f) five previous cautions or (g) six or more previous cautions.

Mr. Maclean: The information is not available in the form requested. The latest available information on previous cautioning history of persons cautioned in England and Wales is shown in the table.

The past cautioning history of a sample[1] of 2,787 offenders cautioned in England and Wales in 1991

The number of previous cautions	Percentage of the sample
None	79·9
1	12·8
6 or more	0·8

[1] The sample was based on returns from all police forces in England and Wales for all offenders cautioned between 25 and 29 November 1991.

Theft

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a table showing for each of the years 1979 to 1992 the total number of offences in the category of theft and handling stolen goods; and how many in each year were (a) shoplifting, (b) handling and (c) other categories of theft.

Mr. Maclean: The requested information is contained in the following table:

Notifiable offences of theft and handling stolen goods recorded by the police 1979-92
England and Wales Number of offences

Year	Total	Theft from shops	Handling stolen goods	Other theft
1979	1,416,143	203,122	45,290	1,167,731
1980	1,463,469	206,175	38,815	1,218,479
1981	1,603,151	225,342	40,793	1,337,016
1982	1,755,853	242,304	43,589	1,469,960
1983	1,705,924	235,512	44,871	1,425,541
1984	1,807,981	248,792	45,046	1,514,143
1985	1,884,069	281,557	45,336	1,557,176
1986	2,003,873	255,463	41,497	1,706,913
1987	2,052,005	247,064	45,968	1,758,973
1988	1,931,274	216,242	49,262	1,665,770
1989	2,012,760	222,974	44,867	1,744,919
1990	2,374,409	250,301	46,822	2,077,286

Year	Total	Theft from shops	Handling stolen goods	Other theft
1991	2,761,119	281,276	51,495	2,428,348
1992	2,851,638	288,672	49,836	2,513,130

Bail Statistics

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people (a) were released on bail in (i) 1990, (ii) 1991 and (iii) 1992, (b) reoffended on bail and (c) were bailed again by the courts.

Mr. Maclean: The estimated number of persons remanded on bail at magistrates courts in England and Wales is published annually in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales". Table 8.5 shows that 441,900 people were remanded in 1990: 452,500 in 1991 and 458,700 in 1992. Information on numbers offending while on bail and on those bailed again is not collected centrally.

A Home Office research report—RPU report 65 "Offending while on bail; a survey of recent studies"—gives some information about recent studies relating to offences while on bail. The survey concludes that, on average, between 10 and 12 per cent. of defendants on bail are subsequently convicted of an offence committed on bail and nowhere was the figure more than 17 per cent. A copy of this report is available in the Library of the House.

Offences Statistics

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many notifiable offences were recorded by the police in the year ended June 1993.

Mr. Maclean: The requested information is not yet available.

Asylum

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current average waiting time for asylum applications, from receipt of application to determination.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The estimated average length of time between the receipt of an asylum application and the decision, for cases decided in the second quarter of 1993, was 18 months. This figure reflects work on the resolution of older and more complex cases, as a result of the increase in staffing in the asylum and special cases division. Following the implementation of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 on 26 July, priority has been given to cases received after that date, with the aim of resolving the majority within three months. However, comprehensive information on the average decision times since implementation of the Act is not yet available.

Political Conferences

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details of the total policing costs associated with the 1993 annual conferences of (a) the Liberal Democrats, (b) the Labour party and (c) the Conservative party.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I understand from the chief officers of the forces concerned that the estimated costs are:

(a) Liberal Democrat (Devon and Cornwall)	14,500
(b) Labour (Sussex)	31,000
(c) Conservative (Lancashire)	1,500,000

Juvenile Offenders

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what work his Department has undertaken to establish the number of persistent juvenile offenders; and what is his estimate of the number of such offenders at the present time.

Mr. Maclean: A survey of police forces and local authority social services departments last year identified 106 juveniles who met the criteria for persistent offenders specified in that survey. It was immediately recognised that this figure was a significant underestimate: not all respondents—including two of the largest police forces—held their information in a way which allowed them to produce precise numerical data. Consequently, further research on persistent juvenile offending was commissioned by the Home Office. The report is expected to be available in the near future.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Howard: My Department's expenditure on official hospitality in the financial year 1992-93 was £21,651.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bosnia

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blackpool, North (Mr. Elletson) of 6 July, Official Report, column 85, what steps Her Majesty's Government took, before co-sponsoring United Nations Security Council resolution 816, to verify allegations of a breach of the no-fly zone over Gladovici on 13 March other than consideration of the UNPROFOR press notice.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the answers which my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office gave to his written question of 18 October, Official Report, columns 83-84. We are satisfied with the standard of United Nations reporting on the observance of the no-fly zone over Bosnia-Herzogovina, including the information provided about the breach over Gladovici on 13 March.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of all countries for which ivory export permits have been issued by the authorities in Hong Kong since the entering of the reservation in respect of the ivory trade; and if he will provide full details of the ivory exported.

Mr. Goodlad: Since the entering of the reservation and up to 14 October 1993, details of commercial ivory exported from Hong Kong are as follows:

Importing country	Nature and quantity
China	7946·70 kg raw ivory
Korea	273·60 kg worked ivory
Taiwan	24·20 kg worked ivory
Mexico	195·20 kg worked ivory
Saudia Arabia	8·80 kg worked ivory
Andorra	112·60 kg worked ivory
Australia	8·00 kg worked ivory
USA	0·73 kg worked ivory
United Kingdom	0·85 kg worked ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much ivory has been confiscated by the Hong Kong authorities since 1 February 1991; and how many prosecutions for illegal export have been initiated since that date.

Mr. Goodlad: Between 1 February 1991 and 14 October 1993, the Hong Kong authorities confiscated 1,210·9 kg of ivory and initiated two prosecutions for illegal export.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many exports of ivory have been authorised from Hong Kong since midnight on 17 July 1990.

Mr. Goodlad: No commercial exports of ivory have been authorised from Hong Kong between midnight on 17 July 1990 and 14 October 1993 except for seven shipments of pre-convention specimens of worked ivory totalling 1·58 kg.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many spot checks have been made by the Hong Kong authorities of ivory holding premises since 1 February 1991; and if any irregularities were discovered.

Mr. Goodlad: The Hong Kong authorities have made 778 spot checks on ivory holding premises between 1 February 1991 and 14 October 1993. No irregularities were discovered.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current stock of all ivory known to be held in Hong Kong; and on what date it was last assessed.

Mr. Goodlad: The total commercial ivory stock held in Hong Kong on 17 July 1990 was 463 tonnes, to the nearest tonne. No commercial exports of ivory, except pre-convention specimens of worked ivory, have been authorised since then.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current number of possession licences issued to holders of ivory stocks in Hong Kong.

Mr. Goodlad: As at 14 October 1993, there were 899 possession licences held by commercial ivory stock holders in Hong Kong.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department, including the Overseas Development Administration, in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Goodlad: Expenditure on official hospitality by both wings of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in 1992-93 is estimated at £6,946,298.

In addition, the FCO availed itself of part of the £1,141,600 grant-in-aid to the Government hospitality fund, but the exact figure is not available.

Endangered Species

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of items from endangered species seized by the Hong Kong authorities in the years 1991, 1992 and the first half of 1993; and what prosecutions arose from the seizures.

Mr. Goodlad: The Hong Kong authorities made 276 seizures of items from endangered species in 1991, 256 seizures in 1992 and 120 seizures in the first half of 1993. A total of 341 prosecutions for the two and a half year period arose from these seizures.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the ivory exported from Hong Kong since 25 March 1991 in accordance with the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species requirements.

Mr. Goodlad: No commercial exports of ivory have been authorised by the Hong Kong authorities since 25 March 1991 except for six shipments of pre-convention specimens of worked ivory totalling 1·48 kg.

Special Operations Executive

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to release the records of the wartime Special Operations Executive.

Mr. Hurd: I said in my answer on 26 November 1992, Official Report, column 766, that work had started on reviewing the SOE archives. A first batch of files, covering SOE activities in the far east have been transferred to the Public Record Office and will be available to the public from 21 October. The next batches will cover Scandinavia and Africa and will be released as soon as possible after mid-1994.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Ethiopia

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on future British aid to Ethiopia.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have agreed to commit £10 million of bilateral development assistance to support projects in Ethiopia in the period 1993 to 1995. In addition, during her recent visit to Ethiopia, my right hon. Friend

Baroness Chalker of Wallasey agreed to provide £5 million balance of payments support during United Kingdom financial year 1993-94 to support Ethiopia's economic reform programme.

Natural Resources Institute

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about recent discussions between the Natural Resources Institute and the university of Greenwich.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Natural Resources Institute —NRI—has been reviewing the scope and orientation of its work in the light of a changing market for its services and of the White Paper on science and technology, Cm 2250. The institute has concluded that it has surplus accommodation on its Chatham maritime site. At the same time, it wishes to strengthen links with centres of higher education and research.

The NRI has, therefore, agreed with the university of Greenwich that its school of earth sciences will be based at Chatham from the autumn of 1994. The university is considering whether to relocate other operations—notably its school of engineering—to Chatham as part of a wider plan to rationalise its estate and to expand the provision it offers in Kent. The NRI and the university intend to develop substantive links in research, teaching and consultancy. This association between NRI and the university is a welcome and constructive initiative, which will also give added impetus to the development of the Chatham maritime site and the Medway towns and will make an important contribution to the regeneration of the east Thames corridor.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the percentage fall in the volume of book purchases if VAT at 17·5 per cent. were imposed on books and (b) on the consequential loss in corporation tax, income tax and national insurance contributions.

Sir John Cope: Research carried out by the Institute for Fiscal Studies suggests that imposing the standard rate of VAT on books would reduce book sales by approximately 10½ per cent. The consequential loss in corporation tax, income tax and national insurance contributions would depend on the behaviour of individual companies.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated effect on the retail prices index of the imposition of VAT at 17·5 per cent. on books.

Sir John Cope: Imposing VAT at the standard rate would increase the RPI by around 0·08 per cent., assuming the tax is fully passed on to consumers in the form of higher prices.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue he estimates would be raised if VAT at 17·5 per cent. were applied to books.

Sir John Cope: The Treasury publication "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" shows the estimated cost of applying a zero rate of VAT to books, newspapers and magazines as being £1,100 million in 1993-94. Revenue from books alone would be around 30 per cent. of this figure. This estimate makes no allowance for the likely behavioural response to applying VAT at the standard rate.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Nelson: Expenditure on official hospitality in 1992-93 was £287,195. This is significantly higher than expenditure in 1991-92 reflecting two large one-off events; the annual conference of the International Organisation of Securities Commissions for which the United Kingdom was host in July 1992; and the informal ECOFIN meeting in September 1992 which was held as part of the United Kingdom presidency. If these two items are excluded, expenditure was £84,904.

No. 11 Downing Street

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 27 July, Official Report, column 876, in respect of No. 11 Downing street, on what floor and room the old carpet was relaid; where the carpet already in that room is now located; what adjustments had to be made to the old carpet before it was relaid; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: The old carpet was relaid on the back staircase between the ground and second floors. The carpet had to be cut to fit this previously uncarpeted staircase.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Computer Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the co-ordinating committee on multilateral export control was notified of the United States decision announced on 26 August to lift existing restrictions on export of computer equipment to China and eastern European countries; and if he will make a statement on the implications of the decision on British export policy for computers to these countries.

Mr. Needham: My officials were present at the meeting of COCOM—the Co-ordinating Committee for Multilateral Strategic Export Controls—on 30 September 1993 when the US delegation presented its proposals for amending the agreed level of controls on computer equipment by all COCOM members including the US to proscribed destinations, including China and eastern Europe. Agreement to decontrol was reached at a further meeting held on 5 October.

Like our counterparts in the US and other COCOM member states, we are considering the practical issues of implementing in the United Kingdom this more relaxed export control policy. We expect to introduce new measures soon.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Eggar: My Department spent £526,447 on entertainment in the 1992-93 financial year.

British Aerospace

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with British Aerospace concerning launch aid for the Jetstream plant at Prestwick; what action he has taken as a result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: British Aerospace has had initial discussions with officials about launch aid for Jetstream. No application has yet been made.

Nuclear Industry

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations his Department has received from the nuclear installations inspectorate concerning the safety of computer software to be used in the Sizewell B power station.

Mr. Eggar: I have received no such representations. I understand that the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate has not yet completed its assessment of Nuclear Electric's safety case for the computerised primary protection system proposed for Sizewell B.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he plans to announce the timetable and the terms of reference of the 1993 nuclear review.

Mr. Eggar: The terms of reference and the format of the forthcoming review of the future prospects for nuclear power in the United Kingdom are under consideration within Government. It remains the Government's intention, as set out in the White Paper "The Prospects for Coal", to make an announcement later this year.

Renewable Energy

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he plans to publish his Department's renewable energy strategy document.

Mr. Eggar: I expect to publish a new and renewables strategy document this year.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when potential bidders will be informed whether they have been successful in obtaining support under the third renewables order of the non-fossil fuel obligation.

Mr. Eggar: The Non-Fossil Purchasing Agency expects to be able to inform bidders whether they have been successful around October 1994.

Regional Development Funds, Merseyside

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress is being made to enable funds to be allocated to Merseyside as a result of its designation within objective 1 status; what is the total amount to be allocated; what changes have taken place in the allocated amount; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 18 October 1993]: The objective 1 funds to be allocated to Merseyside are 840 mecu at 1992 prices, as I announced in my written answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Sir J. Hannam) on 27 July, Official Report, column 948.

A regional development plan is currently being prepared by the Government in consultation with local interests as required by the regulations and will shortly be transmitted by the Government to the Commission.

Swan Hunter

Mr. Trotter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to obtain the approval of the European Commission to the making of intervention funding available for merchant shipbuilding at Swan Hunter.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 19 October 1993]: Following my initial approach to Vice President van Miert in May, applying for the shipbuilding intervention fund for British warship yards, I have submitted to the Commission a detailed case in writing. Since then I have met with Mr. van Miert in Brussels to urge approval of our application and I have pursued this in correspondence and on the telephone, most recently today. Negotiations between officials continue to take place and a further official level meeting is scheduled for Monday 25 October. I will continue to maintain a close involvement in this issue.

DEFENCE

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Hanley: In the financial year 1992-93, my Department spent £4,950,000 on official entertainment and refreshments, and on protocol entertainment. This figure includes expenditure incurred by the Ministry of Defence itself, by formations and establishments of the armed forces at home and abroad, and by individual officers occupying command and international appointments for which entertainment allowances are payable.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Sick Notes

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidance is given to Benefit Agency officers regarding the period of notice given to claimants when the sick note reminder form BF60B is sent out.

Mr. Scott: The issue of form BF60B is a procedural matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. James Wallace, dated 27 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what guidance is given to Benefit Agency officers regarding the period of notice given to customers when sick note reminder form BF60B is sent out.

Guidance to Benefit Agency staff does not specify how much notice a customer should be given about the expiry of their medical statement. Normally form BF60B is issued whenever an order book is issued to a customer which runs on beyond the expiry date of the medical statement. Notice to customers of expiry of medical statements would normally be in the range of 1 to 20 weeks.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Official Cars

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many official cars are currently at the disposal of his Department.

Mr. Hague: There are currently 2,188 official vehicles in use on the Department's business.

Official Travel

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was spent by his Department on travelling abroad by (a) Ministers and (b) officials in each of the last three financial years; and which countries were visited.

Mr. Hague: Information for financial years prior to 1992-93 is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The sum spent in the financial year 1992-93 on the cost of travelling abroad was £403,600. Countries visited in that period were:

Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bermuda, Canada, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Hong Kong, Hungary, Ireland, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Portugal, Puerto Rico, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, USA and Zimbabwe.

Separate figures for Ministers and officials are not available.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been spent by his Department in each of the last three financial years on costs for officials travelling to France.

Mr. Hague: Information on costs for officials travelling to France in years prior to 1992-93 is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The sum spent in the financial year 1992-93 on the cost of travel to France by officials was £26,735.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Hague: Departmental expenditure on official hospitality in the financial year 1992-93 was £175,901.

SCOTLAND

Sheep Annual Premium

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many application forms were received after the deadline for sheep annual premium; how many were accepted late; what were (a) the reasons for late applications and (b) the percentage of applications received by the deadline; what his Department regards as exceptional circumstances; how many applications were accepted because of exceptional circumstances; if he will give details of each case; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: Thirty-eight applications were received after the closing date for applications for the 1993 sheep annual premium scheme. The EC regulations which govern the scheme provide that only those late applications which can be attributed to "force majeure" can be accepted. For this purpose, on the basis of guidance from the European Commission, "force majeure" means abnormal or unforeseeable circumstances beyond the control of the applicant. The 38 applications in question were late for a variety of reasons, but none of them fell in the "force majeure" category.

A total of 17,027 applications—99·8 per cent.—were received by the deadline.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements he proposes for the election, operation and financing of community councils in his plan for reorganisation of local government in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: Our White Paper, published last July, "Shaping the Future—The New Councils" restated our commitment to community councils. We are currently examining responses and will announce our conclusions in due course.

EMPLOYMENT

Environmental Training

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representation his Department will have at the European Commission's Joint Research Centre meeting on training and education for business and the environment, to be held in Seville on 8 to 12 November.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Joint Research Centre's Eurocourse on business and the environment, originally planned for November in Seville, has been postponed until some time next year.

Restricted Reporting Orders

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by what methods a journalist or newspaper editor may challenge or apply to vary a restricted reporting order made under the Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None, unless they are a party to the case.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In 1992-93, the amounts spent on official entertainment by the Employment Department, the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service, the Health and Safety Executive/Commission, the Employment Service and the Office of Manpower Economics were £39,000, £8,000, £20,000, £21,000 and £10,000, respectively.

ENVIRONMENT

Raw Materials

16. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans Her Majesty's Government have to reduce United Kingdom consumption of non-renewable raw materials.

Mr. Yeo: The consumption of non-renewable raw materials will be one of the issues raised in the United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development, which the Government are currently preparing.

Sustainable Development

17. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are Her Majesty's Government's policies for sustainable development.

Mr. Gummer: The United Kingdom has taken a leading role in establishing the world strategy on sustainable development. We shall be publishing our strategy in the very near future, following the wide consultation which we have already undertaken.

Eco-labelling

18. Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about eco-labelling.

Mr. Yeo: The eco-labelling scheme was formally launched by the European Commission at the end of June 1993. The Commission has also approved the first ecological criteria, those for washing machines and dishwashers which were developed by the United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board. Manufacturers of these products are now able to apply for an ecolabel for products which meet the published environmental criteria and we expect the first labels to be awarded at the turn of the year. We hope that agreement will soon be reached on a range of other criteria including those for light bulbs, hairsprays, tissue products and soil improvers.

Competitive Tendering

20. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the services which councils may put out to tender.

Mr. Curry: Local authorities can voluntarily put out to tender any services they think it appropriate. An increasing number of councils recognise the benefits of competition and, in addition to the services already subject to compulsory competitive tendering, have their own voluntary tendering programmes.

37. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in his plans to extend CCT to a council's professional services.

Mr. Curry: We are continuing to consult the local authority associations and professional institutions on all aspects of the Government's proposals for extending CCT to local authority professional services, and have made considerable progress. Secondary legislation for legal and construction-related services, the first services to be introduced in the phased programme, will be circulated in draft for consultation in December and laid before Parliament thereafter. Legislation for the other services will follow.

Local Government Finance

21. Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about his review of the formulae for calculating grants to local authorities.

Mr. Gummer: Work on the review of standard spending assessments for 1994-95 is now complete. I discussed the findings of the review with the local authority associations at the Consultative Council on Local Government Finance last week. Proposals for 1994-95 will be announced later this year.

28. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he has made to alter, amend and improve standard spending assessments.

Mr. Gummer: Work has now finished on the review of standard spending assessments for 1994-95. The primary aim of the review was to incorporate data from the 1991 census into the underlying standard spending assessment formulae. Proposals for 1994-95 will be announced later this year.

Energy Conservation

22. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to develop energy conservation projects both in domestic and business buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: To encourage energy efficiency at home so as to reduce the threat of global warming, my right hon. Friend will tomorrow launch the Helping the Earth week.

At the same event, the Energy Saving Trust will launch a pilot trial of local energy advice centres which is partly funded by the Government.

Council Property (Repairs)

23. Mr. Stephen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that councils repair properties promptly.

Sir George Young: We are introducing an improved right to repair scheme from 1 April 1994 which will ensure that council tenants have a simple and reliable way of getting urgent repairs carried out promptly and paid for by the council.

Council Rents

24. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what change has occurred in the current rent for council houses and flats in England between 1979 and the most recent date for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: The estimated average weekly unrebated rent for local housing authority dwellings in April 1979 was £6·41. In April 1993, it was £33·50.

Estate Action

25. Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources have been made available under the estate action scheme since its introduction.

Mr. Baldry: Provision for estate action, from the inception of the programme to 1993-94, amounts to over £1·5 billion.

Council House Sales (Receipts)

26. Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implementation of his policies in relation to allowing local authorities to spend capital receipts from past sales of council houses.

Sir George Young: We have recently widened the scope for debt-free local authorities to spend their reserved capital receipts. Other authorities can spend their reserved receipts provided that they use a credit approval. We have no plans to alter these arrangements.

Empty Properties, Liverpool

27. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many public and private sector properties are currently standing vacant in Liverpool.

Mr. Baldry: Local authorities report the number of their own dwellings which were vacant and estimates of the numbers of vacant dwellings owned by housing associations, by other public sector landlords and in the private sector in their annual housing investment programme—HIP1—returns. "Other public sector" includes dwellings owned by another local authority.

The latest available figures, for 1 April 1993, are shown in columns A71, A72, A73 and A74 respectively of Liverpool city council's HIP1 return, a copy of which is in the Library.

Bathing Water

29. Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next expects to meet representatives from North West Water plc to discuss bathing water cleanliness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State visited North West Water earlier this month to learn of progress on their schemes to improve bathing water quality at Southport, Blackpool and elsewhere. He has no immediate plans for further discussions, but he will continue to take a close interest in the improvements now under way.

London Docklands

30. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has received or plans to make concerning de-designation of any area currently within the statutory curtilage of the London Docklands development corporation.

Mr. Baldry: Detailed discussions have been taking place between the London Docklands development corporation and the London boroughs of Newham, Tower Hamlets and Southwark about the progressive withdrawal of the LDDC from parts of the urban development area. The Department has been kept in touch with the progress of these discussions.

Council House Sales

31. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council houses have been sold to sitting tenants in England since May 1979.

Sir George Young: Between April 1979 and June 1993, about 1·35 million tenants bought their homes from English local authorities and new towns.

32. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has for the improvement of home ownership opportunities for those living in council homes.

Sir George Young: The new rent-to-mortgage scheme came into operation on 11 October. It provides a new route into home ownership for council tenants who pay full rent and are financially secure, but who find the full right-to-buy purchase price is still beyond their reach.

Urban Policies

33. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his current urban policies.

Mr. Baldry: The Government will continue to support the regeneration of urban areas through their main programmes and special measures. These measures include bringing together English Estates, derelict land grant and city grant into a single Urban Regeneration Agency which will be a major engine of renewal; supporting the urban development corporations which have already attracted some £12 billion in private investment; and encouraging local regeneration through city challenge.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

34. Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to come to a decision on the commissioning of THORP.

Mr. Yeo: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have granted British Nuclear Fuels plc's existing authorisations to discharge liquid and gaseous radioactive wastes from Sellafield, to permit the testing of the company's thermal oxide reprocessing plant with natural and depleted uranium. The variations came into effect on 2 September 1993.

The grant of the variations is without prejudice to consideration of the company's main applications for authorisation to operate THORP, currently being undertaken by the Secretary of State for the Environment and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. If the decisions on the main applications do not permit THORP to operate, the variations would require the company to stop testing and decontaminate the plant.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 28 June, Official Report, column 388, if he will set out the technical areas in which RWMAC has been asked to do further work and the timescale set for it to submit its report.

Mr. Yeo: Last year, the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee—RWMAC—produced a first report on the proposals by British Nuclear Fuels plc —BNFL—to offer waste substitution to those foreign customers with whom its contracts provide for the return of waste. Under its proposals, BNFL would return an equivalent amount of high-level radioactive waste in place of intermediate and low-level waste arising from the reprocessing of their spent fuel.

British Nuclear Fuels plc has proposed the integrated radiological toxic potential—ITP—system for comparing the radiological equivalence between different waste streams. I have written to the chairman of RWMAC requesting the advice of the committee on whether ITP is a suitable basis for determining radiological equivalence, whether there are any limitations to its application and whether, in the committee's opinion, BNFL's proposals are on this basis broadly neutral. The committee has also been asked to identify the environmental implications resulting from substitution and to advise in what circumstances these may be significant.

The committee's advice is expected early next year.

Homelessness

35. Mr. Milligan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were accepted as homeless in the most recent two quarters for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: The number of households accepted as homeless by local authorities in England in the quarter ending June 1993 is estimated at 34,410. This is some 1,700—5 per cent.—less than the 36,120 accepted in the previous quarter.

This is the fourth quarter in succession in which the number of homelessness acceptances has fallen.

Ozone Depletion

36. Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action the United Kingdom is taking to phase out the production of substances damaging the ozone layer.

Mr. Yeo: Under the EC regulation that implements the Montreal protocol on substances that deplete the ozone layer, United Kingdom production of halons must cease at the end of this year, chlorofluorocarbons and carbon tetrachloride at the end of next year and 1,1,1 trichloroethane at the end of 1995. Controls on hydrochlorofluorocarbons—HCFCs—and methyl bromide were added to the protocol last year, and a new regulation which would apply them within the EC is currently under discussion. In those discussions, the United Kingdom is pressing for the Community to agree to tighter controls than the protocol contains on both HCFCs and methyl bromide.

Single Mothers

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has relating to provision of local authority accommodation for single mothers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: In my answer today to the hon. Member for Greenwich (Mr. Raynsford), I have indicated that we will be consulting interested organisations in due course about our proposals to reform the homelessness legislation, with the aim of ensuring fairer access to permanent social housing for everyone who needs it. I will consider what further accommodation provision may be needed for single mothers in that context.

Multiple Occupation Houses

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of multiple occupation houses are classed as (a) unfit for human habitation and (b) substandard.

Sir George Young: The 1991 English house condition survey found 28 per cent. of multiple occupation houses, defined as dwellings in which facilities are shared by more than one household, unfit under section 604 of the Housing Act 1985, as amended by schedule 9 to the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Information on the percentage unfit under section 352 of this Act is not available.

Docklands Light Railway

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Bow and Poplar (Ms Gordon) of 26 July, Official Report, column 580, when he intends to make an announcement on the construction of the docklands light railway extension to Greenwich and Lewisham.

Mr. Baldry: An announcement will be made soon, once the structure of the project has been fully assessed to take into account the interests of both the public and the private sectors. Studies are under way to scrutinise the capital costs of building the railway's extension to Lewisham and to assess the best means of providing for private financing of its construction.

Climate Change

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implications for Her Majesty's Government's policy on global warming and climate change of the findings of the Natural Environment Research Council's terrestrial initiative in the global environmental research project released on 31 August; and what further funding will be made available to the project to follow up the research findings published to date.

Mr. Yeo: Work under the Natural Environment Research Council's terrestrial initiative in global environmental research—TIGER—will help to improve predictions of climate change and its impacts. The results will be part of the scientific evidence supporting the implementation of the framework convention on climate change under which the United Kingdom will be committed to take actions aimed at returning CO_2 and other greenhouse gas emissions to 1990 levels by 2000.

Funding of the programme is a matter for the Natural Environment Research Council. The Department will continue to support TIGER by facilitating joint work with the Hadley Centre climate prediction programme and through the climate impacts link project at the climatic research unit, university of East Anglia.

Housing

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to issue further guidance, and to amend existing guidance, to relevant authorities under the powers contained in section 71 of the Housing Act 1985.

Sir George Young: The Government have consulted local housing authorities and other interested parties on proposals (a) to revise the third edition (1991) of the "Homelessness Code of Guidance for Local Authorities" in the light of the Court of Appeal's judgment in the case of R-v-Secretary of State for the Environment ex parte London borough of Tower Hamlets, and (b) to supplement the code by providing guidance on the housing provisions of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993. I intend to issue a revision of the code and a supplement to it in due course, taking account of the consultation responses.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to use his powers under section 59(2) of the Housing Act 1985 to vary the categories of persons defined as having a priority need for accommodation.

Sir George Young: We have no plans to amend section 59(2) of the Housing Act 1985 by order.

First-time Home Buyers

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to introduce new measures that will help first-time home buyers; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young The most important way in which first-time buyers, and indeed all home buyers, will be helped is through continued improvement in the general economy. Measures that my Department is taking to encourage home ownership include the new rent-to-mortgage scheme, which will enable secure tenants of local authorities and certain other bodies to buy their homes on a mortgage that costs no more than their rent.

Environmental Programmes

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to meet representatives of (a) the Business Council for Sustainable Development and (b) the World Industry Council for the Environment to discuss their respective programmes in regard to United Kingdom environmental policy.

Mr. Yeo: None. Officials are, however, in touch with both organisations.

Capital Receipts

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the total accumulated capital receipts held by local authorities which are not available for investment.

Mr. Baldry: Local authorities are not required to account for the reserved part of capital receipts separately from other amounts set aside as provision to meet credit liabilities—PCL.

At 31 March 1992, the total balance held by local authorities as PCL was around £6·5 billion. Amounts held as PCL may be used to repay debt, to meet liabilities in respect of credit arrangements, or, with the authority of a credit approval, to meet capital expenditure. In the interim, such amounts would generally be represented by financial investments.

Building and Construction

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of activity in the building and construction industry since last year's autumn statement to date.

Sir George Young: Total output in the building and construction industry in Great Britain fell by 2·5 per cent. between the third quarter of 1992 and the second quarter of 1993. This change is at constant 1985 prices and adjusted to exclude normal seasonal variation.

Council Services

Mr. Legg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many councils have put services out to tender on a voluntary basis.

Mr. Baldry: This information is not held centrally.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Gummer: Total expenditure by my Department, including the Building Research Establishment agency, the Planning Inspectorate agency, the Buying Agency and the Queen Elizabeth II Conference Centre agency, was £138,000 in 1992-93.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made by Government Departments towards their 15 per cent. energy efficiency target.

Mr. Yeo: Energy management in individual Government Departments is a matter for the Ministers responsible for those Departments. The Energy Efficiency Office of my Department provides information on good practice and monitors progress towards the target agreed in 1990 of a 15 per cent. improvement in energy efficiency over the five years ending 1995-96. The progress of Departments towards the target during 1992-93 is shown in the tables. Green Ministers reviewed the results at their meeting on 13 October; they noted an improvement in 1992-93 over 1991-92, but agreed that further improvement was required.

I am pleased to note that in the first two years of the campaign my Department has reduced weather-corrected energy expenditure per sq m by 5 per cent. Performance indicators expressing performance in terms of carbon dioxide per sq m and total carbon dioxide emissions indicate that my Department has reduced the former by 16 per cent. and the latter by 20 per cent. during the same period.

Total (excl. MOD, ODA and Scots Courts)	(3)	(2)

For ODA and Scottish Courts 1991/92 is the base year. Therefore these departments' contributions have not been included in the 'Progress' totals.

Notes to Tables

1. Progress by departments under each of the Performance Indicators (PIs) is expressed as a percentage reduction relative to the base year value of the PI in question, with 15 per cent. improvement on £/metre² after five years as the campaign target. Numbers in parentheses denote regress rather than progress.
2. Some departments have revised earlier years' figures, which explains some differences from last year's published results. Equally, some of this year's figures may be subject to revision.
3. Base year figures for Customs and Excise on expenditure, consumption and floor area were all considerably understated, at least partly because the department is a minority tenant occupier in many buildings, with energy bills often paid as part of the service charge, and not separately identifiable. This situation was largely altered after the base year, hence the apparent increase in the figures. For this reason, improvement relative to 1991-92 is a more reliable indicator of progress.
4. Floor area figures are not available for most of the MOD estate. An alternative assessment method to £/metre² has been agreed whereby base year consumption figures will be adjusted up or down to allow for the addition or loss of buildings to MOD's estate during the campaign; this will also apply to CO_2/metre². For total CO_2, since no allowance is made for estate changes to any other department, unadjusted figures will be used for MOD. At the moment, adjustments have not yet been made to MOD's data, so equivalent £/metre² and CO_2/metre² are not yet available.
5. DFE's consumption is dominated by the HQ building, and this changed from a largely naturally ventilated building in the base year to a completely air-conditioned one, with a much smaller floor area, last year. This is the explanation for their large increase in £/metre².
6. Investment figures for departments do not include investment made by Property Holdings on their behalf.

Housing, London

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total number of housing starts in London for 1990-91, 1991-92, 1992-93 and expected for 1993-94 by (a) local authority, (b) housing associations and (c) private sectors.

Sir George Young [holding answer 18 October 1993]: Estimates are shown in the table of the total numbers of housebuilding starts by sector in Greater London for financial years 1990-91, 1991-92, 1992-93 and the first five months of 1993-94.

Financial Year	Private Enterprise	Housing Associations	Local Authorities	Total
1990-91	6,900	3,000	100	10,000
1991-92	7,800	3,500	100	11,400
1992-93	7,200	5,900	200	13,300
1993-94[2]	3,500	2,800	—[1]	6,400

[1] Less than 100.
[2] April to August.

The Department does not prepare forecasts of housebuilding activity.

Birds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had from the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds in relation to the Marismas de Santoña judgment—C355/90—in the European Court of Justice on 2 August; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 18 October 1993]: I have received a copy of the representations made by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. A response to these representations was sent on 12 October.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

THORP

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps were taken to publicise the second consultation period on the thermal oxide reprocessing plant; how many sets of consultation documents were distributed and to whom; what criteria were adopted in deciding the scope of distribution of relevant documents; how many responses were received; and if she will give a breakdown of those (a) in favour of and (b) opposed to the opening of THORP, based on the responses.

Mr. Jack: The second consultation in connection with British Nuclear Fuels plc's application for authorisations for Sellafield, including THORP, was publicised by a public notice in the national press and in local newspapers within the Sellafield area. Some 250 sets of the consultation documents were issued to those local authorities, public bodies, environmental and other interest groups who were previously consulted by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. In excess of 40,000 responses have been received and these are still being assessed. More detailed figures will be made available once all the responses have been considered.

Agriculture Council

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Luxembourg on 18 and 19 October; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: This Council, at which I represented the United Kingdom, considered a proposal from the Commission for changes in the agri-monetary system, made in response to pressure, mainly from Germany, at the previous meeting. Following the changes in the exchange rate mechanism in August, the appreciation of any Community currency beyond a defined limit results in an automatic revaluation of the green rate of the member state concerned and a consequent fall, in terms of that currency, in prices and amounts set under the common agricultural policy. The Commission's proposal would slightly widen the margin within which a currency can appreciate without triggering such a revaluation. I argued that there was no need to alter the existing rules. Germany continued to press for the extension of the "switchover" mechanism to floating currencies, whereby prices in all other member states would be increased in order to avoid a reduction in one.

The Council will return to this issue at its next meeting. Meanwhile, the Commission indicated that it would continue to freeze green rates at their current level. I objected to this, on legal grounds and because farmers and traders had a right to expect that existing rules would not be arbitrarily suspended.

The Council had an inconclusive discussion of the Commission's proposals for changes to the detailed arrangements for arable area payments, including set-aside, and for implementing the agreement on oilseeds reached between the Community and the United States. These proposals will similarly be considered again at the Council's next meeting.

The Agriculture Commissioner, Mr. Steichen, reported on his discussions with the United States trade representative, Mr. Kantor, on the agricultural aspects of the Uruguay round tariff negotiations.

The Council adopted two decisions by qualified majority vote, one establishing a draft supplementary and amending budget for the Community for 1993, and the other authorising the Commission to negotiate with certain banana exporting countries about their rights under the general agreement on tariffs and trade in relation to the changes in the Community's arrangements for bananas agreed last December.

Non-departmental Public Bodies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answer of 6 July, Official Report, columns 111-12, whether the interests declared by chairpersons of members of the boards of executive NDPBs sponsored by her Department are maintained in a register of interests available for inspection.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 27 July 1993]: There is no register of interests for members of NDPBs and none of the NDPBs for which my right hon. Friend is responsible maintains a register of interests available for inspection. Details of those filling many posts are published, or are available at the time of appointment.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many animals confirmed as having BSE were born between (a) August 1988 and December 1988, (b) January 1989 and June 1989, (c) July 1989 and December 1989, (d) January 1990 and June 1990, (e) July 1990 and December 1990, (f) January 1991 and June 1991, (g) July 1991 and December 1991, (h) January 1992 and June 1992 and (i) July 1992 and December 1992.

Mr. Soames: The details of confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in cattle born in Great Britain relative to the periods referred to are as follows:

Period of birth	Cases of BSE confirmed
August to December 1988	3,499
January to June 1989	375
July to December 1989	397
January to June 1990	3
July to December 1990	3

Note: There have been no cases of BSE confirmed in cattle born after December 1990.

EDUCATION

Student Unions

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he has met leaders of the National Union of Students to discuss charitable status for student unions.

Mr. Boswell: My discussions with the president of the NUS have covered the position of student unions as charities, on which the Attorney-General, in his role as protector of charities, issued guidance in 1983.

Press and Public Relations

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list for each financial year since 1990-91 his Department's expenditure on press and public relations, together with the budget for those items for 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Boswell: The figures for Department of Education expenditure on press and publicity, including staff costs and relevant administrative expenditure, for the financial years 1990-91 to 1993-94 are given in the table. Figures for 1994-95 have not yet been agreed. The Department does not incur expenditure on public relations.

Year	£000
1990-91	5,275·6
1991-92	9,006·2
1992-93	8,036·9
1993-94	[1]10,122·6

[1] Estimated.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Boswell: In 1992-93, the Department spent £96,000 of its administration budget on providing official hospitality.

Student Lodgings

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if students lodging in private houses are protected by regulations governing homes in multiple occupation.

Mr. Boswell: The type of private rented accommodation in which most students are likely to live may be classified as a house in multiple occupation—HMO. An HMO is identified in the Housing Act 1985 as a house which is occupied by persons who do not form a single household and this may cover a range of shared accommodation, bedsits and hostels. Local authorities have wide ranging powers under the Housing Act 1985 to control the standards in HMOs.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will consult vice-chancellors on a code to protect students in lodgings from fire and from faulty gas appliances.

Mr. Boswell: Where students live in accommodation which can be classified as a house in multiple occupation, which is a house occupied by persons who do not form a single household, local authorities have wide-ranging powers to control standards under the Housing Act 1985.

In addition the Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1984 put a duty on those who install and service gas appliances. The Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1984 places a duty on a person who runs a business to ensure that any persons not in his employment are not exposed to risk to their health or safety.

Access Funds

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will review the announced split between the postgraduate and undergraduate access funds allocated in England for 1993-94, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: Further to my announcement on 14 June, Official Report column 421, at the request of the Higher Education Funding Council for England, I have agreed a reapportionment of the £18·98 million available in access funds for distribution to institutions in England. The revised allocations, which take account of the relatively greater increase in undergraduate student numbers, are as follows:

Undergraduate	13·34
Postgraduate	5·30
Further education	0·34
Total	18·98

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what effects the reduction in the number of cases coming before the criminal courts is likely to have on the level of legal aid expenditure contained in the Supply estimates.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The 1993-94 Supply estimate provision for legal aid is £1,284 million, net of receipts. Based on figures for expenditure to the end of August, we now forecast that net expenditure for legal aid in the current year is likely to be £1,254 million. At this stage in the year, however, there is inevitably still uncertainty about the eventual outturn. The reduction in the forecast is largely related to criminal legal aid. The changes in eligibility introduced in April, the effect of which was almost entirely in relation to civil legal aid and advice and assistance, appear to be having broadly the effect anticipated.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Environment and Development Conference

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contribution was made by the Overseas Development Administration to the Partnerships for Change conference on environment and development held by Her Majesty's Government in Manchester on 20 to 22 September; and if he will make a statement on the support given by his Department to the participating countries.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Overseas Development Administration was actively involved in preparations for the conference with the Department of Environment, which had responsibility for organising the event. The ODA was also represented at the conference.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what investigations are currently being made by Her Majesty's Goverment or the EC into possible widespread incidence of epidemic disease and illness in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia as a result of the effects of implementation of economic and diplomatic sanctions; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he received the report prepared for the European Community by the Belgian ambassador to Belgrade on 17 September regarding the effects on humanitarian and medical provisions in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia as a result of economic and diplomatic sanctions; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what reports he has received into the medical and humanitarian situation in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia as a result of the implementation of economic and diplomatic sanctions; what assessment he has made of the effect on medical and humanitarian services and facilities as a resuslt of such sanctions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The incidence of epidemic disease and illness throughout the former Yugoslavia, including Serbia and Montenegro, is the subject of frequent investigation by the World Health Organisation which is responsible for co-ordinating the international relief effort. We have made a substantial contribution including a further £10 million in medical assistance announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development on 26 August. Our total contributions, directly and through the European Community, is £141 million. Although we have not received a report prepared by the Belgian ambassador, we have received a great many reports from other sources, including that prepared by the all-party parliamentary group about humanitarian aid and UN sanctions.

Sanctions applied to Serbia and Montenegro under UN Security Council resolutions Nos. 757 and 820 specifically exclude foods and medicines, subject to notification procedures in the United Nations sanctions committee. We have worked hard in this committee to ensure that genuine humanitarian shipments are expedited.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will support moves to allow the Federal Yugoslav authorities to fly humanitarian and medical support directly into Belgrade airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We recognise the importance of providing rapid humanitarian and medical support to those most in need, in the former Yugoslavia regardless of their origins.

The Belgrade authorities have made no applications to fly humanitarian supplies directly into Belgrade. The UN sanctions committee would need to decide whether this would be permitted under existing UN resolutions.

PRIME MINISTER

Community Care

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy to develop an overall assessment of community care housing needs for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

The assessment of housing needs associated with care in the community is for local housing authorities, in consultation with social services authorities, as they develop their housing strategy statements; these are intended to address all housing needs in their areas.

Office Running Costs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister what was the cost of running his Office during the last 12 months; and what was the cost at today's prices (a) five and (b) 10 years ago.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

Comparative information is available only for complete financial years. The costs, at 1993-94 prices, of running my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's Office in 1983-84 and 1988-89 and the budget for 1993-94 are as follows:

1983-84	5,114
1988-89	8,558
1993-94	[1]10,710

[1] Budget.

Notes:

1. The figures represent the cost of 10 Downing Street and Chequers borne on the Votes of the Cabinet Office (OPSS) and its predecessors. Over the period in question the following changes have occurred to the basis of the costs:
   in 1983-84 the then Property Services Agency introduced charges for buildings and services;
   in 1984-85 charges were introduced for the Government Car Service and the Service personnel at Chequers; and in 1986-87 the cost of office services was included for the first time.
2. Costs are shown in the year in which the expenditure was made. Because of billing delays this is not always in the financial year in which the goods or services were provided.

THORP

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 16 July, Official Report, column 687, if he has yet had the opportunity to reply to the letter handed to him on 15 June by a Japanese group in respect of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant; if he will send a copy of his reply to the hon. Member for Don Valley; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

My hon. Friend the Minister for Energy replied on 22 September on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

The office of my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister maintains neither premises nor staff overseas.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 21 October.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 21 October.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister is attending the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Cyprus.

United States-United Kingdom Relations

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on present relations between the United States of America and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

The United Kingdom and the United States have a strong and fruitful relationship at all levels.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past year between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Since the Office of Public Service and Science was established in April 1992 I have not met Mr. Patrick Doyle and I have no plans to meet him. My Department has no record of any correspondence received from Mr. Doyle or of any meetings with him.

Technology Foresight Programme

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what recent contributions have been made by Her Majesty's Government to the OECD Committee for Scientific and Technological Policy's project on the responsiveness of scientific and technological institutions to environmental change.

Mr. Davis: The United Kingdom offered staffing support for this review which concluded with a report in 1991. The United Kingdom continues to support the work of the OECD Committee for Scientific and Technological Policy in its current programme of work.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

European Court (Phone Calls)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee, pursuant to his answer of 17 February, Official Report, column 217, what steps have been taken to ensure that hon. Members are not charged for telephone calls to the European Court of Justice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The European Court of Justice is now an authorised destination which hon. Members may dial direct at no cost to themselves. I have asked the Serjeant at Arms to ensure that an amended list of directly dialled numbers to European destinations is made available to Members.

NATIONAL FINANCE

VAT

Dr. Strang: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment his Department has made of the impact of the imposition of VAT on food upon the food consumption, nutritional intake and health of low-income families.

Sir John Cope: It would not be appropriate to comment before the Budget on 30 November.

Accountants

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will set out the criteria applied by the Government in considering whether Government Departments or public sector bodies should consider doing business with private sector accountants where there is a potential conflict of interest;

(2) on what grounds his Departments and public sector bodies decline to do business with certain partners of accountancy firms; what further plans he has to exclude particular accountancy firms from Government business; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: The grounds on which Departments decide to do business with any accountancy firm will depend upon the individual circumstances of each appointment.

In general, Departments seek to ensure that there are no matters which could reduce a firm's effectiveness in performing the services for which it is to be appointed and that there are no matters which make it inappropriate for Government to have business dealings with the firm.

Mrs. Gillan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the total number of audit appointments awarded by Government Departments to private accountancy firms; what is the total for the period of the last 12 months; what is the number in each Government Department; what proportion of these audit appointments were (a) held by the six largest accountancy firms, and (b) by other accountancy firms, again divided by Department; what proportion and total number of audit appointments carrying fees in excess of £25,000 is held by (i) the six largest accountancy firms and (ii) other accountancy firms; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on awarding audit appointments to firms other than the six largest accountancy firms;

(2) what is the total number of consultancy appointments awarded by Government Departments to private accountancy firms; what is the total for the period of the last 12 months to date; what is the number in each Government Department; what proportion of these consultancy appointments were (a) held by the six largest accountancy firms and (b) by other accountancy firms, again divided by Department; what proportion and total number of consultancy appointments carrying fees in excess of £25,000 is held by (i) the six largest accountancy firms and (ii) other accountancy firms; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on awarding consultancy appointments to firms other than the six largest accountancy firms.

Sir John Cope: The information sought on such appointments awarded by Government Departments to private sector accountancy firms is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Government's policy on awarding these appointments is that firms are considered on their merits for the work involved in each appointment.

Touche Ross

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what assessment he has made of the quality of consultancy work done for Government Departments by Touche Ross; if he will list the major commissions currently being undertaken by that firm for the Government; and what plans he has to review advice purchased from Touche Ross in the past.

Sir John Cope: The information sought on consultancy work is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoner Transfers

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prisoners from England and Wales have applied for transfer to Northern Ireland prisons in the last 12 months;

(2) how many prisoners have been transferred permanently from prisons in England and Wales to prisons in Northern Ireland in the last 12 months;

(3) how many prisoners have been transferred temporarily from prisons in England and Wales to prisons in Northern Ireland in the last 12 months;

(4) how many prisoners transferred on a temporary basis to Northern Ireland from England and Wales in the last 12 months have since been made permanent transferees.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In the 12 months to 30 September 1993, 50 prisoners applied for transfer to prisons in Northern Ireland. Of these, one prisoner was transferred on a permanent basis; four prisoners were temporarily transferred and four prisoners' requests were either refused or withdrawn. None of the prisoners temporarily transferred in this time subsequently had their transfers made permanent. However, four prisoners previously temporarily transferred were granted further temporary transfers and two prisoners previously transferred were granted permanent transfers.

Mr. A. C. S. Benton

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in the last three years over the case of Mr. A. C. S. Benton, of Bloxwich, Walsall, when it is likely he will be able to decide on whether the conviction should be referred to the Appeal Court; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Mr. Benton has made numerous representations over the past three years. The hon. Member was advised in June 1992 that no grounds could be found for referring Mr. Benton's conviction to the Court of Appeal. Since then further representations have been received. These are the subject of current police inquiries. When the police report is to hand, my right hon. and learned Friend will consider whether there are grounds on which it would be right for him to take any action in respect of Mr. Benton's conviction.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to hear from the West Midlands police on the case of Mr. A. C. S. Benton of Bloxwich, Walsall.

Mr. Maclean: The inquiries which are being made by West Midlands police into Mr. Benton's case are taking longer than expected, but I understand from the chief constable that they will be completed shortly.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he sent on Dr. Candy's report on the case of Mr. A. C. S. Benton of Bloxwich, Walsall to the West Midlands police; and when he expects to have a response to the report.

Mr. Maclean: Dr. Candy's report was received in the Home Office on 11 August and sent on to West Midlands police the following day. I expect to receive a response once the West Midlands police have considered Dr. Candy's report in the light of a further expert report which they are awaiting.

Electoral Registration

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what efforts his Department is making to encourage voters to enrol on the electoral register; what specific measures are planned to encourage more women to ensure they are on the register; and if there are any plans to target lone-parent mothers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We have undertaken a national television advertising campaign in support of electoral registration for the first time this year at a cost of £620,000. The advertising was targeted particularly at groups of the population, such as young people and ethnic minorities, shown by research to be less likely to register to vote. We have no evidence to suggest that women or single-parent families are among these groups and we have no plans to target them.

Sheehy Inquiry

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to announce his decision on the implementation of the Sheehy inquiry into police responsibilities and awards.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to make an announcement shortly.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in full the terms of reference of the Sheehy inquiry.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The terms of reference of the inquiry into police responsibilities and rewards were announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke) on 6 July 1992, cols. 43-44.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what inspections are carried out by his Department on establishments using animals to test impact consequences on aero-engines.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None. I understand that the animals in question are humanely killed before the tests take place. Such work therefore falls outside the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, which is concerned only with experiments using living animals.

Wymott Prison

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the report of the inquiry by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons into the recent disturbance of HM prison Wymott will be published.

Mr. Howard: The report by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons of his inquiry into the disturbance at Wymott prison is being published today. A copy of the report is being placed in the Library.

Victim Support

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much the Government have committed to victim support in each of the last five years.

Mr. Maclean: Home Office funding of the national charity, Victim Support, in the last five years is set out in the table:

Financial year	Home Office grant (£ million)	Percentage increase over previous year
1989-90	3·910	43
1990-91	4·735	21
1991-92	5·670	20
1992-93	7·260	28
1993-94	8·375	15

Security Forces' Equipment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what research has been carried out into the use and possible side-effects of electroshock equipment within the United Kingdom;

(2) what official guidelines or regulations are applicable for the use of (a) electroshock equipment by the police, prison and security forces, (b) the tear gas agent oleoresin capsicum, (c) Frag 12 exploding ammunition and (d) dum dum bullets in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: In 1990 the Forensic Science Service published a theoretical assessment of the effects of electric shock weapons.

None of these devices or substances is used against the general public, suspects or offenders, by the police, prison services or the security forces in the United Kingdom.

Ministerial Broadcasts

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions on which he has spoken on the BBC Radio 4 programme "Today", and the topics in each case.

Mr. Howard: I receive numerous requests for interviews from the media, covering the whole range of my Department's responsibilities. I accept many of them, including requests from "Today".

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Moated Sites

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action his Department is currently taking to record and preserve moated sites of archaeological interest in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: English Heritage's monuments protection programme is evaluating all known archaeological remains in England, including moated sites, and identifying those which may be suitable for scheduling. This exercise is expected to result in a very significant increase in the number of scheduled monuments.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales is responsible for the scheduling of monuments in Wales.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 20 October 1993]: My Department has incurred expenditure of £40,759 on official hospitality during the financial year 1992-93. This total includes official hospitality expenditure incurred by the royal parks and the Historic Royal Palaces Agency.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Gibraltar

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent Her Majesty's Government endorse the contents of the address given by the Chief Minister of Gibraltar to the United Nations Committee of 24 on 14 July.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We shall continue to fulfill our obligations to non-self-governing territories under chapter XI of the United Nations charter. The situation in Gibraltar is, however, complicated by historical realities, particularly the treaty of Utrecht. We stand by our commitment to the people of Gibraltar enshrined in the constitution.

Saudi Arabia

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Saudi Government about the religious persecution of Florencio Madriaga and Roque Atilon.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are aware of these cases but have no specific information about them. We and our EC partners seek opportunities to discuss human rights, including freedom of worship, with the Saudi authorities, who can be in no doubt of the strength of our views on this issue. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last did so during his visit to Saudi Arabia last month.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Rabies

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on current measures to prevent rabies from entering the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague) by my right hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk Coastal (Mr. Gummer) on 16 June 1992, Official Report, column 455-56.

Fish Farms

Mr. Hoon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions her Department has had on the implications of siting fish farm enterprises close to environmentally sensitive locations; and whether she will issue written guidance.

Mr. Jack: The siting of fish farms in inland waters is regulated by the town and country planning system, for which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is responsible.

Mr. Hoon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what business opportunities her Department's delegation that visited Turkey from 9 to 12 May identified in the fish farming sector.

Mr. Jack: During his visit to Turkey from 9 to 12 May this year my right hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, Coastal (Mr. Gummer) was accompanied by a team of businessmen including a representative from the fish farming industry. I understand that a number of potential opportunities were identified including in particular joint ventures for the development of fish farms. These have been notified to the industry. The fish farming sector in Turkey is at an early stage of development and the potential for business exists in the medium and long term.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will meet the Countryside Commission to discuss its programme of assessing the impact of renewable energy technologies on farmland and agriculture.

Mr. Jack: While I am always willing to meet the Countryside Commission to discuss matters of mutual interest, I understand that its research into the broader implications of renewable energy for the countryside has only recently been commissioned. I shall be pleased to consider the Commission's advice when that research is complete.

School Milk

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received regarding European Commission proposals to cut the subsidy on school milk; and what discussions have taken place on the matter in the EC Agriculture Council.

Mr. Jack: The Department received a number of representations from the dairy trade and local authorities opposing the Commission's proposal for a 50 per cent. cut in the rate of school milk subsidy. At the Agriculture Council on 20 to 21 September the United Kingdom, supported by several other member states, argued that the Commission's proposal was too drastic a measure for achieving budgetary savings and would threaten the viability of a popular scheme which had played an important role in encouraging consumption of milk and milk products. In the light of these arguments the Council agreed to limit the reduction in subsidy to 25 per cent. and to find the balance of the necessary savings by making technical adjustments aimed at improving the cost-effectiveness of the scheme. The Government are satisfied that this represents a sensible compromise which safeguards the viability of the scheme while at the same time taking account of the severe pressure on the Community budget.

Environmental Statistics

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how her Department was represented at the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe meeting on methodological issues of environmental statistics, held in Geneva on 20 to 23 September.

Mr. Jack: My Department's interest was represented by a member of the Government Statistical Service at a meeting on 20 to 23 September 1993 for a joint UN/ECG and Eurostat work session on specific methodological problems in environmental statistics. The meeting was held in Bratislava.

Equine Viral Arteritis

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures her Department has taken to establish which countries would be willing to accept United Kingdom exports of equidae vaccinated for equine viral arteritis; and if she will list those countries which (a) will and (b) will not grant access.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Ministry's Chief Veterinary Officer has written or is about to write to his counterparts in a number of third countries inquiring as to the animal health conditions which would have to be met to enable equidae vaccinated against equine viral arteritis to be eligible for import into those countries.

Current bilateral agreements with Australia and Barbados preclude the export to those countries of equidae vaccinated against EVA. The United States of America will accept vaccinated horses.

Cetaceans

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give details of the survey on the abundance and distribution of small cetaceans in the North sea; and which other countries are involved.

Mr. Jack: In 1993-94 my Department will contribute some £167,000 towards five cetacean research projects. The projects are:

1. Population biology of cetaceans
2. The effects of environmental change on whale populations
3. Interaction between cetaceans and man
4. ASCOBANS survey of cetaceans in the North sea and Baltic
5. Enhancing the acoustic detectability of fishing nets.

Whales

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the purpose of the meeting held in London on or around 11 October between the British Commissioner to the International Whaling Commission and other commissioners; which countries were represented; and what was discussed.

Mr. Jack: The United Kingdom Commissioner to the International Whaling Commission held talks in London on 11 October with colleagues from Australia, Brazil, France, Germany, Ireland, the Netherlands and the United States of America. These were informal, and concentrated on the forthcoming plans of the IWC to hold an intersessional meeting next February on the establishment of a southern ocean sanctuary, in preparation for decisions at the 46th annual meeting of the commission.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information the International Whaling Commission has regarding the export of whale meat from Norway to Japan; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The International Whaling Commission has no information on the commercial export of whale meat from Norway to Japan. However, I understand there has been a recent attempt to smuggle whale meat out of Norway which was discovered by the Norwegian authorities. Our embassy in Oslo confirms that this matter is currently under police investigation and we await reports from the Norwegian Government. The Government have made their views crystal clear on Norway's decision to resume commercial whaling activity and to proceed with their lethal scientific programme. We have pressed the Norwegian Government at the highest levels to reconsider their position and will continue to do so. Nobody should doubt that this is a matter of considerable concern to the Government.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the area figures in hectares on a county basis for (a) applications under the main scheme of the arable area payments scheme in 1993 apportioned to (i) cereals, (ii) oilseeds, (iii) protein crops and (iv) set-aside and (b) applications under the simplified scheme of the arable area payments scheme in 1993 apportioned to (x) cereals, (y) oilseeds and (z) protein crops.

Mrs. Shephard: The following table gives provisional figures for the five separate yield regions. Because applicants had to submit a single area aid application in respect of all their land, it is not possible to provide accurate figures on a county basis. I will, however, let the hon. Member have area figures related to the county in which the applicant's main holding is based as soon as they are available.

Fisheries Council

Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Fisheries Council held in Luxembourg on 20 October; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I represented the United Kingdom at the Council of EC Fisheries Ministers on 20 October, together with my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland.

Since accession, fishing by Spanish and Portuguese vessels in Community waters has been under arrangements which limit their numbers and the waters to which they have access. Under the Fisheries Section of the Act of Accession for Spain and Portugal, any decisions to change the arrangements for these countries would have to be made by the end of 1993.

At the Council, the Commission put forward a proposal for a Council regulation.

In substance, the proposal would give all EC member countries access to Community waters within the confines —endorsed at the June Council—of no change to the requirements of no increase in fishing effort and the preservation of relative stability. The document did not deal with the constraints which would be applied to Spain and Portugal under these proposals. Effectively, we were being asked to sign a blank cheque.

I said this was unacceptable and requested that Council should deal with all aspects of this matter together. I would need to be satisfied on the arrangements to apply in the Irish box and the North sea; on how fishing effort would be capped at the present level; and on how member states' shares of available quotas—"relative stability"—would be respected. Other member states made similar points.

The Commission presented a proposal which specifies the minimum information needed in fishing vessel licences throughout the Community. This should prove a useful tool in ensuring common standards of enforcement but it must not encroach on existing national licensing rules.

The Council discussed the market situation for fish and asked the Commission to review the existing minimum import price arrangements for each fish species and, as appropriate, to use its powers to continue these temporary measures until the end of the year or to adjust them. The Council will return to the question of the market situation at its December meeting.

I raised the question of industrial fishing. Currently there is considerable concern about its possibly harmful effects on the marine environment and the marine food chain and the consequences for fish stocks and sea birds. I am pleased to say that the Commissioner endorsed the importance of this issue and agreed that the Council should discuss it further.

No matter on the agenda was listed for a vote and no vote was taken.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Russian Elections

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Lord President of the Council if arrangements are to be made for the Russian elections in December to be observed by hon. Members.

Mr. Newton: We shall be responding positively to the Russian Government's invitation to send observers to monitor the parliamentary elections in Russia in December. The arrangements are under discussion.

ENVIRONMENT

Contaminated Land

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent meetings his Department has had with the Institute of Waste Management on inherited liabilities and prospective restoration of contaminated land.

Mr. Yeo: The Department liaises regularly with the Institute of Waste Management to discuss a wide range of environmental and waste management issues. However, the subject of inherited liabilities and prospective restoration has not been discussed in recent meetings.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library the paper on civil liability and contaminated land by his Department's contaminated land and liabilities division, presented to the third environmental insurance conference held in London on 15 October.

Mr. Yeo: I have placed a copy in the Library along with a copy of a speech on the same subject which I delivered to the British Bankers Association on 13 October 1993.

Rural Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the review of the priority areas of the Rural Development Commission announced on 30 July.

Mr. Yeo: I look forward to receiving the Rural Development Commission's recommendations shortly and expect it to make an announcement of the new rural development areas thereafter.

Noise Abatement Zones

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what conclusions he has reached on consideration of the Building Research Establishment's report in relation to noise abatement zones; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: My Department is considering the effectiveness of noise abatement zones in the light of the findings of the Building Research Establishment's "Review of Noise Abatement Zones in England and Wales 1976-1992". The review showed that the procedure for establishing and monitoring NAZs was complex and resource intensive for all the parties involved. In reaching conclusions, we must balance the need to limit the regulatory burden on businesses with the continuing need to deal effectively with noise pollution.

Open University

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will meet educationists at the Open university to discuss the benefits to environmental communication of and future developments to the new Open university course on enterprise and the environment.

Mr. Yeo: My Department would be interested to see any assessment of the impact of the Open university's course on enterprise and the environment.

EC Law

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the European Commission's 10th annual report on the monitoring of the application of Community law, Com (93) 320 final, so far as it refers to matters for which his Department has responsibility.

Mr. Yeo: We welcome the environment section of the Commission's report and look forward to debating it in the Environment Council in due course, as agreed on a United Kingdom initiative during our presidency.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has regarding the number of first-time buyers receiving tax relief on mortgage interest; what percentage of mortgage holders they represent; what percentage of mortgage advances in cash terms they represent; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: According to the 1991 Labour Force Survey, 3·5 million first-time buyer households in England were purchasing their property with a mortgage. They represent 42 per cent. of all mortgage holders.

The Labour Force Survey does not provide information on the amount of mortgage finance borrowed by first time buyers. However, using information collected by the Department from building societies and banks it is estimated that in 1992 first time buyers' mortgage advances accounted for 45 per cent. of all such advances.

EC Environment Institute

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what benefits accrue to the United Kingdom from resources committed to the European Commission's Environment Institute in Ispra.

Mr. Yeo: The nature of the work undertaken within the various component institutes of the Commission's joint research centre, including the Environment Institute, is such that the resultant benefits are designed to accrue broadly to the European Community as a whole. As a consequence, the benefits that flow from Community resources committed to these activities are shared by all 12 member states, including the United Kingdom. The specific benefits of the JRC institutes' activities accruing to any one member state are, however, not easy to isolate and are not routinely assessed.

Housing

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what proposals he has to make changes to (a) section 58, (b) section 59(1), (c) section 60, (d) section 62, (e) section 64 and (f) section 65 of the Housing Act 1985;

(2) what plans he has to introduce new legislation on amendments to existing legislation relating to the provisions of part III of the Housing Act 1985.

Sir George Young: In order to ensure fairer access to permanent social housing for those who need it, the Government propose to reform the homelessness provisions in the Housing Act 1985. We want to restore confidence in the housing waiting list, and to get away from the present position where, in some areas, the only route in to social housing may be to become statutorily homeless. We will be consulting on our proposals in due course, which will cover steps local authorities can take to prevent people from becoming homeless, and to increase the supply of rented housing in co-operation with private landlords.

Climate Change

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress made at the negotiations held in Geneva in September on (a) financing and (b) ratification of the United Nations convention on climate change.

Mr. Yeo: At the international negotiating committee meeting in August, good progress was made towards preparing for the first conference of parties to the convention, which is expected to take place in Berlin early in 1995. On financing, detailed preliminary discussions took place on support for developing countries through the global environment facility, the interim financial mechanism of the convention. Thirty-six countries have now ratified the convention. Fifty ratifications are needed to bring the convention into force. The United Kingdom has undertaken, along with our G7 and EC partners, to ratify by the end of 1993.

Annual Environmental Review

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for The Environment what was the original publication date of the annual environmental review; when he now expects the review report to be published; and what is the reason for the delay.

Mr. Yeo: We will publish the third year report in the series of White Papers on the Environment in the new year. This will allow us to take account both of the outcome of the annual public expenditure survey and production of the United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development. We had no other date in mind and there has been no delay.

Noise

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many complaints relating to noise have been (a) reported to local authorities and (b) investigated by local authorities under the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Yeo: The Department of the Environment "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics" HMSO 1992 indicates that during 1990-91, 136,609 complaints about noise were received by local authorities, relating to the Control of Pollution Act 1974 and the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Of these, 31,721 were considered to be justified as statutory nuisances and in 6,113 cases abatement notices were served.

The 1990 Act came into operation on 1 January 1991 and separate figures for the number of complaints investigated under that Act in 1990-91 are not available.

Community Care Programme

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of dwelling units which need to be built or converted each year, for the next three years, in order to provide accommodation to meet the requirements of the community care programme; and what is his estimate of the cost of this provision.

Sir George Young: Community care policy came into full operation earlier this year; its impact on housing demand is expected to be gradual and progressive. Local authorities include information about community care in their housing strategy statements, which inform local decision-making about resource allocation.

Environmental Programmes

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish the third-year report on the Government's environmental strategy set out in the 1990 White Paper, "This Common Inheritance".

Mr. Yeo: The Government will publish the third year report on the White Paper, "This Common Inheritance" in the new year.

Valuation Offices

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the reasons why he has asked his Department's valuation offices to ask their tribunal members if they are currently parish or town councillors.

Mr. Baldry: From time to time, the Department seeks information about trends in the composition of the membership of the valuation tribunal service. In this case, the question related to membership of all local authorities, not just parish or town councils.

Kirkstall Valley, Leeds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will immediately call in the proposals by Berkshire Properties to develop the Kirkstall valley in Leeds and order a public inquiry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Should they be minded to grant planning consent for the proposed development in the Kirstall valley, the Leeds development corporation has assured my Department that the planning application will be referred to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State so that he can decide whether or not it should be called-in for public inquiry.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he had received in the consultation excercise on THORP before 4 October; how many of these were in favour of THORP going ahead; and how many against.

Mr. Yeo: Over 40,000 responses were received during the consultation exercise, of which more than half arrived in the last two days of the consultation. The responses are still being counted and assessed. More detailed figures will be made available once all the responses have been considered.

Council Tax

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is his latest estimate of the total number in each council band in England of (a) dwellings, (b) exempt dwellings, (c) chargeable dwellings, (e) chargeable dwellings entitled to a single discount for the purposes of council tax, (f) chargeable dwellings that are entitled to two discounts for the purposes of council tax and (g) total equivalent number of dwellings after discounts, exemptions, and disabled relief;

(2) what is his latest estimate number of band D equivalents in each council tax band in England;

(3) what is his latest estimate of the number of dwellings on the valuation list in England that were exempt in each class A to Q.

Mr. Gummer pursuant to the answer, 22 July 1993, Official Report, column 346: The information requested is as follows:

EDUCATION

Primary Schools

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will provide for all local education authorities the percentage of total schools expenditure allocated to primary schools for the latest year for which figures are available and list them in rank order.

Mr. Forth: The table sets out, for each local education authority, the percentage of the aggregated schools budget allocated to primary schools for the financial year 1993-94, and is derived from budget statements available to the Department as at 7 July.

Notes to Table

(1) "n/a" denotes either that no budget statement was available at 7 July, or that Part 1 of the authority's statement did not provide a primary/secondary breakdown of the Aggregated Schools Budget.

(2) The primary sector's percentage share of a local education authority's Aggregated Schools Budget will be heavily influenced by a variety of factors, including the respective numbers of primary and secondary grant maintained schools in the authority's area: the respective contributions made by schools and further education institutions to the totality of provision for the age-range 16-18: and (in the case of the authorities marked[1]) the inclusion of special schools' funding within the Aggregated Schools Budget.

EDUCATION

Hasmonean Preparatory School

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he expects to make a decision on the application by Hasmonean preparatory school to become a voluntary-aided school.

Mr. Robin Squire: A decision will be made as soon as possible.

Technology Colleges

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his Department's proposed budget for the technology college programme for 1994-95 and 1995-96; and how many schools it is proposed will become technology colleges in September 1994.

Mr. Robin Squire: We have not set any budget for the technology colleges programme in 1994-95 or 1995-96, nor have we set a target for the number of schools to begin operating as technology colleges from September 1994. The budget will depend on the number of schools that apply to become technology colleges and their individual needs, and on the outcome of the public expenditure survey.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list by local education authority those secondary schools which have received funds under the technology schools initiative, stating in each case, (a) the level of funding received and (b) whether the school is a county, voluntary-aided or grant-maintained school.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is set out in the table. For schools which have been allocated support in the current financial year, 1993-94, expenditure may not yet have been incurred, and grant or supplementary credit approval may not yet have been claimed from the Department.

School Inspections

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what criteria Her Majesty's inspectorate are using in its inspections of (a) individual primary schools and (b) individual secondary schools;

(2) what measures Her Majesty's inspectorate are taking to ensure that its criteria for inspecting schools are available to (a) parents, (b) staff, (c) parents of potential pupils and other interested members of the local community and (d) governors;

(3) how the criteria for inspecting schools differ from those used by Her Majesty's inspectorate before the new arrangements were introduced following the Education (Schools) Act 1992.

Mr. Robin Squire: The arrangements for inspecting schools under the Education (Schools) Act 1992 are a matter for Ofsted—The Office of Standards in Education.

I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: There have been no recent meetings or correspondence between Mr. Patrick Doyle and this Department.

Schools

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the number of (a) county, (b) voluntary-aided and (c) grant-maintained secondary schools for each local education authority; and, in each case, what is the total number of pupils in each category.

Mr. Robin Squire: Information on county, voluntary aided and self-governing secondary schools and pupils in January 1992, the latest date for which comparable information is available, is shown in the table. For completeness, the table also shows the number of schools currently operating as self-governing.

[1] Information collected in January 1992 Schools' Census
[2] Includes some secondary schools operating as self-governing in October 1993

Parental Ballots

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many parental ballots on grant-maintained status were held in (a) September 1992 and (b) September 1993; and, in each case, how many resulted in a majority of parents voting (i) yes and (ii) no.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is given in the table:

	"Yes" votes	"No" votes	Total ballots
September 1992	15	1	16
September 1993	3	6	9

Note: Overall, of the 1,280 ballots so far held on grant-maintained status, 77 per cent. have resulted in a yes vote.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Boswell: No cost accrues to this Department. It has no overseas premises and no staff working abroad.

TRANSPORT

Transport Council

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the result of the Transport Council held in Brussels on 28 September.

Mr. MacGregor: The Transport Council met in Brussels on 28 September. My noble Friend Lord Caithness and I represented the United Kingdom.

Political agreement was reached on the text of the directive on road haulage taxation and charging, and the regulation on road haulage cabotage to give effect to the conclusions reached at the Council in June.

The Council reached agreement on the regulation amending the regulation on a code of conduct for computer reservation systems; formal adoption will follow shortly. The regulation deals with a range of practical and competition issues which have become apparent since the original regulation was adopted. In particular it aims to remove the scope for anti-competitive behaviour which might result if an airline were allowed to run a commercially available CRS system in close conjunction with its own in-house computer.

The Council discussed the Commission's communication on road safety. We stressed the considerable success the United Kingdom had achieved by action at local and national level and argued that Community action should be directed at improving vehicle safety standards rather than at harmonisation of speed and blood alcohol limits which took no account of differing road conditions and national attitudes.

The Council agreed to a general discussion of relations with Switzerland at the October General Affairs Council prior to consideration of negotiating mandates on air and road transport at the Transport Council in November.

In view of the significant restructuring taking place in some member states the Council agreed that a debate on community rail policy should be held at the Transport Council in November. We explained that the reforms in the United Kingdom would separate rail infrastructure from services, and encourage the involvement of the private sector. We stressed the importance of implementation of the 1991 access directive by all member states, which the United Kingdom has implemented, and asked the Commission to examine the directive to consider how it would fit with the new industry structures.

The Council reached political agreement on slight modifications to the guidelines for Community trans-European networks for combined transport, roads and inland waterways agreed at the Council in June. Formal adoption awaits the opinion of the European Parliament.

There were no votes taken.

British Rail Telecommunications Ltd.

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made in privatising British Rail Telecommunications Ltd.

Mr. MacGregor: The Government and British Rail intend to privatise British Rail Telecommunications Ltd. by the end of 1994. They wish to involve the private sector to the maximum extent possible in the management, maintenance and exploitation of the British Rail telecommunications network. The network provides two types of service to BR at present: operational—especially communications relating to signalling—and business services. There is also some spare capacity on the network which could be exploited for external telecommunications customers.

BRT is to be restructured by April 1994 with new management. BR will be devising appropriate commercial arrangements to be put in place between BRT and the railway before these activities are privatised. These matters and others will be detailed in an information memorandum which is expected to be issued during the first half of next year. Railtrack will have a major role to play because of its responsibility for safety and as a customer.

The Government and BR believe that there are excellent opportunities for private sector involvement in rail telecommunications while safeguarding operational requirements. BR will consult the private sector about the details of the privatisation of BRT.

Transport Ministers' Meeting

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the outcome of the informal meeting of EC Transport Ministers on 27 September.

Mr. MacGregor: EC Transport Ministers met on the day before the September Transport Council at the request of the presidency to hear presentations from the European airline associations. In the ministerial discussion which followed, I stressed that the success of British airlines was founded on commercial, private sector management and emphasis on the customer. I emphasised that there should be no going back on the liberalising third aviation package and that Governments and the Community should limit themselves to areas where only they could take action, that the Community should tackle over-regulation and that urgent action should be taken on state aids and ground-handling monopolies. This was supported by much of the evidence given by the associations.

Given the informal nature of the meeting, no decisions were taken, but a useful discussion took place.

Biodiesel Trials

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been learnt from the emissions tests carried out on one of the buses used in the Reading Buses biodiesel fuel trial.

Mr. Freeman: The conclusions of tests carried out by the Transport Research Laboratory are that changes in most emission rates are small and not clearly attributable to the type of fuel. The exceptions are visible smoke which was significantly lower with biodiesel, and particulate which, contrary to the reported results of others, was substantially higher. A copy of the TRL report has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Motorway Service Areas (Disabled Persons)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what surveys his Department has conducted of the provision of (a) night-time services and (b) 24-hour facilities for the disabled at motorway service areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The Department requires the operators of all motorway service areas in England to provide a range of facilities, including free short-term parking, toilets, fuel and food and drink, 24 hours a day every day of the year. These facilities must be available to all motorway users including the disabled.

The Department does not use surveys to ensure compliance with its requirements, but pursues any complaints received with the operators concerned. If the hon. Member has a particular difficulty in mind, perhaps he would write to me.

European Regional Development Funds

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details of European regional development funds which have been allocated for transport initiatives in the last 12 months and which are proposed for the next 12 months.

Mr. MacGregor: European regional development fund resources are allocated to multi-annual regional programmes, and are administered locally by regional committees which decide priorities and assess potential schemes. For 1993-94 my Department estimate that transport schemes will attract £33 million in support from the ERDF. Plans for 1994 to 1996 have not yet been finalised.

Hazardous Goods

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the new labelling system for hazardous goods in transit published by the Health and Safety Commission.

Mr. Key: The Health and Safety Commission published in June a consultative document, CD63, on proposals for new regulations on the classification, packaging and labelling of goods for carriage by road and rail in preparation for the opening up of rail freight services to private sector operators and in order to harmonise the rules for the carriage of dangerous goods by rail and road in line with the United Nations recommendations. A copy of the consultative document is in the Library. The Health and Safety Executive is now considering responses to it and I expect to receive the Commission's recommendations and draft regulations at the end of the year.

Bus Deregulation

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all the local bus companies that operate services in south Yorkshire that replied to his consultation document in respect of how the 1985 deregulation of service arrangements are working; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The only bus company based in South Yorkshire that responded was South Riding. In total some 160 replies were received. I am considering these and expect to announce the results shortly.

London Underground

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he hopes to make a statement in respect of his quasi-judicial role in London Underground Ltd.'s intention to seek closure of the Central line service between Epping and Ongar; and how far negotiations have proceeded to date.

Mr. Freeman: Following receipt of objections to London Underground Ltd.'s proposed closure of the Epping to Ongar service, the London Regional Passengers Committee is to hold a public hearing at Ongar on Monday 8 November, in accordance with the procedures laid down in the Transport Act 1962. The committee will then report to the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State will make his decision on the closure proposal once he has considered this report and any other material factors.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Health and Safety

Mr. Dobson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish dates of all meetings with outside persons or bodies and titles of all non-departmental briefing papers or any associated material concerning the possible amendment of sections 1(1), 1(2) or 15(1) of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974; what plans he has to amend sections 1(1), 1(2) or 15(1) of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 in respect of matters relating to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The seven deregulation task forces, established earlier this year by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, have all considered health and safety matters to varying degrees in sector specific or cross sectoral ways. Details of all task force meetings, consultations or papers could not be provided except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table listing (a) all regulations suggested by his Department to the Health and Safety Commission or by the Health and Safety Commission to his Department as candidates for revocation as part of the deregulation initiative, (b) the purpose and function of each of these regulations, (c) whether it is suggested that the regulations be (i) amended, (ii) abolished, (iii) replaced with self-regulation or (iv) replaced with other regulation; whether, for each regulation, revocation without replacement or with self-regulation would require amendment of section 1(1), 1(2) or 15(1) of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Possible sector-specific and cross-sectoral candidates for administrative simplification and reform by the Health and Safety Commission are currently being considered by the seven deregulation task forces, established earlier this year by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. The task forces have not yet completed their work, but their proposals will be submitted to the Government in due course for consideration.

Further possible proposals for reform by the HSC may be identified by the HSC's own task groups which have been asked to complete their work by April next year.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Eggar: The costs to this Department of its personnel temporarily based overseas in 1993-94 are estimated to be in the region of £1·3 million, on the basis of expenditure in the first half of the current financial year. This Department does not have to meet the costs of any overseas premises.

Precise figures for earlier years are not readily available, but are likely to have been broadly similar to the current year in real terms.

EC Public Utilities

Mr. Cash: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps are being taken to ensure that public utilities in other EC countries actively encourage suppliers from the United Kingdom to participate in their contracts.

Mr. Needham: Under the Utilities Directive 90/531/EEC contracting bodies are, in most cases, obliged to publish calls for competition in the Official Journal of the European Communities, through periodic notices of planned procurement, notices of qualification systems or specific contract notices. These notices can also be accessed on the tenders electronic daily database. Since 1 January 1993 contract notices have been published in the Official Journal by utilities in all the major member states and even some by utilities in Greece, Portugal and Spain who do not yet have to implement the directives.

My Department actively supports United Kingdom suppliers in EC markets and I have appointed an export promoter on loan from industry to focus specifically in this area. My Department is also mounting a campaign to bring public procurement opportunities in the Community to the attention of United Kingdom industry, particularly small and medium-sized enterprises.

Finally, I have just initiated a review to identify problems faced by United Kingdom businesses trying to sell to public purchasers in other EC member states, including those included within the scope of directive 90/531/EEC. My Department will ensure that everything possible is done to solve specific problems and will provide feedback to the EC Commission as necessary. This review is expected to be completed early next year and the results will be used in my Department's work supporting British exporters.

European Community Public Procurement Directive

Mr. Cash: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he is taking to encourage the EC to ensure that European Community public procurement directive (90/531/EEC) is equally implemented by all relevant member states; and with what results.

Mr. Needham: The European Commission continues to put pressure on all member states to eliminate any delays in implementing single market measures, including public procurement directive 90/531/EEC. It regularly produces a table showing the state of transposition of such measures by EC member states which it presents to ministers at meetings of the Internal Market Council. It also holds meetings as appropriate on a bilateral basis with the authorities of member states to discuss specific difficulties on transposition. In addition, the Commission has three advisory committees to discuss its proposals for monitoring the application and effectiveness of the public procurement directives.

Directive 90/531/EEC, which is designed to open up supplies and works contracts for utilities in the water, energy, transport, and telecommunications sectors to Community-wide competition, is required to have entered into force on 1 January 1993 with derogations for Spain —1 January 1996—and for Greece and Portugal—1 January 1998. The Commission's latest report indicates that six member states, including the United Kingdom, have so far implemented the directive, Belgium has drafted the necessary domestic legislation and Germany and Italy have yet to notify any implementation measures. The Government will continue to take a close interest in progress towards proper implementation by all member states.

Atomic Energy Authority

Mr. Milligan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial target and capital expenditure limit have been set for the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority for 1993-94.

Mr. Eggar: The United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority's financial target for 1993-94 has been set as a 12·1 per cent. return on average capital employed, calculated according to the current cost convention. The target is based on the profit earned on ordinary activities before long-term interest is payable. I have also approved the AEA's capital expenditure programme for the year at £18·9 million.

Reinsurance (Acts of Terrorism) Act 1993

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what agreements have been laid before Parliament under the Reinsurance (Acts of Terrorism) Act 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The agreement with Pool Reinsurance Company Ltd. was concluded, with the consent of the Treasury, on 30 July and was laid before Parliament on 30 July. Updated versions of schedules 5, 6 and 7 to the agreement—the forms of the legal contracts between Pool Reinsurance Company and its members—were laid before Parliament today. The changes are not substantive but serve to simplify the administrative arrangements between Pool Reinsurance Company Ltd. and its members.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is also undertaking, with the consent of the Treasury, to guarantee a credit facility which has been obtained by Pool Reinsurance Company Ltd. from a group of banks to ensure the financing of the arrangements. The guarantee together with a copy of the credit facility was also laid before Parliament on 30 July.

Following the conclusion of the agreement, Pool Reinsurance Company Ltd. was authorised on 30 July to carry on reinsurance business in accordance with the Insurance Companies Act 1982.

The authorisation of the company, the conclusion of the agreement and the granting of the guarantee, together with the credit facility, mark the completion of the establishment of the arrangements announced by my right hon. Friend on 21 December. The arrangements established enable the Secretary of State to act as reinsurer of last resort are effective from 1 January 1993. Industry and commerce in Great Britain can now be confident that firm arrangements exist to provide for insurance against terrorist damage, provided they take out such insurance.

Nuclear Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he has taken to support the export activities of the United Kingdom nuclear industry since 1979.

Mr. Eggar: In association with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and Embassies overseas, my Department provides general support for the export activities of the nuclear industry, subject to necessary regulation in the areas of non-proliferation, safety and environmental protection. Where specifically requested, umbrella co-operation agreements have been negotiated between Governments. In addition, the industry can make use of the comprehensive package of assistance offered to all exporters by my Department.

EC Law

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many responses he received to his consultation document reviewing the implementation and enforcement of EC law in the United Kingdom; how many copies of the document were printed; how many were (a) sold and (b) otherwise distributed; and if he will place in the Library copies of the responses.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To date, over 70 submissions have been received in response to the call for comments on the review of the implementation and enforcement of EC law in the United Kingdom. A total of 1,500 copies of the review were printed. Approximately 500 copies have been sold to date. A further 440 complimentary copies were distributed to those individuals, businesses, trade associations and representative organisations which assisted in the review and to the press, parliamentarians and others.

I am not at liberty to place copies of the responses in the Library of the House. Publications of respondents' comments is a matter for them. However, in line with recommendation 9 of the review and subject to the confidentiality which respondents have a right to expect, a summary of responses is being prepared for distribution to all those who contributed to the consultation exercise. I will place a copy of this, together with a list of respondents, in the Library of the House as soon as all the responses have been analysed.

Defence Industry Diversification

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the criteria used by Her Majesty's Government in compiling the United Kingdom bid to the EC KONVER fund on defence industry diversification; which regional organisations were consulted in preparation of the KONVER bid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Kingdom's proposal for a KONVER programme is based on the European Commission's letter of 28 May to the permanent representative of the United Kingdom to the European Communities which is available in the House of Commons Library. The United Kingdom programme proposes eight selection criteria to be used to select projects for grant assistance. Projects to be given priority are those which:

(i) accelerate diversification, where possible, so as to render such areas less dependent on this sector;
(ii) encourage the development of commercially viable businesses in any sector;
(iii) demonstrate good value for money and include quantifiable and measureable targets to be monitored;
(iv) involve an integrated approach to regeneration which will benefit the whole of the area which is the subject uof the application;
(v) involve a high degree of leverage, of finance from other public and private sector sources;
(vi) are innovatory;
(vii) complement existing schemes and services provided under relevant CSFs, Community initiatives and national measures.

In compiling the programme the following bodies were consulted:

Training and Enterprise Councils
Local Enterprise Companies
Association of Metropolitan Authorities
Association of County Councils
Association of District Councils
Association of Local Authorities of Northern Ireland
Convention of Scottish Local Authorities
Council of Welsh Districts
Assembly of Welsh Counties
Scottish Enterprise
Highlands and Islands Enterprise
Northern Ireland Industrial Development Board
Local Government International Bureau
National Council for Voluntary Organisation (England and Wales)
Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action
Scottish Council for Voluntary Organisations
National Council for Industry Training Organisations
London Boroughs Association
Association of London Authorities
Rural Development Commission
Industrial Common Ownership Movement.

Mining Industry

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for the past five years in both British Coal and United Kingdom private licensed mines (a) the fatality rate per 100,000 manshifts and (b) the total number of fatalities.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 20 October 1993]: The information requested, which has been provided by the Health and Safety Executive, is as follows:

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what comparison his Department has made of the safety record of British Coal's deep mine operations with those in the United States of America and elsewhere.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 20 October 1993]: Meaningful comparisons are generally not possible because of the different mining conditions and the different bases on which such information is recorded in each country.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table showing the amount of deep-mined coal produced in the United Kingdom, from 1982 to 1992, distinguishing between categories used for household, coking, industrial boilers, and electricity power generation, which were produced, using domestically exported and imported coal, respectively, together with the comparable production and use of opencast-produced coal; and what was the cost of imported coal at 1993 prices for each year shown in the table.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 18 October 1993]: The information readily available is as follows:

HEALTH

Unemployment

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people aged (a) 16 or 17 years and (b) 18 to 24 years living in (i) York parliamentary constituency, (ii) North Yorkshire, (iii) Yorkshire and Humberside and (iv) Great Britain were unemployed according to the 1991 census.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Number of residents recorded in 1991 Census as unemployed

Ambulance Service

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of ambulances in each service in England responded within (a) eight minutes and (b) 14 to 20 minutes to emergency calls in (i) 1992-93 and (ii) the first half of 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: Information for 1992-93 is shown in the table. This information is collected annually and, therefore, no figures are available for the first half of 1993-94.

Clothier Inquiry

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish the findings of the Clothier inquiry.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The independent inquiry into incidents at Grantham and Kesteven general hospital by Sir Cecil Clothier and his team is likely to report its findings in January 1994. The report will be published in full.

Operations

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest estimate available to her of the annual number of operations in (a) NHS hospitals and (b) private hospitals in England for (i) hip replacement, (ii) cataract and (iii) varicose veins.

Mr. Sackville: We do not collect information on activity in private hospitals. For national health service hospitals the latest available information through the hospital episode statistics is shown in the table.

Estimated number of finished consultant episodes in national health service hospitals, England, 1989-90

Operation	Number of completed episodes
Operations for removal of cataract	92,184
Operation on varicose vein of leg	63,320
Hip operations	50,790

National Health Service Chief Executive

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to appoint a successor to Sir Duncan Nichol as NHS chief executive.

Dr. Mawhinney: Early in 1994.

Deregulation

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will withdraw the letter on deregulation, residential care homes, private nursing homes and hospitals issued by her Department on 3 August; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: No. While I have no intention of withdrawing or weakening any regulation which protects people in residential and nursing homes, it is entirely proper to consult home owners and managers as to the appropriateness and complexity of regulations affecting such homes.

Ministerial Visit

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many civil servants were engaged in her visit to Thailand, Malaysia, Australia and Hong Kong from 7 to 17 September; and what was the cost of the visit.

Dr. Mawhinney: Four. The trade mission was not supported financially by any Government Department. The cost to the Department of Health was £31,000, comprising travelling and subsistence expenses for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and accompanying officials. The companies involved paid their own expenses and also met the cost of local transport, receptions and seminars for the whole party.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the benefits accrued to the NHS, and the value of them, during her visit to Thailand, Malaysia, Australia and Hong Kong; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: My right hon. Friend's trade mission to Australia and the far east was organised by the Association of British Healthcare Industries in order to develop existing trade relationships and seek out new opportunities for partnerships, exports and local investment.

The visit did much to expand the export drive of the British health care industry, which, like that of our other industries, is vital to sustain the economic foundations on which our health and social care system is based.

The United Kingdom national health service is a much-admired model of health care and an international benchmark for comparison. Through National Health Service Overseas Enterprises, the official marketing arm of the NHS in England, many of the skills and services which are available in the United Kingdom health service can be marketed overseas. Profits from these activities come back to the NHS.

As a result of the mission both the NHSOE and the representatives of the British health care industry were able to strengthen their position in each of the countries visited through new and important trade and manufacturing links, including some specific business opportunities.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice has been issued by her Department to NHS trusts regarding the need for those appointed as chief executive to have experience of working in the national health service.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list, by wave, the end of year financial position of each self-governing trust for 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: This information is contained in the 1992-93 annual accounts of national health service trusts. We are assembling and summarising these accounts in accordance with statutory deadlines. Comprehensive information will be available at the end of November 1993.

NHS Review

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish her review of the structure and management of the NHS.

Dr. Mawhinney: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be making a statement to the House today. Copies of "Managing the new NHS", a background document which provides further information in support of the decisions she will be announcing, are available in the Library.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list, by local authority, the average time it takes to find nursing home places for elderly people transferring from hospitals;

(2) if she will list for each London borough the number of specialist nursing home places for each year from 1990; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

Health Services, Ealing

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions she has had with the London borough of Ealing and Ealing NHS hospital trust.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have had no direct discussions but a number have taken place locally with officials from the North West Thames regional health authority.

Jarman Index

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to update the Jarman index.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is not a matter for which Ministers have responsibility.

Northumbria Ambulance Service Trust

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with officials of the Northumbria Ambulance Service NHS trust on the subject of accounting procedures.

Mr. Sackville: Officials have reminded the Northumbria Ambulance Service NHS trust of the statutory accounting procedures for NHS trusts. These procedures are contained in the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 and in the NHS "Trusts Manual For Accounts", copies of which will be placed in the Library.

Nurses (Clothing and Equipment)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what items of work clothing and equipment are issued as standard to every NHS hospital nurse; and what is the cost to the NHS of one of each item.

Mr. Sackville: There is no standard clothing issued by all hospitals. It is a local purchasing decision for the hospital concerned and the price is dependent on size, quality and colour of uniform.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she has taken to ensure the stability of the London ambulance service.

Mr. Sackville: South West Thames regional health authority is responsible for the effective functioning of the London ambulance service. We understand that it is making progress in implementing the recommendations of the inquiry into the LAS, introducing new accountability arrangements and improving the authority's oversight of the LAS. We further understand that the LAS has developed a financial plan for discussion with purchasing authorities and has received transitional funding to assist in handling the loss of some of its patient transport service contracts. Ministers remain committed to the LAS as a Londonwide service, matching where possible health authority, police and fire service boundaries.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what qualitative guidance her Department has given South West Thames regional health authority on the procurement of information technology for the London ambulance service.

Mr. Sackville: The National Health Service Supplies Authority issued new guidance on information technology procurement in July this year. A copy of this guidance, "Procurement of Information Systems Effectively", is available in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with South West Thames regional health authority concerning proposals for computer systems for the London ambulance service.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State receives regular reports from South West Thames regional health authority on the progress of the London ambulance service on the implementation of the recommendations of the inquiry report, which includes directions on the implementation of any future computer-aided dispatch system.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration she has given to compensating those patients and their families who had treatment that could have infected them with Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo) to my hon. Friend the Member for Faversham (Sir R. Moate) on 27 May at column 671.

NHS Management Executive

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pamphlets the national health service management executive published from January 1992 to January 1993 and from January 1993 to October 1993; if she will list the title, the recipients and the cost; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: During the period January 1992 to October 1993, the national health service management executive issued 61 pamphlets, leaflets and brochures. The table gives the description, cost and to whom they were sent. Copies of the documents will be placed in the Library.

Traffic Casualties

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each year since 1979 the amount of money collected by the national health service in respect of payment for ambulance services to traffic casualties.

Mr. Sackville: No charge is made for the national health service emergency ambulance service.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each year since 1979 the amount of money collected by the national health service in respect of payment for hospital treatment of traffic casualties.

Mr. Sackville: Income received from Road Traffic Act charges for each year from 1979-80 to 1990-91 in cash terms for England, is set out in the table.

1979-80	1,438

Note: The information for subsequent years is not collected centrally.

Clinical Grading Appeals

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list, by region of origin, the number of outstanding clinical grading appeals at (a) district, (b) regional and (c) national level.

Mr. Sackville: Of the 20,000 appeals outstanding in March 1993 there are now just over 6,000 outstanding. The details requested are shown in the table.

Smokers (Health Care)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to introduce guidelines to ensure equality of access to health care for smokers and non-smokers.

Mr. Sackville: A fundamental principle of the national health service, which is enshrined in the patients charter, is that clinical need continues to be the basis on which the NHS provides care to all. Decisions on the treatment of individual patients are properly a matter for clinical judgment by the clinicians responsible for their care, taking account of factors such as the likely success of that treatment. We have no plans to introduce further guidance in this area.

NHS Supplies Authority

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to privatise any of the services provided by the NHS Supplies Authority; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Some services provided by the National Health Service Supplies Authority are already contracted out and the authority plans to expand the use of private sector partners where there is added value to services in doing so. Further development of these plans will be kept under review and discussed between the NHS Management Executive and the NHS Supplies Authority as part of the normal management review process.

Depo-medrone

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether she will establish an immediate investigation into the level of the use of the drug Depo-medrone in epidural therapy within the NHS;

(2) what advice has been issued by her Department to NHS doctors regarding possible side effects of using the drug Depo-medrone in epidural therapy;

(3) what representations have been received by her Department regarding the possible side-effects of the use of the drug Depo-medrone in epidural therapy.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has received a small number of inquiries from doctors on the side-effects of Depo-medrone when used by the epidural route and from patients who have received Depo-medrone epidurally.

Depo-medrone is not licensed for epidural administration. The Department has issued no specific advice to doctors on this issue. The data sheet produced by the manufacturer and authorised by the Licensing Authority carries a clear warning that Depo-medrone should not be used for epidural administration. In addition, the data sheet contains warnings of the side-effects associated with the use of Depo-medrone when administered via non-licensed routes.

Departmental officials are in discussion with relevant medical professional bodies about current clinical practice.

Adoption

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to publish a White Paper on adoption.

Mr. Bowis: Shortly.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list those self-governing trusts that have filed their current accounts, indicating what percentage of the total this represents.

Mr. Sackville: All national health service trusts have produced annual accounts for 1992-93. A small number are still subject to audit.

Health Services, London

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effects of the Tomlinson proposals to close accident and emergency departments in central London on (a) the London ambulance service and (b) other central London casualty units; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Proposals for changes in the pattern of accident and emergency provision in inner London are being considered in the context of the overall changes to London's health services. As part of this process account is being taken of studies carried out by the London ambulance service. Additionally, the London implimentation group is taking other expert advice to ensure the implications of specific proposals are assessed fully.

Camden and Islington Health Authority

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with Camden and Islington health authority concerning its contracting decisions.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. Camden and Islington health authority is responsible for commissioning health care for its residents. We understand the authority has issued for public consultation its proposals for contracting from next year.

Pensioners (NHS Services)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest available estimate of the full cost to the Exchequer of introducing (a) free national health service sight tests and (b) free national health service dental examinations for all people over the state retirement age.

Dr. Mawhinney: The estimated costs of extending free national health service sight tests and free national health service dental examinations to all people above the state retirement age who are not currently eligible on other grounds are about £30 million and £10 million, respectively, in 1993-94.

NHS Staff (Attacks)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what figures have been collected by her Department in relation to physical attacks on staff in national health service hospitals for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Sackville: None. These figures are not available centrally.

Bloomfield Report

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she intends to respond to the Bloomfield report.

Dr. Mawhinney: We will announce proposals for the future system of remuneration in the general dental services in due course.

NHS Sight Tests

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of national health service sight tests paid for by the general ophthalmic services for each six-monthly period since October 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: The numbers of national health service sight tests paid for in each six-monthly period since October 1990 in England are shown in the table.

Numbers of national health service sight tests by financial year
England

Six monthly period	Millions
October 1990 to March 1991	2·129
April 1991 to September 1991	2·411
October 1991 to March 1992	2·569
April 1992 to September 1992	2·695
October 1992 to March 1993	2·832

Dentistry

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest figures for estimated annual income from NHS dental examination charges.

Dr. Mawhinney: The estimated income from dental examination charges is £63 million in 1993-94.

Hospital Doctors (Clothing and Equipment)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what items of work clothing and equipment are issued as standard to every NHS hospital doctor; and what is the cost to the NHS of one of each item.

Dr. Mawhinney: No standard clothing is issued to doctors by all hospitals, and no items of equipment are issued as standard: these are matters for local determination.

Drugs

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether NHS patients who are to be treated using a drug in a manner which runs contrary to the advice of the manufacturer of that drug have a formal right to be informed of this fact.

Mr. Sackville: Under the terms of the Medicines Act, if a doctor believes that an unlicensed drug, or the use of a licensed drug for an unlicensed indication or unlicensed route of administration, is the only one suitable for a patient, he or she may supply or administer the drug. It is for doctors to use their training, knowledge and experience to weigh carefully the likely benefits of a drug against the anticipated risks before choosing the most appropriate treatment for a particular patient. If a doctor wishes to use an unlicensed drug, or a licensed drug for an unlicensed route of administration or unlicensed indication, it is entirely his or her own responsibility and he or she will be answerable to the consequences. The patients charter emphasises the right of national health service patients to be given a clear explanation of any treatment proposed, including any risks and alternatives, before deciding whether to agree to the treatment. It remains for the doctor concerned, in the exercise of clinical judgment, to decide the precise information a patient should receive and the terms in which the warning of risks should be given.

National Health Service Buildings, Leeds

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list (a) those buildings in Leeds currently used by NHS management executive staff and (b) the date at which the office space was bought or leased.

Mr. Sackville: National Health Service Management Executive staff in Leeds are all housed in Quarry house. Quarry house was built as a crown building. It first came into use on 6 July 1992.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Hospital Closures

8. Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from medical practitioners in Northern Ireland on the closure of hospitals in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Ancram: Several GPs have written to the Department of Health and Social Services about particular hospitals—for example, the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast, the Moyle hospital, Larne and the maternity unit at Tyrone county hospital, Omagh. The views of 43 GPs in the Downpatrick area about hospital services there were included in a report which was sent to the Department by the Downpatrick Community Health Committee.

Inter-party Talks

13. Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next hopes to meet together the leaders of the Northern Ireland political parties.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have frequent contact with each of the leaders on a range of issues but have no immediate plans to meet them together.

Belfast Airport

14. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from Northern Ireland Airport employees at Belfast international airport regarding privatisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I have received representations from the airport constabulary which I have discussed with them.

Voluntary Organisations

15. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met representatives of the Northern Ireland Council of Voluntary Organisations to discuss the role of voluntary organisations in the determination of the distribution of European Community structural funds; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Wheeler: On 1 February my right hon. and learned Friend discussed with representatives of the council a range of issues, including the next round of EC structural funds, and on 16 June gave the opening address at a conference organised by NICVA on "The Voluntary Sector and Europe". My own discussions with the Council on 30 September also covered structural funds issues.

Surface Links with Scotland

16. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from bodies and individuals in Northern Ireland concerning the surface links with Scotland.

Mr. Atkins: During consultations for the preparation of the transportation programme Northern Ireland 1994-1999 21 bodies made representations on surface links with Scotland.

IRA Funding

17. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he is taking to limit the funding of the IRA.

Sir John Wheeler: The RUC has primacy in investigating, arresting and securing the prosecution of terrorist racketeers and financiers and the Government are giving them every assistance in their efforts. A terrorist finance unit has been set up within the Northern Ireland Office and works closely with the RUC in investigations and in designing effective countermeasures against terrorist fundraising activities. The Government have introduced special investigative powers for terrorist finances, backed up by criminal penalties and increased sentences for terrorist offences.

Anglo-Irish Talks

18. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he is making in facilitating an agreement between the interested parties involved in the Northern Ireland peace process.

21. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for the future government of Northern Ireland.

29. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the latest position on talks over constitutional issues in Northern Ireland.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East (Mr. Barnes).

Health Care, Down

19. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representatives he has received from Down community health committee on matters relating to health care in Down district.

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Olner) earlier today.

Housing Site Applications

20. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what co-ordination takes place between the planning and environmental interests when new housing site applications are being considered.

Mr. Atkins: Every planning application is subject to a range of consultations, which include environmental interests in appropriate cases.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

22. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has held with political parties regarding the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: My colleagues and I have been maintaining contacts with the main constitutional political parties in Northern Ireland and the Irish Government over the past weeks to establish how best we can make political progress. A new and more broadly based agreement or structure could be one of the outcomes of the talks process, arrived at through direct discussions between those concerned.

Dublin Bombings

23. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with (a) the RUC and (b) Ministers or officials of the Irish Republic regarding the 1973 Dublin bombings.

Sir John Wheeler: Any such discussions would be confidential.

Higher Education

24. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the number of students entering higher education in 1993-94.

Mr. Ancram: An estimated 8,070 students will enter full-time higher education in Northern Ireland institutions in 1993-94. This represents an estimated increase of 2 per cent. on 1992-93 and a 41 per cent. increase since 1988-89. Information is not yet available on the numbers of part-time students, postgraduate students, or those commencing higher education courses outside Northern Ireland.

Hospital Closures

25. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last discussed with members of the Eastern health and social services board the question of the closure of hospitals in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mrs. Jackson) earlier today.

Cross-border Talks

26. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next hopes to meet the Irish Foreign Minister to discuss cross-border issues.

Sir John Wheeler: I look forward to meeting the Irish Foreign Minister, Mr. Dick Spring, within the next few weeks at the next meeting of the Anglo-Irish intergovernmental conference.

Security

27. Mr. Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland.

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bexleyheath (Mr. Townsend).

Electricity Charges

28. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will further consider the need to protect Northern Ireland industrial, commercial and domestic electricity consumers against increased charges beyond the period of the present transitional relief period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: I have no plans to extend the existing substantial transitional relief arrangements further.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the number of ambulance staff in Northern Ireland employed by the NHS in 1990, 1991 and 1992, using whole time equivalents.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

	Number
30 September 1990	584·50
30 September 1991	587·50
30 September 1992	585·51

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the percentage of ambulances in each service in Northern Ireland which responded within (a) eight minutes and (b) 14 to 20 minutes to emergency calls in (i) 1992-93 and (ii) the first half of 1993-94.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

	1992-93 per cent.	[1]1993-94 per cent.
Per cent. responded to within 8 minutes
Northern Health and Social Services Board	55	56
Southern Health and Social Services Board	60	60
Western Health and Social Services Board	62	58
Eastern Health and Social Services Board	60	[2]53
Per cent. responded to in 18 to 21 minutes[3]
Northern Health and Social Services Board	95	97
Southern Health and Social Services Board	96	96
Western Health and Social Services Board	96	93
Eastern Health and Social Services Board	95	[2]91

Notes:
[1]First quarter only—second quarter figures are not available.
[2]Eastern Ambulance Service Health and Social Services Trust.
[3]Figures on the percentage of calls responded to between 14 and 20 minutes are not available as the Charter standards in Northern Ireland are set at 18 to 21 minutes.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: There are no records of any meetings held or correspondence exchanged in the last 10 years between the Northern Ireland Office or the Northern Ireland Departments and Mr. Patrick Doyle. There are no plans to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle.

WALES

Ambulance Service

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the percentage of ambulances in each service in Wales that responded within (a) eight minutes and (b) 14 to 20 minutes to emergency calls in (i) 1992-93 and (ii) the first half of 1993-94.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The ambulance service classifications in Wales and their standards for emergency call response times are:

	Minutes

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of ambulance staff in Wales employed by the NHS in each year since 1990.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The whole-time equivalent number of ambulance staff in post at 30 September each year was as follows:

	Number
1990	1,548
1991	1,565
1992	1,547
1993	1,538

The figures include ambulancemen and women, ambulance officers and control assistants.

Medicines Evaluation Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had in relation to the case for designating Cardiff as the location for the proposed European medicines evaluation agency and the benefits that would be created by the presence of the staff of the agency being employed in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: After extensive consideration the Government decided that the United Kingdom's bid for the European medicines evaluation agency would best be led by the pharmaceutical industry. A strong bid is being mounted by the industry, based on a site in the London area. The Government fully support the industry's bid.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I have no plans to meet Mr. Doyle. Following a check on centrally held records of correspondence to Welsh Office Ministers, which would include requests for meetings, no correspondence from Mr. Doyle has been found.

Caerphilly Town Centre

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to announce his response to the current application for urban investment grant in respect of the Caerphilly town centre redevelopment proposal.

Mr. Redwood: I am currently considering the recommendations of my independent panel of assessors and hope to make an announcement shortly.

DEFENCE

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been undertaken by his Department into the nephrotoxicity of soluble depleted uranium used in armour piercing shells by the Army.

Mr. Hanley: The testing and use of armour-piercing shells by the Army does not produce soluble depleted uranium and therefore my Department has not conducted studies in this area.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will detail the total number of casualties amongst British Forces serving in Bosnia-Herzegovina since deployment.

Mr. Hanley: There has been one death, that of Lance Corporal Edwards on 13 January this year, and 17 injuries sustained by British soldiers in the course of their duties with UNPROFOR in Bosnia-Herzegovina, from causes which include gunshot wounds, mine blast injuries and shrapnel wounds.

D-Notices

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the operation of the new D-notice arrangements since the establishment of the defence advisory notice system on 1 August.

Mr. Hanley: Copies of the six defence advisory notices which replace the former eight D-notices have been widely distributed within the media and to those members of the public who have asked for them. Altogether some 800 copies have been issued. I understand that, since they came into effect on 1 August, the defence advisory notices have been used on a number of occasions to help editors, producers and publishers on issues of national security when they are considering what to publish.

Air Force Targets

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if simulated attacks on civil airfields are included in the training syllabus for Royal Air Force Tornado F3 operational squadrons.

Mr. Hanley: No.

Maralinga Test Site

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to exchange notes with representatives of the Federal Government of Australia about an agreement over the ex-gratia payment to be made by Her Majesty's Government in respect of the clearing of the former United Kingdom atomic bomb test site at Maralinga, South Australia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: On 14 July 1993 the United Kingdom Government agreed in principle to make an ex-gratia payment to the Federal Government of Australia as a contribution to the cost of the further clean-up of the Maralinga site. Preparation of the legal documents giving effect to this agreement is at an advanced stage.

Ministry Police

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names and titles of the Ministry of Defence Police Committee.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to him on 18 October, Official Report, columns 64-65.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the reasons for and extent of the changes he is proposing for the Ministry of Defence Police Committee; and when he intends to table the statutory instrument giving effect to those changes.

Mr. Hanley: From time to time the composition of the Ministry of Defence Police Committee needs to change to reflect departmental reorganisations. Two such changes are set out in the answer I gave the hon. Member on 18 October, Official Report, columns 64-65. In addition, to reflect the strategic management board arrangements for the Ministry of Defence Police when it becomes a Defence Agency and to avoid having two committees, we are proposing to augment the police committee by conferring full member status on the chief constable, the deputy chief constable and head of the secretariat, subject to satisfactory legal opinion. The statutory instrument will be tabled shortly after legal advice has been given.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make it his policy to permit the Ministry of Defence Police Federation to send observers to those parts of the meetings of the Ministry of Defence Police Committee which do not relate to individual cases, or pay negotiations, and whose business is comparable to those agenda items of county police committees that would normally be considered in public under part I of the agenda;

(2) when the Ministry of Defence Police Federation were last invited to attend a meeting of the Ministry of Defence Police Committee.

Mr. Hanley: The Ministry of Defence Police Committee is different from a county police committee. While it is not considered appropriate that observers from the Ministry of Defence Police Federation should attend on a regular basis it has been acknowledged that there many be occasions when, at the discretion of the chairman and committee members, the Defence Police Federation could be invited to attend should it be considered appropriate.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects Sir John Blelloch's committee of inquiry into the Ministry of Defence police to commence its work; and when he expects it will make its report.

Mr. Hanley: I expect the committee to begin its work as soon as terms of reference and membership have been finalised and after my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has announced the Government's response to Sir Patrick Sheehy's committee's report on police responsibilities and rewards. The committee is expected to report as soon as it has completed its work.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the report of the committee of inquiry into the Ministry of Defence police will be published.

Mr. Hanley: Yes, although it is too soon to speculate on the form this will take.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will name and give the background of members of the Blelloch committee of inquiry into the Ministry of Defence police together with the name and address of the committee's secretary.

Mr. Hanley: No. The committee secretary has yet to be appointed, but meanwhile any submissions to the review team may be addressed through the chief constable, Ministry of Defence police.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he proposes to set up the Ministry of Defence police agency.

Mr. Hanley: As I announced to the House on 19 October, Official Report, column 171, our plans envisage the Ministry of Defence police being the next support organisation to become a defence agency.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultation there has been with the Ministry of Defence Police Federation about (a) the contents of the draft statutory instrument relating to the proposed amendments to the police committee's constitution and (b) the membership and terms of reference of the Blellock committee of inquiry into the Ministry of Defence police.

Mr. Hanley: No consultation with the Ministry of Defence Police Federation has taken place on the contents of the draft statutory instrument relating to the proposed amendments to the police committee's membership; nor is it appropriate. My Department wrote to the Ministry of Defence Police Federation last month about the committee of inquiry and the draft terms of reference will be discussed with it before finalisation.

Animal Testing

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what animal species (a) have been used and (b) are currently used by his Department and defence contractors to test impact consequences on aero-engines.

Mr. Aitken: Animal impact tests on aero-engines are usually carried out by the engine manufacturer. Commonly, dead chickens or ducks are used for these tests. No work of this type is currently undertaken within my Department.

Cetaceans

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent Royal Navy vessels are currently involved in projects to ascertain the abundance and distribution of cetaceans.

Mr. Hanley: Royal Navy vessels keep a record of sightings of marine natural phenomena of special scientific interest. This includes all sightings of cetaceans. These records are then made available to interested scientific bodies.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research projects are currently under way in his Department on echo location used by cetaceans.

Mr. Aitken: There are no research projects currently under way in, or sponsored by, my Department on echo location used by cetaceans.

Surface Ship Command System

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when it was decided not to fit the surface ship command system in RFA Fort Victoria and RFA Fort George; why the decision was taken; what are the financial consequences; what adaptations are required as a result and at what cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The decision not to fit the previously intended surface ship command system to the AORs was taken during financial year 1992-93 following the decision not to fit the ships with the vertical launch Seawolf defence system. The latter decision means that a less sophisticated command system is now appropriate with a consequent saving to the defence budget. We do not expect any adaptations as a result of this decision.

5 Airborne Brigade

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many light strike vehicles it was originally proposed to purchase for 5 Airborne Brigade; of what type and at what cost; what vehicles were to be replaced as a result; when and why this order was postponed; what are the operational implications for the brigade's tactical mobility; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: We have never had any plans to place an order for a light strike vehicle for 5 Airborne Brigade.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Retirement Pensions (Women)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many married women reached pensionable age in each of the years 1979 to 1992 and made full class one contributions which were one, two or three years, respectively, short of the requisite number of qualifying years for a 25 per cent. pension.

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many married women qualified for a category B retirement pension in each year since 1979; and what information he has as to age at the time they first qualified.

Mr. Hague: Not all the information in the form requested is available. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Occupational Pensions Review

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to extend the review of occupational pensions undertaken by the Pension Law Review Committee to consider problems and issues concerning private pensions.

Mr. Hague: The Pension Law Review Committee was set up in June last year to review the whole framework of law and regulation of occupational pension schemes. This wide-ranging review covered both the private and public provision of occupational pensions. The committee reported its findings to the Secretary of State for Social Security who published the report on 30 September (CM 2432). Having fulfilled its terms of reference, the committee has now been disbanded and the Government are making a start on the detailed consideration of the committee's recommendations.

Late Appeals

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what guidance has been issued to chairpersons of social security appeals tribunals on the issue of late appeals addressing CSIS 4/90;

(2) what guidance has been issued to the chairpersons of social security appeal tribunals on (a) admission of late appeals following favourable commissioners' decisions and (b) an interpretation of special reasons in regulation 3(3) of the Social Security (Adjudications) Regulations; and whether such guidance is publicly available.

Mr. Burt: The guidance of chairmen of social security appeals tribunals is a matter for the President of the independent tribunal service, his honour Judge Thorpe, and he will be writing to the hon. Member direct on this matter.

Single Parents (Benefits)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many single parents are (a) claiming unemployment benefit, (b) receiving income support and

(c) living in rented accommodation and receiving housing benefit; and what percentage of the recipients in each category they represent.

Mr. Burt: Figures for the number of single parents receiving only unemployment benefit are not available. The latest available information on single parents receiving income support with and without unemployment benefit, and receiving housing benefit with and without income support is for 1992 and is in the tables.

Number of single parents in receipt of income support

	Number of cases	Percentage of all income support cases
With unemployment benefit	3,000	0·1
Without unemployment benefit	1,023,000	18·6
All cases	1,026,000	18·7

Number of single parents in receipt of housing benefit

	Number of cases	Percentage of all housing benefit cases
With income support	730,000	28·0
Without indomce support	87,000	5·0
All cases	817,000	19·0

Note: Figures are rounded to the nearest thousand. Figures may overlap as people can receive more than one of these benefits.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations his Department has received regarding the implementation of the Child Support Agency since its inception.

Mr. Burt: Between 5 April 1993 and 30 September 1993 the Department of Social Security headquarters and the Child Support Agency headquarters received in the region of 1,200 written representations covering a range of views about child support issues.

State Pensions

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what amount the state pension will be increased next year for (a) single and (b) married pensioners.

Mr. Hague: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will make a statement about next year's uprating of benefits as usual in due course.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) those firms who were asked to bid for the management contract for Quarry house, Leeds and (b) the value of the contract awarded to the successful contractor.

Mr. Burt: The firms invited to bid were:

P and O Total Facilities Management;
Matthew Hall;
Ferguson Bucknall Austin;
Property and Facilities Management.

It would be a breach of commercial confidentiality to disclose the value of the contract.

SCOTLAND

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he proposes to set up a committee to make recommendations for the organisation and management of the new local authorities along the lines of the Paterson committee in the previous reorganisation.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 20 October 1993]: Much of the advice contained in the Paterson report continues to serve local government well today. The Government have already made it clear in their White Paper, "Shaping the Future—The New Councils" that it is not proposed to make provision in legislation for alternative forms of local government organisation and management to replace the existing committee-based system which was endorsed by the Paterson committee. It was agreed, however, in discussions of the joint Scottish Office/Convention of Scottish Local Authorities steering group and working group, which was established last year to consider internal management issues, that there was scope for guidance on possible developments in management structures within this basic statutory framework, and that this might best be taken forward from within local government itself.

EMPLOYMENT

European Social Fund

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will press in the Social Affairs Council for a rollover facility in the current year for grants from the European social fund into 1994.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In July, the Foreign Affairs Council reached agreement on new regulations which will govern procedures for making grants under the structural funds, including the European social fund, from 1 January 1994. The Government argued strongly for a rollover year or similar transitional arrangements during the negotiations on the new regulations, but in the absence of support from other member states was unsuccessful in securing them.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish tables showing the percentage of those people who are registered as unemployed who are aged 24 years or under, according to the latest available figures, in each parliamentary constituency in (a) Great Britain and (b) England, and if he will publish the tables in rank order.

Miss Widdecombe: Official unemployment rates are not available for areas smaller than the self-contained labour markets known as travel-to-work areas. Unadjusted data on claimant unemployment levels, by age, in each parliamentary constituency are available quarterly for the months of January, April, July and October from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people aged (a) 16 or 17 years and (b) 18 to 24 years living in (i) York parliamentary constituency, (ii) North Yorkshire, (iii) Yorkshire and Humberside and (iv) Great Britain were registered as unemployed at April 1991.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is given in the following table:

Unadjusted claimant Unemployment by Age (April 1991)

	Under 18	18-24
York Parliamentary Constituency	1	1,127
North Yorkshire	15	4,712
Yorkshire and Humberside	285	64,296
Great Britain	3,027	632,710

Note: Since September 1988 and coinciding with the extension of a guaranteed Youth Training Scheme now Youth Training (YT) place to all those aged under 18 not in full time education or employment, those who decline an offer of a YT place are no longer entitled to unemployment-related benefits except in cases of severe hardship.

THORP

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what requests he has received from BNFL trade unions since 28 June for a meeting on the employment implications of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant and associated nuclear facilities upon the Cumbrian economy.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Since 28 June, we have received one request from trade unions at BNFL for a meeting on the employment and local economic implications of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant (THORP).

Environmental Technology

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what initiatives have been taken in 1993 by training and enterprise councils, in conjunction with private industry, to promote job creation in environmental projects and manufacture of environmental technology.

Miss Widdecombe: This information is not generally available centrally, but I am aware of several good examples. For instance, West London training and enterprise council has a series of initiatives to help businesses to become more environmentally conscious; Northumberland TEC is involved in a project developing business and management training with a key objective to improve the understanding of environmental issues; and Dudley TEC has piloted a project which links schools and employers in projects on environmental and amenity improvements to industrial premises using computer technology.

Noel Employment Ltd.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 29 June, Official Report, column 474, for what reasons his Department judged that the temporary employees of Noel Employment Ltd. were to be refused redundancy payments.

Miss Widdecombe: Claims from the majority of temporary workers were rejected because they were not considered to be "employees" as defined in section 153 of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978. The Department examined all the relevant contract documentation which indicated that in the majority of cases there was no obligation on the company to provide work, or for the temporary workers to accept it and that the temporary workers were free to work for other agencies between engagements. Nor were there any contractual arrangements for holiday, sick pay or pay for bank holidays which would normally be associated with a contract of service.

Two separate industrial tribunals have since upheld the Department's view that these factors were inconsistent with employee status for the purposes of the 1978 Act.

Health and Safety

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish dates of all meetings with outside persons or bodies and titles of all non-departmental briefing papers or any associated material concerning the possible amendment of sections 1(1), 1(2) or 15(1) of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974; what plans he has to amend sections 1(1), 1(2) or 15(1) of the Health and Safety at Work Act, etc. 1974 in respect of matters relating to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There have been many discussions of a wide range of issues arising from the Health and Safety Commission's review of regulation, including those within the seven sectoral task groups. Any question of amendment of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 would take into consideration the findings of the Health and Safety Commission's review.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing for each of the past five years, the total number of each of forms OSR1, OSR7, F9, F10, F1229, F2252, F2522, F2404 and ASB5 received by the Health and Safety Executive and the total number estimated to be outstanding for each year; and what action the Health and Safety Executive took in each year to chase up outstanding forms.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information about the number of forms OSR1, F9, F10, F1229, F2252, F2522 and ASB5 received by the Health and Safety Executive is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Forms OSR7 and F2404 are not required to be sent to HSE. As part of its inspection strategy, HSE seeks out premises that are not registered. Additionally and where relevant, during the course of inspection visits HSE inspectors remind occupiers of the requirement to provide formal notification to HSE as appropriate.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing for each of the past five years, the total number of inspections made by health and safety inspectors in relation to completion by employers of each of forms F31, F32, F34, F35, F36, F44A, F47, F55, F55A, F57, F59, F60, F339, F658, F750, F751, F1327, F1952, F2032, F2067, F2197, F2198, F2346, F2351, F2362, F2525, F2526, F2527, F2530 and F2531 and the total number of inspectors available to make such inspections; what was the total number of establishments found not to have completed such forms; and what action the Health and Safety Executive took in each year to chase up outstanding forms.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information is not available in the form requested.

The forms listed should be completed in various circumstances under the Factories Act 1961. Forms F658, F1327 and F2362 are no longer used.

The following table shows the total number of planned inspection visits made by FI in the last five years and the number of factory inspectors in post in the field at 1 April in each year.

Year (1 April to 31 March)	Number of planned inspections	Number of inspectors
1988-89	118,903	514·5
1989-90	126,495	527·0
1990-91	130,016	558·5
1992-93	121,486	608·0

The primary purpose of planned inspection visits is to consider compliance with health and safety legislation and where necessary to give advice and guidance to employers and others. During visits inspectors consider the use of statutory forms and impress on occupiers, where appropriate, the importance of them.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing for each of the past 10 years the total number of forms (a) UB77 and UB77A and (b) UB78A and UB78B issued by the employment service, and the total numbers of cases in each case where entitlement to unemployment benefit was subsequently withdrawn or not allowed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Frank Dobson, dated 21 October 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to him about the total number of forms UB77, UB77A, UB78A and UB78B issued by the Employment Service in each of the last ten years, and the total number of cases where entitlement to unemployment benefit was subsequently withdrawn or not allowed. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

UB77 and UB78 forms are sent to employers to establish an individual's entitlement to unemployment benefit. Unfortunately, I am unable to provide the numbers we issue each year because this information is not collated or published.

I am sorry I cannot be of help on this occasion.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Deregulation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a list of all correspondence sent by his Department to the Health and Safety Commission or from the Health and Safety Commission to his Department containing suggested regulations to be considered for revocation as part of the deregulation initiative, the dates on which correspondence was sent and the dates on which each of the seven Health and Safety Commission's sectoral task groups for deregulation were established, have met and plan to complete their consideration.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There has been no correspondence between the Department and the Health and Safety Commission on this issue.

The Health and Safety Commission established seven sectoral task groups to help it to undertake its review of health and safety regulation. The appointment of the chairmen and members of each of the seven groups runs from 1 July 1993 to 30 April 1994.

The following table gives the dates on which each of the seven sector task groups have met:

	July	August	September	October
Chemicals and pharmaceuticals	30	14	23	11
Communications and transport	29	1	22	28
Construction	15, 27	19, 25	16	15
Engineering industries	21	10, 24	—	4, 8
Food, drink and agriculture	19	16	24	11
Financial services	22	26	9	19
Other services	7	11	8	6

The Groups have been asked to complete their work by March 1994.

All health and safety regulations are being considered in the review. The findings of the seven sectoral task groups will be considered by the Health and Safety Commission and reported to me. Any regulations considered suitable for reform will be subject to the usual consultation procedures established by the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974. The work of the sectoral groups is continuing.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table listing (a) all regulations suggested by his Department to the Health and Safety Commission or by the Health and Safety Commission to his Department as candidates for revocation as part of the deregulation initiative, (b) the purpose and function of each of these regulations, (c) whether it is suggested that the regulations be (i) amended, (ii) abolished, (iii) replaced with self-regulation or (iv) replaced with other regulation; whether, for each regulation, revocation without replacement or with self-regulation would require amendment of section 1(1), 1(2) and 15(1) of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: All health and safety legislation for which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment is responsible is being reviewed as part of the Health and Safety Commission's review of regulation. If, during the course of that review or at its conclusion, the Health and Safety Commission takes the view that reform of parts of the legislation would be desirable, the Health and Safety Commission will publish a consultative document containing its proposals. At the end of the consultation period the Health and Safety Commission will put forward its proposals to us in accordance with section 11 of the Health and Safety at Work etc, Act 1974.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a list of all regulations submitted by his Department for inclusion in the deregulation unit's list of regulations affecting business together with the estimated enforcement costs and compliance costs for each separate regulation and, for those regulations for which such costs are not yet available, the target date by which he intends to submit such costs to the deregulation unit.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Details of all regulations for which the Department, including the Health and Safety Executive, is responsible, were forwarded to the deregulation unit and incorporated in the baseline-document placed in the Library on 20 April. As part of the Government's deregulation initiative, the Department is currently undertaking reviews of all its regulations. As part of these reviews we aim to assess compliance costs. The reviews will be completed by April 1994.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department has found no record of any meetings or correspondence with Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training. Neither I nor any other Ministers in the Department have any plans to meet Mr. Doyle.

Injured Trainees

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing for each of the past 10 years the total number of accident report forms CHS 76 completed by training providers and the total number of cases in which the injured trainee was deemed to be entitled to injury benefit.

Miss Widdecombe: The total number of accident report forms CHS 76 completed by training providers and submitted to the Department for each of the last 10 years is as follows:

	Number
1983	2,802
1984	2,278
1985	2,529
1986	2,771
1987	3,616
1988	4,039
1989	4,746
1990	3,811
1991	2,691
[1]1992	973

[1] From April 1992 forms CHS 76 were forwarded to the Department only for those injured trainees who had been terminated from their training schemes, or who suffered a major injury as defined in the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulation 1985 (RIDDOR).

The total number of cases in which the injured trainee was deemed to be entitled to injury benefit for the years 1990 to 1992 are as follows:

	Number of forms received	Number entitled to benefit
1990	3,811	1,067
1991	2,691	877
1992	973	592

Figures for previous years can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Disabled Employees

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing for each of the past 10 years the total number of forms DP39 received and DP40 issued by his Department.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Frank Dobson, dated 21 October 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to him about the publication of a table showing the total number of forms DP39 received and DP40s issued by his Department for each of the past 10 years. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

I regret that I am unable to provide the precise information you asked for. We do not collect statistics centrally on applications for permits under the provisions of the Quota Scheme (form DP39), or the Designated Employment Scheme (DP40).

We do, however, collect data on the numbers of employers issued with permits (DP42) under the Quota Scheme each year. This is taken from annual returns from our Local Offices on the extent to which employers in their areas are complying with the requirements of the Scheme as at 1 June. I attach a table showing, for each of the last 10 years, the number of employers within scope of the Scheme, ie those with 20 or more employees who were not employing their full 3 per cent. quota of registered disabled people on 1 June, but who had been issued with permits during the previous 12 months.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administrative Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive Replies to written Parliamentary Questions will be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Table

Numbers of below-quota employers issued with permits (DP42) 12 months to 1 June

Technical and Vocational Initiative

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the level of funding for the technical and vocational education initiative provided by (a) his Department and (b) local education authorities for each financial year since its introduction.

Miss Widdecombe: The following table shows the Department's expenditure on the technical and vocational education initiative since its introduction in September 1983 to March 1993.

The Department does not collate data on expenditure by local education authorities in relation to TVEI, though authorities and grant maintained schools do contribute to TVEI aims.

Written Answers to Questions

TRANSPORT

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the expected start and completion of the Jubilee line extension.

Mr. Norris: Good progress is being made in dealing with the legal and financial issues which must be satisfactorily resolved before the Secretary of State can authorise the start of construction. The extension is expected to enter passenger service 53 months after the start of construction.

European Night Services Ltd.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had with the transport and competition directorate of the European Commission in relation to (a) the article 85 exemption procedure and (b) funding for British Rail investment in European Night Services Ltd. with respect to its south Wales-Paris-Brussels service proposal.

Mr. Freeman: The Department itself has not formally discussed these matters with the European Commission. European Night Services Ltd. is a joint enterprise by British Rail with French, German and Dutch railways. It is for them to arrange any exemptions and funding that may be required. The company and the railways concerned have applied to the Commission for formal confirmation that their operating agreements do not constitute restrictive practices prohibited by article 2 of Council regulation (EEC) No. 1017/68. I hope that the application will be viewed in a positive way.

M11 Link Road

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out in full the cost-benefit analysis economic justification for the M11 link road.

Mr. Norris: The last full assessment using an adaptation of the Department's COBA method was prepared for the 1987 public inquiry into the link road scheme. The supporting evidence presented to the inquiry is voluminous and so I will send a copy of it direct to the hon. Member.

Following this and other public inquiries and consultation, and in consideration of all the relevant factors, including but not solely the economics of the scheme, the Secretaries of State decided to proceed with the link road. The first of the four main contracts began on 13 September last and it is our intention to let further contracts to complete the link road by the end of 1997.

Water Transport

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration his Department is currently giving to the use of the (a) coastal traffic, (b) navigable rivers and canals and (c) ports for moving freight from the motorways to waterways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The Department has commissioned two studies examining the scope for shifting freight from roads to water: inland waterways, coastal and short sea shipping.

We expect to publish a summary of the results of both studies shortly.

Additionally, the River Thames working group, which I chair, is looking at both freight and passenger traffic on the Thames, the constraints that limit that traffic, the potential for its development, and the means to realise that potential. The group hopes to report its findings during the late spring of 1994.

London Transport Finance

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes there were to London Transport's core business external financing limit for the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Norris: The original 1992-93 EFL for LT's core business was £852 million. This was reduced by £84 million following the transfer of the docklands light railway to the London Docklands development corporation in April 1992, but then increased by £65 million in July 1992 due to additional funding to implement measures in London Underground Ltd.'s company plan. The final EFL was therefore £833 million.

From this total, LT was allowed to carry forward £33 million to the current financial year. This was in respect of core business items related to the Jubilee line extension.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: The Department has no record of any meeting or correspondence with Mr. Doyle and has no plans to meet him.

M1/M62 Link

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the full cost to public funds of work undertaken on the proposal to build an M1/M62 motorway link in west Yorkshire; and if he will break down the costings into their various elements.

Mr. MacGregor: The total cost to date of preparation work on the M1/M62 link road is £1,682,391. This is made up of:

Design Consultants Fees	1,516,346
Ordnance Survey	36,233
Blighted Property	82,626

Publicity	4,704
Miscellaneous	42,482

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 19 October 1993 (Mrs. Peacock), Official Report, column 200, to the hon. Member for Batley and Spen, if he will give the full results of the public consultation exercise into his proposal for an M1/M62 motorway link in west Yorkshire, indicating the number of representations in favour and against the various options proposed.

Mr. MacGregor: A leaflet is in preparation which will include the information requested. This will be circulated in the next few days. I will ensure the hon. Member receives a copy.

HEALTH

Prescription List

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the items that will not be available on a national health service prescription from November.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to statutory instrument No. 2421, laid before Parliament on 11 October which lists the drugs and other substances to be added to the list of items which may not be prescribed at national health service expense from 1 November 1993.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions in England were removed from the NHS provision by introducing limited lists in each year since 1988-89.

Dr. Mawhinney: The numbers of products removed from national health service prescription each year since 1988-89 are shown in the table:

Year	Number
1988-89	174
1989-90	27
1990-91	87
1991-92	100
1992-93	121

Fund Holding

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give for 1993-94 (a) the amount of money budgeted by each district health authority for purchasing services of the types covered by the fund-holding regulations on behalf of patients of non-fund-holding practices, (b) the number of patients registered with non-fund-holding practices in each district health authority and (c) the amount of funding per capita budgeted by each district health authority for purchasing services of the type covered by the fund-holding regulations on behalf of patients registered with non-fund-holding practices.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested in (a) is collected by the Department of Health for regional health authorities only, not for individual authorities. That requested in (b) and (c) is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of regional health authorities for this information.

Health Authority Chairmen

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she advertises (a) internally and (b) externally for chairmen of regional health authorities whenever a post becomes vacant; and if she will make a statement;

(2) whether the recent vacant post of chairman of the West Midlands regional health authority was advertised before the post was filled; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We do not consider it appropriate or necessary to advertise for candidates for appointment as chairman of a regional health authority, as there are many suitable ones already known to us both in other national health service bodies and from outside the NHS.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what qualifications Sir Michael Carlisle had for being made chairman of the community health Sheffield NHS trust; and if she will make a statement;

(2) if she will state the age and qualifications of the chairman of the community health Sheffield NHS trust.

Dr. Mawhinney: Chairmen of national health service trusts are appointed for their personal qualities and skills. Sir Michael Carlisle has been involved with the NHS for more than 20 years and he has been chairman of Trent regional health authority since 1982. He is therefore eminently suitable for appointment as chairman of an NHS trust. As stated in the Department's press notice dated 23 August (HN893/925), Sir Michael is 63 years of age.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by health authorities and by date, for the last 48 months, the amount of compensation that has been paid to chairmen of health authorities who have left before their term of office had expired; and if she will make a statement as to what the special circumstances were for each payment made.

Dr. Mawhinney: With the agreement of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State decided to make a payment of £10,000 to Sir James Ackers, the former chairman of West Midlands regional health authority, under the provisions of paragraph 9(3) of schedule 5 to the National Health Service Act 1977; there have been no other such payments in the last 48 months.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the post of chairman of the community health Sheffield national health service trust was advertised (a) privately or (b) publicly; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The position of the non-executive part-time chairman of this trust was not advertised. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has indicated that she would be willing to appoint the retiring chairman of Trent regional health authority, Sir Michael Carlisle, to this position on the basis of his record over many years as a chairman in the national health service and his willingness to undertake the important responsibilities that fall upon national health service trust chairmen.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she advertises (a) internally or (b) externally for chairmen of national health service trusts whenever a post becomes vacant; and if she will make a statement;

(2) if she advertises (a) internally or (b) externally for chairmen of district health authorities whenever a post becomes vacant; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We ask regional health authority chairmen to assist in the initial selection of candidates for chairmen's appointments to national health service authorities and trusts in their area. It is for them to decide how to obtain a good range of suitable and able people, with close links with the community served by the national health service body in question, and who would be willing to undertake the exacting responsibilities involved in purchasing or providing good patient care for the local community.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are the maximum ages for the appointment of national health service trust and authority (a) chairmen and (b) non-executive directors;

(2) what are the limits on the number of times national health service trust and health authority chairmen and non-executive directors can be reappointed.

Dr. Mawhinney: There are no limits on the number of times chairmen and non-executives can be reappointed, and no age limit for these appointments.

Community Care

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the progress of the development of a housing input in the second round of community care plans.

Mr. Bowis: Social services departments, housing authorities and other housing providers should work closely together in planning and providing services to meet local need. The social services inspectorate is currently undertaking a study of housing and community care issues.

Computers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will order a public inquiry into the purchase of computers by the NHS.

Mr. Sackville: No.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the implications of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 for the future competitive ability of any contracting undertakings accepting responsibilities currently those of directly managed units or trusts within the health service, compared to competing organisations tendering in the future which are not subject to the same obligations.

Mr. Sackville: None. It is a matter for contractors through normal commercial practices and judgments to maintain their competitive ability throughout the market-testing process.

Breast Cancer

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding is available for breast cancer research; if she will give details of funding for each year since 1979; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Government are committed to encouraging research into breast cancer. Within the Department's centrally commissioned research programme, £700,000 is expected to be spent on research specifically into breast cancer in 1993-94. Figures for cancer research funded by the Department broken down specifically for breast cancer are only available from the financial year 1990-91 onwards. These are:

1990-91	417
1992-93	5311

The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. We understand that MRC expenditure into breast cancer research was £2·7 million in 1990-91 and £1·6 million in 1991-92, the latest years for which figures are available.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between her Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans she has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle: and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has not met Mr. Patrick Doyle and has no current plans to do so.

If the right hon. Member has any previous meetings or correspondence with officials of the Department in mind, perhaps he will give me further details.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Allen: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what plans he has to introduce on-site child care facilities for the children of hon. Members and staff of the House.

Mr. Beith: At the request of the House of Commons Commission and the Administration Committee, consultants have been commissioned to prepare a comprehensive questionnaire on child care facilities, which will include the option of on-site provision. It will be circulated before Christmas to hon. Members, to staff and to other appropriate groups of personnel working in the House. The information gathered from the responses to the questionnaire will be considered by the Committee and the Commission before any final decision on the provision of child care facilities is taken.

Late Sittings (Cost)

Mr. Allen: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, representing the House of Commons Commission, what is his latest estimate of the costs of keeping the House open for sittings beyond 10 pm.

Mr. Beith: Additional costs are incurred when the House sits after 10.30 pm, but vary according to when the House rises. The House sat after 10.30 pm on some 37 occasions in May, June and July of this year, and the additional costs incurred in respect of House staff for this period are estimated to be £319,464.

Pre-1834 Furniture

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee (1) where is the pre-1834 table of the House of Commons which used to be on display in the Upper Waiting Hall;

(2) if a new location can be found for the pre-1834 table of the House of Commons in one of the public areas of the House.

Mr. Ray Powell: The table which used to be on display in the Upper Waiting Hall and which dates from the 1740s is now situated in the Speaker's House. It was moved to the Speaker's State Rooms after having suffered damage as a result of frequent moves made necessary by the staging of exhibitions in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee if he will publish a list of furnishings and fittings and other artefacts that are still located in the Palace of Westminster that were salvaged from the fire of 1834.

Mr. Ray Powell: I shall ask the Director of Parliamentary Works to write to the hon. Member.

Chamber Seating

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee if he will instigate a feasibility study into moving the walls of the Commons Chamber so as to enable the amount of seating to be expanded.

Mr. Ray Powell: It would be inappropriate for the Accommodation and Works Committee to initiate any study of the kind referred to in the question.

Catering Facilities

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee what rules apply to the booking by hon. Members of catering facilities in the House on behalf of outside organisations; what checks are made on the bona fides of the organisations concerned; what recent changes have been made in the rules; and what recent decisions have been allowing exemption from the rules.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: The regulations governing the booking by hon. Members of catering facilities in the House on behalf of outside organisations are set out in a brochure available from the Refreshment Department Banqueting Office or from the Director of Catering Services.

Rooms and facilities may be booked only by Members, Officers of the House and Lords who were formerly Members of the House of Commons, who may act as sponsor of a function on behalf of an outside organisation. In such a case, all responsibility for the function, including the checking of the bona fides, rests with the sponsor. There have been no recent changes in the banqueting rules, and no exception from the rules has been knowingly allowed.

The Catering Committee is to undertake a review of the operation of the Private Dining Facilities early in 1994 and has invited written evidence.

ENVIRONMENT

Single-parent Families

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of (a) council house accommodation and (b) housing association accommodation is rented by single-parent families.

Sir George Young: The most recent information is from the housing trailer to the 1991 "Labour Force Survey". It shows that in England lone parents with dependent children formed 12 per cent. of all households renting from a local authority and 10 per cent. of all households renting from a housing association.

This and other results of the survey are published in "Housing in England: Housing Trailers to the 1988 and 1991 Labour Force Surveys" (table 2.3), available from the House of Commons Library.

Information available from the National Federation of Housing Association's CORE system shows that single parents accounted for 21 per cent. of new lettings by housing associations in 1992-93.

Housing, Lancashire

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what percentage of council properties in Lancashire are unfit to rent;

(2) what percentage of the total dwelling stock in Lancashire is (a) unfit for habitation and (b) in need of major renovation.

Sir George Young: Data on unfit dwellings, whether occupied or not, and on dwellings which are not unfit but in need of renovation are reported by local authorities in their annual housing investment programme—HIP1—returns.

On the basis of the data from these returns it is estimated that at 1 April 1993 some 12 per cent. of dwellings in Lancashire were unfit and a further 30 per cent. were in need of renovation. Within local authorities dwellings 0·7 per cent. were reported as unfit.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the value of the capital receipts accumulated by each Lancashire local authority for the last three years.

Mr. Baldry: The latest available information is as follows:

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new dwellings have been (a) built and (b) bought by each local authority in Lancashire over the past five years.

Sir George Young: Estimates of the total numbers of local authority house-building completions within each local authority area in Lancashire are published in "Local Housing Statistics", table 1. Figures for 1988 are in issue No. 93, for 1989 in issue No. 97, for 1990 in issue No. 101 and for 1991 and 1992 in issue No. 105.

The number of new dwellings bought by local authorities are not separately identified on returns made to the Department by local authorities.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received in the last three years in relation to housing problems in Lancashire.

Sir George Young: Ministers and regional officials of the Department of the Environment maintain a regular dialogue with all local housing authorities in Lancashire through the housing investment programme process. In addition, I have personally visited a number of Lancashire authorities to discuss housing issues over the last three years. On 19 October 1992 I met a group of authorities —the North West regional renewal lobby—to discuss problems relating to the operation of the renovation grant system and private sector housing renewal in Lancashire and Greater Manchester.

On Monday 25 October 1993 I look forward to meeting a delegation for Lancashire led by the Bishop of Burnley, to discuss the Lancashire housing inquiry panel's wide ranging report "Putting our House in Order".

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department has on (a) the homeless figures, (b) the general waiting list figures and (c) the sheltered housing waiting list figures for each local authority in Lancashire over the last three years.

Sir George Young: Local authorities report information on their own dwellings in their annual housing investment programme—HIP1—returns.

The latest available reported figures for each authority in Lancashire, which are at 1 April 1993, appear in section C, homeless; column B5, households on waiting list; and column B6B, households on waiting list requiring specialised dwellings of the "1993 HIP1 All Items Print", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate his Department had made of (a) the time needed or (b) the financial resources needed to resolve the housing problems in Lancashire.

Sir George Young: None. It is for local housing authorities to prepare comprehensive housing investment programme strategies for their areas, to identify housing problems and, in partnership with other housing providers and players in the housing field, to draw up programme to meet the needs identified.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many clearance projects in Lancashire have been delayed due to problems rehousing those that will be displaced in the process.

Sir George Young: The Department of the Environment does not collect statistics on delayed clearance projects.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply to his letter of 31 August to the President of the Board of Trade regarding Tarmac Brick and Tiles Ltd. and which was transferred under reference G/ST/P50/2343/93.

Mr. Yeo: I have written to the hon. Member today.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to include (a) standard morbidity rate or (b) other health indicators in the standard spending assessments for local authorities.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 21 October 1993]: We have considered the use of a range of health factors as part of the review of standard spending assessments for 1994-95. We shall consult in the usual way on our proposals for the revenue support grant settlement for 1994-95, including standard spending assessments, in the late autumn.

Sea Mammals

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give details of the survey on the abundance and distribution of small cetaceans in the North sea; and which other countries are involved.

Mr. Yeo: [holding answer 21 October 1993]: The "Small Cetacean Abundance in the North Sea" survey (SCANS) is a major international research project, which aims to record the abundance and distribution of dolphins, porpoises and other small cetaceans in the North sea and adjacent areas. It will provide baseline data for considering whether further conservation measures are necessary. The work will be carried out under the provisions of the agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North seas (ASCOBANS), which the United Kingdom ratified on 13 July 1993. The project is being co-ordinated by the sea mammal research unit in Cambridge. The European Commission, Denmark, Germany, the Netherlands, Sweden and the United Kingdom are all contributing towards the costs of the project, estimated to be 1,408,800 ecu, of which the United Kingdom is contributing 160,000 ecu. The main survey work is to be undertaken in summer 1994.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of funding is being provided for the interim secretariat of ASCOBANS at the sea mammal research unit in Cambridge.

Mr. Yeo: [holding answer 21 October 1993]: The Department of the Environment has provided funding of £43,754 for the interim secretariat of ASCOBANS at the sea mammal research unit in Cambridge, since it was established in June 1992.

Property Services Agency

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now give final details of the PSA Building Management sales.

Mr. Curry: The sale of Building Management Scotland was completed on 1 September, and the sales of the other businesses on 1 October. The Government will receive considerations of £3·5 million for Building Management Scotland, a net £10·4 million phased over four years for Building Management South East and South and West combined, and £8 million phased over three years for Noreast Building Management. Government have made a payment of £11·46 million to the purchasers of Building Management Manchester but the final amount may be up to about £12·1 million depending on the number of staff who transfer their entitlements to the new pension scheme. This will not be known until six months or more after completion.

In addition, the Government injected cash into each business at the point of sale to meet the estimated net liabilities transferred to the purchasers under the sale agreements. The amounts of cash injected were £1·9 million to Building Management Scotland; £1·0 million to Building Management South East; £1·4 million to Building Management South and West; £2·2 million to Noreast Building Management and £2·0 million to Building Management Manchester. In all cases these amounts will be adjusted pound for pound after preparation of completion statements to compare actual net liabilities at the point of sale with the estimates made. The assets transferred exclude the amounts owed by customers to the five building management businesses for work done up to the sale. These debts will be collected by PSAS and retained in Government.

Staff in all five businesses were asked to choose between transfer to the private sector or a possible period of secondment to the new business. Not all staff who were available for secondment were selected. The results are summarised below:

Business	Transferred	Selected for secondment	Not selected for secondment
Building Management South East	439	618	98
Building Management South and West	616	668	52
Noreast Building Management	494	405	110
Building Management Manchester	699	397	126
Building Management Scotland	484	273	106

The Government have entered into a severence sharing arrangement with each purchaser, under which it will fund redundancies including those of secondees and non-elected staff that may arise up to an agreed maximum figure. These are: Building Management South East £30 million, Building Management South and West £25 million, Noreast £29·5 million, Building Management Manchester about £28 million and Building Management Scotland £15 million. In aggregate these amount to about £127·5 million.

The Government have also guaranteed the redundancy entitlements of transferring staff against the purchasers' bankruptcy for up to five years post sale. The maximum aggregate value of this contingent liability is estimated at around £65 million.

The departmental minute laid on 14 June 1993 indicated that the maximum contingent liability to be undertaken in the sale negotiations was estimated not to exceed £200 million. Final details of the sums paid in respect of the sale of the building management businesses will not be available for some time as this will depend on the number of transferred staff remaining with the businesses for more than five years from the date of sale.

EMPLOYMENT

Bank Holidays

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has to add to or transfer existing bank holidays.

Mr. David Hunt: An announcement will be made in due course.

Books (VAT)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made regarding the impact on employment in the publishing and bookselling sector of imposition of VAT at 17·5 per cent. on books.

Miss Widdecombe: I am not willing to speculate on the possible effect of measures that may or may not be in the forthcoming Budget.

Noel Employment Ltd.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what account his Department took in its decision to grant an employment agency licence to Solo Employment Agency, of that agency's relationship to the former Noel Employment Ltd. in respect of (a) the address of the premises of the agency and (b) the identity of the directors of the agency.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department has granted a licence under the Employment Agencies Act 1973 to Solo Appointments (Hammersmith) Ltd. The premises of the agency were formerly those of a branch of Noel Employment Ltd. One of the directors of the agency was formerly a director of Noel Employment Ltd. The Department took account of all relevant information and found no grounds for refusing to grant the licence.

Disabled Employees

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will list for each of the last 10 years, the number of public sector employers who have been prosecuted for not employing the required percentage of disabled employees; what was the fine imposed; and what is the current percentage of disabled employees employed in the public sector;

(2) if he will list for each of the last 10 years, the number of private sector employers who have been prosecuted for not employing the required percentage of disabled employees; what was the fine imposed; and what is the current percentage of disabled employees employed in the private sector.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Martin Redmond from M. E. G. Fogden, dated 22 October 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Questions to him about the number of public and private sector employers prosecuted for not employing the required percentage of disabled employees; the fines imposed and the current percentage of disabled employees employed in public and private sectors. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

It may be helpful if I briefly explain employers' duties and obligations under the provisions of the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944.

The Act placed a duty on employers who have twenty or more workers to employ a Quota of registered disabled people. The standard Quota is currently set at three per cent. of the employer's total workforce. It is not an offence to be below Quota. However, when in this situation, an employer has a further duty under the Act to engage suitable registered disabled people if any are available when vacancies arise. A below Quota employer must not engage anyone other than a registered disabled person without first obtaining a permit to do so, and must not discharge a registered disabled person without reasonable cause. Failure to comply with either of these latter two obligations is a criminal offence. Employers in scope of the provisions of the Quota Scheme must keep records to show that they are complying with the requirements.

No employer has been prosecuted for infringing the provisions of the Quota Scheme in the last ten years.

You also asked about the percentages of disabled employees employed in the public and private sectors. I regret that information is not collected in this precise form. However, I can provide approximate figures related to registered disabled employees. Each year tables showing the number and percentage of registered disabled people employed by a wide range of public sector employers are published, with their agreement, in the Employment Gazette. The latest figures, relating to 1 June 1992, were in the April 1993 issue of the Gazette. The average percentage of registered disabled people employed by the public sector employers whose individual figures were published in the Gazette was 0·8 per cent.

Deduction of the data for this range of public sector employers from national data in respect of all employers who are in scope of the Quota provisions produces an approximate figure of 0·7 per cent. for employers in the private sector.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administrative Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Wages Statistics

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many establishments were found to be underpaying wages in each year since 1979;

(2) what information he has as to how many establishments (a) failed to post wages council notices, (b) failed to keep adequate records of hours worked and (c) failed to keep adequate records of wages paid in 1992;

(3) how many establishments were found to be making underpayments in wages council trades in 1992;

(4) how many (a) checks were carried out and (b) underpayments discovered for each wages inspectorate division in 1992;

(5) how many workers' pay levels were checked by wages councils in 1992 for each wages council inspectorate;

(6) how many establishments were covered by wages councils on the register at December 1992.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is provided in the following tables:

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many underpayments of wages were detected in each year since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is provided in the following table:

Year	Number of underpayments of wages detected
1979	23,223
1980	29,314
1981	25,482
1982	20,406
1983	20,832
1984	18,043
1985	16,948
1986	15,533
1987	9,129
1988	10,860
1989	11,066
1990	11,129
1991	12,812
1992	14,779

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many workers were covered by wages councils in 1992; and if he will make a statement on the results of wages council checks.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It is estimated that the number of workers covered by wages councils in 1992 was 2,561,000. The checks made by the wages inspectorate show that most employers covered by wages councils were paying wages council rates.

Astra Training Centres

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received from training and enterprise councils over the collapse of the Astra training centres and/or their acquisition by Mr. Patrick Doyle; on what dates each such representation was received and from which training and enterprise council; what plans he has to meet representatives of the training and enterprise councils to discuss their concerns; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: We have received no such representations from any training and enterprise council. Any request from a training and enterprise council for a meeting would be considered in the normal way.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what requests he has made, or correspondence he has sent to Arthur Andersen and Co., in relation to its role as receiver for the Astra training centres; what was the date and nature of such correspondence and contact; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department requested and received information from Arthur Andersen confirming the continued existence of Astra's pension fund and the appointment to the fund by the receiver of an independent trustee. The receiver also informed the Department on 12 October which Astra skill centres had been sold as going concerns.

Since Arthur Andersen was appointed as receiver in July there have been telephone and written contacts, and one meeting, in connection with the Department's continued interest as freeholder a head leaseholder of a number of properties occupied by Astra.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what residual powers, rights and duties Her Majesty's Government possess in respect of the former skill centres acquired by Astra, and its staff, (a) in respect of determining subsequent ownership of the centres and (b) in other respects.

Miss Widdecombe: Her Majesty's Government have no residual powers, rights or duties relating to the former skill centres acquired by Astra in relation to the determination of the subsequent ownership of the centres. Some of the property interests acquired by Astra from the Department in 1990 were subject to clawback provisions, under which the Department is entitled to a share of any development gains made in the 10 years after privatisation. If these property interests are acquired by a purchaser of an Astra skill centre the clawback arrangements he will be bound by them for the balance of the 10-year period.

Paternity Leave

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what action he will take to encourage employers to provide paternity leave.

Miss Widdecombe: Matters such as this are best dealt with by agreement between the parties concerned, taking account of their particular circumstances.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of gross domestic product has been provided to training and enterprise councils, annually since they were established; what is the total cost of TECs to date; and how many previously unemployed persons have received training leading to recognised qualifications in this period.

Miss Widdecombe: Full information would be available only at disproportionate cost. The training and enterprise council—TEC—network in England was completed in October 1991. In 1992-93 TECs spent £1·3 billion on training, education and enterprise programmes.

Estimates from the spring 1993 "Labour Force Survey" show that around 174,000 unemployed people were training towards a qualification compared with 140,000 in the spring 1992 survey.

Health and Safety

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a list of all research commissioned or carried out by his Department or the Health and Safety Commission into the operation of health and safety legislation in small firms; what figures were obtained as to the number and rate of fatal and/or serious accidents in small firms compared with larger firms; what subsequent action has been taken by his Department and/or the Health and Safety Commission to improve health and safety in small firms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 21 October 1993]: The Health and Safety Commission—HSC—has not commissioned or carried out external research into the operation of health and safety in small firms.

The Health and Safety Executive—HSE—has carried out two separate analyses of the relative accident records of small and large firms.

A report on the first, based on accidents notified under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences (RIDDOR) Regulations 1985, was published in the January 1991 issue of Employment Gazette, pages 20-24, available in the Library. The study suggested that rates of reported major injuries and of fatalities were higher in small firms—defined as those with 100 employees or fewer. However, the number of fatalities was sufficiently small for the difference in rate to be accounted for by the fact that small firms tend to operate in more hazardous industries.

The second analysis, based on information from the 1990 "Labour Force Survey"—LFS—indicated that, comparing firms with fewer than 25 employees and those with more, injury rates per 100,000 employees are higher among larger firms. These results were published in the Employment Gazette for December 1992, pages 621-38.

Research carried out by the Employment Department is listed in the annual report on research. The 1993 report will be published on 25 October and a copy will be placed in the Library.

The HSC is currently considering ways in which the effectiveness of its approach to regulation of health and safety for small firms and self-employed people might be improved.

EDUCATION

Outdoor Education Centres

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received on the impact of granting budgeting powers to individual schools on local education authority outdoor education centres; what research has been conducted by his Department on the subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations. The Department has not commissioned any research into this question, but the Sports Council is undertaking a research project into LEA residential outdoor centres as a community resource for sport and education: the Department is keeping in touch with that work.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education by whom his Department was represented at the national conference on local authority outdoor education centres held at 1 Kensington Gore, London, on 16 July.

Mr. Forth: There was no representation from this Department at the conference, but officials from the Department for National Heritage, which is the main parent Department for sport and recreation, were present.

Schools, Sheffield

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what weight he gives, in considering representations from governors and parents of schools in Sheffield, to the overall policies and objectives set out by Sheffield local education authority.

Mr. Robin Squire: In so far as statutory proposals for the organisation of schools reflect the overall policies and objectives set out by a local education authority, my right hon. Friend looks at each case on its merits, having regard to all relevant factors including statutory objections and other representations made to him.

English Curriculum

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish in full the responses received to the proposed revision of the English curriculum; and if he will provide a detailed breakdown of the responses on the 1 to 6 scale in section G of the consultation document.

Mr. Robin Squire: Consultation on the proposals for revisions to the English order was carried out by the National Curriculum Council (NCC), and a report on that consultation is being published this week by the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority, the successor body to the NCC.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies his Department has commissioned from the Royal Naval college, Greenwich, on the potential scope for accidents involving the release of radiation at dedicated naval bases or Z-berths for nuclear submarines.

Mr. Hanley: The Royal Naval college, Greenwich is primarily a teaching establishment. The function of the department of nuclear science and technology at the college is to undertake training in support of the naval nuclear propulsion programme—including plant operation and maintenance, and nuclear accident management. Like other advanced academic establishments, the college undertakes theoretical work relevant to its teaching function, including mathematical modelling related to nuclear reactor accident response.

Spending

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of gross national product is spent on defence in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany, (c) Japan and (d) France.

Mr. Hanley: Defence expenditure for the United Kingdom, Germany and France in 1992 as a proportion of GDP, is set out in figure 11 of the 1993 "Statement on the Defence Estimates" (Cm 2770) and is respectively 4·1 per cent., 2·2 per cent. and 3·4 per cent. Japan is expected to devote around 1 per cent. of its GDP to defence in 1992-93.

Low Flying

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the number of sorties conducted by (a) foreign aircraft in the United Kingdom low-flying system and (b) United Kingdom aircraft in the low-flying system of other nations over the most recent period for which figures are available.

Mr. Hanley: The number of sorties flown by foreign aircraft in the United Kingdom low-flying system during 1992 was 2,045. During 1993 to the end of September 1,251 sorties have been flown. These figures cover only those sorties flown by foreign aircraft not based in the United Kingdom.

Detailed figures for RAF low flying overseas are not held centrally. A limited amount of information is however, available on low flying carried out by the RAF in Germany and at Goose Bay, Canada. Between April and December 1992 RAF fast jet aircraft flew some 2,400 low-level sorties in Germany, and some 1,800 have been flown so far this year. In 1992 RAF aircraft flew 1,028 low-level sorties at Goose Bay, and 581 have been flown this year.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: My Department has no record of having any contact with Mr. Doyle. I have no plans to meet him.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Technology Foresight Programme

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the launch of the technology foresight programme on 13 September, indicating what additional resources have been committed to the programme.

Mr. Waldegrave: The purpose of foresight is to develop working partnerships between industry and academia in identifying market and technology opportunities. I am delighted at the constructive response from both to the consultative seminars we are holding across the country on how this might best be achieved. The programme is being guided by a steering group of industrialists and academics chaired by the chief scientific adviser. A budget of approximately £1 million has been allocated to the programme over this and the next financial year.

Civil Servants (Public Meetings)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster in what circumstances Ministers may require civil servants to address public meetings on their behalf.

Mr. Waldegrave: Authority can be given to civil servants to make public speeches explaining declared Government policy or discussing the processes of government. On occasions civil servants have also been authorised to read speeches on policy matters prepared for Ministers who have been prevented at the last minute from doing so themselves. In such cases the fact that the civil servant is reading the Minister's text is made clear. These have been the practices of successive Governments.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts are currently being made by his Department to encourage threshold states to accede to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty prior to the 1995 review conference.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We continue to encourage non-parties to the non-proliferation treaty to accede to the treaty at the earliest possible date.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will make it their policy to advocate the indefinite extension of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty at the 1995 review conference and at all preparatory meetings.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We will continue to reiterate in all appropriate fora the importance we attach to securing the unconditional and indefinite extension of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty at the 1995 extension and review conference.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what efforts are currently being undertaken by his Department to encourage state parties to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty to attend the 1995 nuclear non-proliferation treaty review conference.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Prior to the first preparatory committee to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty extension and review conference in May this year, with the co-depositaries to the treaty—the United States and the Russian Federation—we lobbied all states party to come to the Prepcom. Over three-quarters attended. We shall undertake similar exercises before the remaining three Prepcoms and the 1995 conference itself, as well as taking other opportunities to emphasise the importance we attach to maximum attendance in 1995.

Kenya

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice is currently offered by his Department to persons proposing to visit Kenya; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Foreign and Commonwealth Office consular travel advice for Kenya is:

"Incidents of mugging and violent crime occur throughout Kenya. Do not go about Nairobi or coastal towns on foot at night, and avoid empty beaches. There has been an increase in the incidence of armed car hijackings especially in the Nairobi area.

There have also been recent disturbances in Mombasa old town but the main tourist areas at the coast remain peaceful. Even when escorted, traffic using the Malindi/Garsen/Lamu road is vulnerable to attack by bandits. The road should not be used.

Game reserves remain generally calm, but travel to North East Province or the Isiolo or Marsabit districts of Eastern Province is potentially dangerous, except to Samburu Game Reserve or with tour operators to Shaba Game Reserve. Exercise particular care when travelling in out-of-the-way places."

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Goodlad: The cost of (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas for the FCO—including the ODA—for the current and the previous four financial years is as follows:

	Premises £ million	Personnel £ million
1989-90	113·9	197·4
1990-91	112·0	212·2
1991-92	118·2	224·8
1992-93	129·3	239·4
1993-94	132·8	245·7

The figures for premises include the cost of notional rent for properties owned by Her Majesty's Government, as required by Her Majesty's Treasury. For 1993-94 this figure is £38·9 million.

Inhumane Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress towards ratification by Her Majesty's Government of (a) the 1977 additional protocols to the Geneva convention and (b) the 1981 inhumane weapons convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: (a) We have reached a decision to ratify the additional protocols, and we plan to do so as soon as the necessary legislation can be enacted in domestic law.

(b) We are now able to turn our attention to the 1981 United Nations weaponry convention, and we hope to reach a decision soon on ratification of that convention.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Fisheries Inspectors

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give details of the number of fisheries inspectors employed by each EC member.

Mr. Jack: The most recent information on numbers of EC fisheries officers employed in member states is contained in a Commission report on monitoring implementation of the common fisheries policy, published in March 1992. Details are as follows:

	Port-based	HQ-based
Belgium	Duties carried out by Naval Authorities and Maritime Police	1
Denmark	145	n/a
Germany	47	n/a
France	Carried out by Maritime Police	n/a
Ireland	n/a	n/a
Netherlands	180	n/a
Portugal	Carried out by Customs, Navy and others	12
Spain	Carried out by Marine Civil Guard, defence forces and others	[2]42
United Kingdom	142	[1]26

[2] Includes recruitment of 25 inspectors (of which 15 were planned when data were collected).
n/a = Not available.

Common Agriculture Policy

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimated total cost of the common agricultural policy in (a) 1993 and (b) 1994; and what was the actual total in 1990, 1991, 1992 and 1993.

Mr. Jack: The information for CAP guarantee expenditure is as follows:

	Mecu	£ million
1990	27,041	19,197
1991	31,950	22,357
1992	32,177	22,770
[1]1993	35,352	27,836
[2]1994	36,465	28,448

[1] Revised budget.
[2] Draft budget.

Year	Exchange rates
1990	£1=1·4086 ecu
1991	£1=1·4291 ecu
1992	£1=1·4131 ecu
1993	£1=1·2700 ecu
1994	£1=1·2818 ecu

Intervention Beef

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost of storing one tonne of intervention beef for one year at the last date for which figures are available.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Responsibility for this matter is delegated to the Intervention Board executive agency and I have asked the chief executive to reply to the hon. Gentleman direct.

Letter to Mr. Elliot Morley from Guy Stapleton, dated 22 October 1993:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your priority written Parliamentary Question (2136) tabled for answer on 19 October 1993:—

"To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what was the cost of storing one tonne of intervention beef for one year at the last date for which figures are available".

Intervention beef is stored in commercial cold stores. The rates paid by the Agency are determined by open competition and vary in line with changes in the demand for cold storage. Over the past twelve months, the average cost of storing intervention beef for one year, including inspection receipt, handling and delivering-out charges, has been around £120 per tonne (exc. VAT).

I am sending a copy of this letter to the House of Commons Library and the Public Information Office.

Fishing

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what investigation her Department has carried out regarding alleged smuggling of undersized fish by other EC countries in British waters; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what discussions she intends to have with other EC member states with regard to breaches in EC fishing regulations within British waters.

Mr. Jack: The rules of the common fisheries policy are enforced on vessels of all nationalities in United Kingdom waters through an extensive programme of inspections, both at sea and in port. Prosecutions in the United Kingdom of infringements by other member states' vessels are notified to the flag state. There is close liaison between United Kingdom fishery officers and the enforcement authorities in a number of other EC states, and we are working to strengthen and extend these further. I raised the question of undersize fish and enforcement issues when I met the EC Fisheries Commissioner Yannis Paleokrassas on 12 October 1993.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to raise the matter of alleged Spanish pirate fishing fleets operating in British waters with the Spanish Government and the EC; if she will give details of the actions her Department will take; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I sent a copy of the television programme in which the allegations were made to the EC Fisheries Commissioner and the Spanish Fisheries Minister. I subsequently met the Commissioner on 12 October and was much heartened by his very positive response. He shares my concern to secure more consistent enforcement of fisheries policy throughout the Community and to find new ways in which there could be co-operative joint efforts to ensure that all member states give a higher priority to effective enforcement provisions. I shall be continuing to press this matter with my colleagues in other member states.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between her Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans she has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: We have no record of having any contact with Mr. Doyle and have no plans to meet.

Milk Marketing Board

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she will consult on the Milk Marketing Board's reorganisation scheme.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I and the Secretary of State for Wales have today invited comments from interested organisations in England and Wales on the scheme of reorganisation submitted to us by the Milk Marketing Board for England and Wales (MMB) under the Agriculture Act 1993.

The MMB has proposed in its reorganisation scheme that the milk marketing scheme should end on 1 April 1994. On that day certain of the MMB's assets would be transferred to a voluntary co-operative, Milk Marque, membership of which would be open to all producers in England and Wales. The scheme also provides for the flotation of the MMB's commercial subsidiary Dairy Crest. Eligible producers would receive shares in Dairy crest and certificates of entitlement in Milk Marque. Certain assets and liabilities would be retained by the MMB, which would continue in residuary form after the end of the milk marketing scheme to wind up its affairs.

We have asked to receive comments by 29 November 1993.

Fertilisers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what precautionary instructions and advice have been issued to farmers in respect of safeguarding the storing of fertilisers; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have been asked to reply.

The Health and Safety Executive has issued a range of guidance relating to the storage of fertilisers and most recently this subject has been covered in its publication entitled "Farmwise". Agriculture inspectors also advise farmers on the safe storage of fertilisers during their site visits.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the number of fishing vessels registered at ports in the United Kingdom on 1 June 1979 and on 1 June 1993.

Mr. Norris: I have been asked to reply.

There is no information on the numbers on 1 June 1979. The most relevant information available is as follows:

	Number
December 1979	15,161
June 1993	10,166

WALES

Toll Roads

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to ensure adequate consultations on and evaluation of toll road proposals at all key stages.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Under the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 the procedures for authorisation of a toll road are similar to those of the Highways Act 1980 that apply to publicly financed roads; there will therefore be a similar approach to public consultation and public inquiry.

Any scheme which was taken forward by means of individual legislation would be subject to detailed scrutiny by Parliament.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will issue guidelines for the development of toll road proposals.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Privately financed toll roads can be provided only in accordance with the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991, or by individual legislation. Guidelines on the Act were contained in a circular issued to local authorities by the Department of Transport and the Welsh Office in March 1992. Evaluation of a prospective concessionaire's proposals will be a matter for the highway authority, but a statement is published with a draft toll order, under the 1991 Act, setting out the key points of a concession agreement.

Environment Wales Initiative

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the first report of the environment Wales initiative was published; how many copies were printed; to whom it has been circulated; and if he will make a statement on further initiatives he plans following the lessons learned from the environment Wales programme.

Mr. Redwood: The environment Wales first annual report was published in August 1993. Five hundred copies were printed and received a wide distribution including the chief executives of district and county councils in Wales, the voluntary environmental sector, companies in the private sector including Business in the Community, selected media interests and of course Welsh Members of the House. I have arranged for additional copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

The initiative is now half way through its second very successful year. The report speaks for itself; it reflects the degree of commitment and innovation shown by all those involved. In particular it indicates the success that the organisations participating in the initiative have had in generating funds, in addition to the Welsh Office grant, especially from private sector sources. A review of the initiative will be carried out next year which will consider its future direction in the light of experience during the first three years of its operation.

Team Care Valleys Project

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what follow-up action he proposes to capitalise on the findings of the team care valleys project; what consultations he has had on the lessons learnt; what proposals he has to publish the results; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The team care valleys project ended on 31 August 1993 and the report of an independent assessment of its performance is awaited.

The successor valleys health group is preparing a business plan. It will be guided by an advisory board which will include senior health care professionals and academics. It will also take into account the views of the independent assessors, when they are available.

Trawsfynydd Power Station

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the result of the Trawsfynydd nuclear power station entry in the Wales tourist board's annual competition in the best newcomer category; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Trawsfynydd nuclear power station's visitor centre was one of the 30 entries in the "Best Newcomer" category of the Wales tourism awards. It did not, however, win an award.

Local Development Projects

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what local development projects have been undertaken in Wales in the last five years; and what are their costs.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 16 July 1993]: I wrote to the hon. Gentleman on 4 August and placed a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Nursery and Higher Education

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many training places have been (a) made available and (b) filled for nursery teachers and nursery nurses in Wales in each year from 1985;

(2) what proportion of 18 and 19-year-olds entered full-time higher education in Wales in each year since 1986.

Sir Wyn Roberts [holding answer 22 and 23 July 1993]: I wrote to the hon. Gentleman on 16 September and placed a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Moats

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the (a) surveys and (b) excavations that are currently being carried out of moated sites of archaeological interest in England and Wales.

Mr. Brooke: English Heritage's monuments protection programme is reviewing moated sites as part of the exercise to evaluate all known archaeological remains in England. It is not possible to provide a comprehensive list of all sites where surveys or excavations are currently being carried out because such activities can be undertaken by many different organisations and for a variety of reasons. Any works to a moated site which is a scheduled monument would require prior scheduled monument consent.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales is responsible for archaeological matters in Wales.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Department of National Heritage has been in existence only since April 1992. Since that time we have not held any meetings, nor entered into correspondence, with Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Expenditure

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has as to the effect on social security expenditure of all kinds, including passport benefits, of raising the income tax threshold to £100 per week.

Mr. Burt: The effect would be a reduction of around £160 million per year.

It is not possible to estimate the effect this change would have on the NHS low income scheme.

Computerisation

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the cost of computerising the administration and payment of benefits by his Department's local offices and within the central administration.

Mr. Burt: The latest estimate of the total cost of computerising the administration and payment of benefits by the Department is in the table.

	£ billion
Total cost of the Operational Strategy 1985-86 to 1998-89	2·64
Total costs incurred by end of the financial year 1992-93	1·55

Social Security Appeal Tribunals

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what meetings the president of the social security appeal tribunals has had, and with whom, on the admittance of late appeals in the last five years.

Mr. Burt: This is a matter for the president of the independent tribunal service, his honour, Judge Thorpe, and he will be writing to the hon. Member direct on this matter.

Maintenance Payments

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average increase in maintenance payments since the introduction of the Child Support Agency; and what percentage of absentee parents have not been traced.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter to Mr. Peter L. Pike from Ros Hepplewhite, dated 22 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what is the average increase in maintenance payments since the introduction of the Child Support Agency; and what percentage of absentee parents have not been traced.

The Child Support Act provides for maintenance to be assessed by means of a standard formula that produces predictable and realistic amounts. However, as the Agency has only been operating since April this year it is too early to be able to say what overall effect the Agency has had on the level of maintenance payments. It has always been made clear that the amount of maintenance worked out by the Agency under the formula may be higher than a previous court order in some cases. Average maintenance payments were £25 to £30 a week and under the formula the average is expected to be £45 to £50 a week.

At the end of August, in less than one per cent. of cases where an application form had been returned has completed tracing action, so far, been unable to locate the absent parent.

I hope you will find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to publish the findings of the research into invalidity benefit carried out by his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The Department's research into invalidity benefit consists of five studies, all of which have now been published. Copies of the reports have been placed in the Library.

The reports make clear that other countries are also experiencing growth in long-term incapacity benefits, that the GP's present role does not always sit easily within the current system, and that questions of incapacity for work tend not to be decided by medical criteria alone but are allied to a range of other social factors. We are considering the findings carefully within the context of our review of social security.

"Invalidity Benefit: A Preliminary Qualitative Study of the Factors Affecting Its Growth" and "GPs and IVB" were published on 3 September; "Invalidity Benefit, A Survey of Recipients" and "Invalidity Benefit, An International Comparison" on 29 September; and "Invalidity Benefit, A Longitudinal Survey of New Recipients" on 15 October.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will receive a reply over sickness benefit to his letter of 7 September written to the Secretary of State for Health and transferred: reference 4/3644/36.

Mr. Scott: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State wrote to the hon. Member yesterday.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: We have no record of any contact with Mr. Doyle and have no plans to meet.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list (a) those buildings in Leeds currently used by Benefits Agency staff and (b) the date at which the office space was bought or leased.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter to Mr. Derek Fatchett from Michael Bichard, dated 21 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions raised about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking if he will list (a) those buildings in Leeds currently used by Benefits Agency staff and (b) the date at which the office space was bought or leased.

I hope that you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the gross domestic product per capita in 1990 for the United Kingdom and for each county in the United Kingdom (a) in pound sterling and (b) expressed in US dollars at the exchange rate used to produce the gross domestic product per capita figures in table 31 of the United Nations Development Programme's human development report 1993.

Mr. Nelson: (a) The latest estimates of United Kingdom GDP per capita in 1990 pound sterling were published in the "United Kingdom National Accounts Blue Book 1993 Edition", which is available in the House of Commons Library. The latest figures available for the counties within the United Kingdom are for 1989, and were published in the November 1991 issue of Economic Trends, which is available in the House of Commons Library. The figures for the regions of Scotland were revised earlier this year, and provided in a written answer to the question from my hon. Friend the Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 12 February 1993 at columns 802-3.

(b) Estimates of GDP for the regions and counties of the United Kingdom are derived by summing factor incomes, and are therefore available only on a factor cost basis. The conversion to purchasing power parity US dollars, as shown at the national level in the "UN Human Development Report 1993", can be carried out only using GDP estimates at market prices, not at factor cost.

Crown Estate Commissioners

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many copies of the Crown Estate Commissioners annual report for the year ended 31 March were printed; and at what cost each copy was produced.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Six thousand copies of the commissioners' annual report for the year ended 31 March 1993 were printed. Each copy cost £5·10 to produce.

VAT

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the revenue which would arise from a 1 per cent. increase in value added tax.

Sir John Cope: Table 7 of the publication "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" shows that raising the standard rate of VAT by 1 percentage point would raise £2,245 million in 1994-95.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the revenue raised by a value added tax level of 8 per cent. on (a) passenger transport, (b) water and sewerage service, (c) children's clothing, (d) children's shoes, (e) newspapers and magazines and (f) books.

Sir John Cope: In July 1993 the Treasury published "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs". Table 9 of this publication shows the estimated cost of the main zero rated items in 1993-94 compared with applying the standard rate of VAT. The relevant figures are as follows:

	Revenue £ million
Domestic passenger transport	1,150
Water and sewerage services	800
Children's clothing and shoes	600
Books, newspapers and magazines	1,100

These figures can be adjusted pro rata to arrive at a rough estimate of the yield from applying a different rate of VAT to these items. The figures make no allowance for changes in behaviour that would result from applying VAT to these items.

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the yield in a full year of (a) 5 per cent. and (b) 8 per cent. VAT on everything which is currently zero rated, including domestic fuel.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 21 October 1993]: Applying VAT to all currently zero rated items, including domestic fuel and power would raise the following:

VAT rate Per cent.	Revenue £ billion

These figures are based on the year 1993-94 and make no allowance for changes in behaviour.

Taxation

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate for the number of persons currently living in the United Kingdom on the basis of untaxed capital remittances abroad.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that the information is not available.

Airport Tax

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish an estimate of the yield there would be to the Exchequer from an airport departure tax of £5 levied on everyone leaving from a United Kingdom airport for an overseas destination.

Sir John Cope: In 1992 there were approximately 36 million passenger departures from United Kingdom airports to overseas destinations according to the "International Passenger Survey". On this basis, the yield from an airport departure tax of £5 per passenger would have been approximately £180 million.

Company Car Tax

Mr. Mills: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will urgently publish a detailed guide to the procedures to be followed by employers and employees in the assessment of their obligations on company car tax including definition in detail of assessment of car list price; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: Guidance for employers on the new system for taxing company cars on the basis of their list price from 6 April 1994 will be published by the Inland Revenue on 29 October and will be available from all tax enquiry centres and tax offices. A guide for employees will be published on 8 November. Both give details of how the list price of a car for tax purposes was defined in the Finance Act 1993, following consultation in 1992.

The Inland Revenue also issued on 27 September a press release confirming that the new system is based on the list price of individual cars. A copy is in the Library.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the last 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: As far as can be established, the Treasury has had no contact with Mr. Doyle. I have no plans to meet him.

Clubs (VAT)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 22 July, to the hon. Member for Thanet, North (Mr. Gale), Official Report, column 303, whether the non-profit-making organisations to which he refers include non-profit-making private members' clubs which supply sporting and recreational services to their members; and whether club representative bodies are to be consulted about the proposed value added tax exemption.

Sir John Cope: The precise scope of the exemption has yet to be determined but it is likely to cover supplies of sporting and physical education services by non-profit-making members' clubs but not those made by proprietary clubs. Customs and Excise has issued a consultation paper and welcomes representations from any interested parties.

Medical Equipment

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has held about the levying of VAT upon medical aids such as CCTV print magnifiers and transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulator machines; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: I met representatives of the Disabled Living Foundation on 20 July and discussed the question of VAT on medical equipment. CCTV print magnifiers are relieved from VAT when supplied to visually impaired people. Customs and Excise has been unable to accept that transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulators—TENS—fall within the existing VAT reliefs, but a major supplier of TENS equipment has appealed the point to the independent VAT tribunal and a hearing should take place later in the autumn.

Domestic Fuel (VAT)

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the yield in a full year of 17·5 per cent. VAT on domestic fuel.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 21 October 1993]: At the time of its announcement in the last Budget it was estimated that applying VAT to domestic fuel and power would raise £2·85 billion in 1996-97, the first year that revenue will fully reflect the standard rate of 17½ per cent.

SCOTLAND

Transport Funding

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give all details of European regional development funds which have been allocated for transport initiatives in the last 12 months and which are proposed for the next 12 months.

Mr. Stewart: No ERDF funds have been allocated to specific transport initiatives in the last 12 months. However, ERDF has part-funded many transport infrastructure measures including ferry services, passenger rail services, bus stations and cycle routes, and such projects will continue to be aided through the various Scottish objective 2 and 5b programmes as well as the new objective 1 programme in the Highlands and Islands. It is too early to say what schemes or initiatives might come forward in 1994.

Fisheries (Bird Killing Licences)

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 27 April, Official Report, columns 377-78, in respect of how many of the licence applications to kill cormorants, goosanders or red-breasted mergansers for the prevention of serious damage to fisheries under section 16 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, received in Scotland in 1992, the Department carried out a site visit to assess evidence of serious damage to fisheries.

Sir Hector Monro: No site visits were made. Assessment of the potential damage to fisheries is based on a variety of factors, including the diets of the birds.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department consults Scottish Natural Heritage before issuing individual licences to kill cormorants, goosanders or red-breasted mergansers under section 16 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Sir Hector Monro: As required by section 16(10) of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department regularly consults Scottish Natural Heritage (SNH) on the circumstances under which licences should be granted to shoot these species of birds. Applicants for licences are encouraged to consult local SNH staff before submitting their applications.

Trade Descriptions Act

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prosecutions there have been in the past 10 years under section 14 of the Trades Descriptions Act 1968 for knowingly or recklessly making a false statement about the provision of accommodation in the course of business; and what was the penalty in each case of guilt being established.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is not separately recorded and could not be obtained except at disproportionate cost.

Student Finances

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the future administration of student awards in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has decided that the student awards branch of the Scottish Office Education Department should be placed under consideration as a candidate for executive agency status, under the "next steps" initiative.

Cervical Cytopathology

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list those recommendations contained in the report of the inquiry into cervical cytopathology at Inverclyde royal hospital, Greenock which (a) have been implemented already, (b) he will implement within the next six months, (c) are to be introduced within 12 months and (d) are not to be implemented; and if he will make a statement.

(2) when he expects to receive a report from the chief executive of the NHS in Scotland concerning the response of the Argyll and Clyde health board to the findings and recommendations contained in the report of the inquiry into cervical cytopathology of Inverclyde royal hospital, Greenock; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 October 1993]: The Government have indicated their acceptance of the broad thrust of the recommendations contained in the McGoogan report and is proceeding to implement those directed at the Scottish Office Home and Health Department. The aim is to implement these as quickly as is practical but the process involves consultations and discussions with professional bodies, health boards and trusts on the details. Of the seven recommendations addressed to the Department the Government have already announced the decisions to set up a central co-ordinating unit for cervical screening at an estimated cost of £100,000 per annum; to fund the Scottish proficiency testing scheme at an estimated cost of £20,000 per annum and to issue guidance to health boards and trusts on the proposals in respect of training, staffing, health education and rationalisation of laboratories. The membership of working groups on quality control and guidelines for reporting perceived discrepancies has still to be confirmed.

For those recommendations directed to the Argyll and Clyde health board and its laboratories, the report of the task force set up by the board to advise on the action to be taken is expected to be formally submitted to the management executive by the end of October.

The Government are determined to ensure that progress on implementation proceeds as quickly as circumstances allow. The position will be continually monitored.

RENAVAL Programme

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been spent in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Glasgow and (c) Fife under the terms of the European Community's RENAVAL programme in each of the past four years; what level of projects were supported in this way; to what extent and when the current programme will finish; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 October 1993]: The RENAVAL programme ends on 31 December 1993. I will write to the hon. Member about the more detailed aspects of his question.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 October 1993]: The Scottish Office has found no record of any meetings or correspondence with Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training. My right hon. Friend has no plans to meet Mr. Doyle.

Helensburgh

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the individuals or organisations which supported the proposed addition of Helensburgh into Argyll and Bute council during the consultation exercise on local government reform.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 October 1993]: The respondents to our public consultation who specifically supported the creation of a new authority based on Argyll and Bute district council plus the Helensburgh area are as listed.

C. I. J. and A. G. Harvey
Mr. Peter Hillis
Mr. George A. Hood
Tarbert and Skipness Community Council
Stirling and Gilmour, Solicitors
Dumbarton Scottish Conservative Association (Helensburgh Conservative Committee)
Helensburgh Community Council
Cove and Kilcreggan Community Council

In addition a number of responses expressed a preference for all of Dumbarton district or particular parts of it to be linked with Argyll and Bute. The proposal has also won significant support in surveys conducted at a local level in the area.

Sour Gas

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the power stations which have been authorised to use sour gas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

Section 14(2) of the Energy Act 1976 requires that notice be given to me of any proposal to enter into contractual or other arrangements to obtain a supply of gas as fuel for a power station. I am empowered under section 14(3) to direct that any proposal of which I am notified should not be carried out, or should be carried out in accordance with specified conditions.

There is no requirement for the notice to distinguish between sour and other gas. However, the following proposals have been notified under section 14(2) which may involve sour gas. I have not given any directions under section 14(3) preventing or modifying them.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Emergency Planning

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the proposed distribution of Home Office emergency planning grant aid for (a) 1993-94, (b) 1994-95 and (c) 1995-96 to enable the deficiencies identified in his predecessor's statement of 10 July 1991, Official Report, columns 391-94, to be remedied; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The new grant distribution arrangements, which come into operation on 1 April 1994, increase the proportion of resources which are allocated to metropolitan areas. Since the new Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1993 came into force on 1 August 1993, grant aid has been available for metropolitan districts and boroughs for the first time.

These measures are intended to assist metropolitan authorities in overcoming the problems in some areas which were referred to by the then Home Secretary in his statement of 10 July 1991.

Police (Deaths)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information was provided to the Sheehy committee on (a) the number and percentage of policemen who died within five years of retirement and (b) the number who died before the age of 60 years.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Government Actuary's Department provided the inquiry with a summary of the main assumptions used for the police pension scheme. These include the probability of death in-service for police officers aged 20 to 55 and the expectation of life of police officers retiring at ages 50 and 60.

Sheehy Inquiry

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the payments of (a) fees and (b) expenses made to Sir Patrick Sheehy and each other member of the inquiry for producing their report on the police.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The chairman and members of the inquiry did not accept fees. The costs of travel and subsistence in connection with the inquiry's work were reimbursed.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what experience of police duties and the management of criminals Sir Patrick Sheehy, Mr. Eric Caines, Mr. Colin Campbell or Mr. John Bullock had prior to being appointed to the Sheehy inquiry.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The chairman and members of the inquiry had no professional experience of working closely with the police service before being appointed. Their experience was of managing large organisations inside and outside the public sector.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish full statistics of the time spent by Sir Patrick Sheehy and each other inquiry member out with beat officers on duty.

Mr. Charles Wardle: A full list of the visits to forces which were undertaken by the inquiry members, which included opportunities to accompany officers on patrol, is provided at appendix I of volume 2 of the inquiry's report —Cm 2280.II.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the members of the Sheehy inquiry were provided with the full details of the number of policemen injured on duty.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Yes.

Prisons

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the criteria by which convicted criminals are placed in closed or open prisons.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Martin Redmond from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the criteria by which convicted prisoners are placed in closed or open prisons.

The criteria are set out in guidance to Prison Service establishments contained in Circular Instructions 7/1988 and 2/1991. Copies are in the House of Commons Library and have been made available to penal interest groups. I have sent personal copies to you.

I have no plans to publish this material more widely.

Prison Releases

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of Her Majesty's prison establishments issue references for future prospective employers to inmates who are currently being released after completing their sentence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Martin Redmond from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about prison establishments which provide to inmates on release references for future prospective employers.

The particular information which you have requested is not held centrally. The Prison Service has an obligation to help prisoners lead law-abiding and useful lives after their release. Prisoners may therefore be provided on their release with documents which, for example, describe the education and vocational training qualifications and work experience which they obtained in custody. These are likely to be relevant to any prospective employer and may assist the prisoner in obtaining a job.

If there are particular cases you would like to follow up may I suggest that you contact the governor of the establishment from which the prisoner was released. I shall, of course, be happy to deal with any further clarification you may wish to have on the question of references.

Summer Time

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the net effects of maintaining summer time in winter in terms of casualties, employment and simplicity for travellers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the 1989 Green Paper "Summer Time: A Consultation Document" (Cm. 722) which, as part of the assessment of the option of moving to single-double time, considered the effects of maintaining summer time in the winter on various aspects of national life including physical accidents, employment and travel.

New Prisons

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total cost of the new prison building programme due to be completed in 1994; and how many prison places will have been provided.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Ms Joan Ruddock from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the new prison building programme due to be completed in 1994.

When Doncaster prison is opened in 1994 this will see the completion of a building programme which will have provided 11,265 new places at 21 new prisons since 1985. The total cost of the programme will be £1·2 billion.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new Prison Service establishments have been completed since 1983; and if he will list those establishments together with (a) the total cost of each establishment and (b) the main building contractor in each case.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 21 October 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 19 October at columns 214-16.

Fine Defaults

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of people imprisoned for fine defaults in the years (a) 1990, (b) 1991, (c) 1992 and (d) 1993; and what percentage they represent of all receptions of sentenced prisoners.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Ms Joan Ruddock from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

RECEPTIONS OF FINE DEFAULTERS

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for information on the number of receptions of fine defaulters in the years (a) 1990, (b) 1991, (c) 1992 and (d) 1993 and what percentage they represent of all receptions of sentenced prisoners.

Information for 1990 and 1991 was published in the 1991 edition of "Prison statistics England and Wales" (Cm 2157) and I attach a copy of table 7.1 for ease of reference. Information for 1992 is only readily available for fine defaulters from 1 March 1992 to 31 August 1992. During this six month period 9,329 fine defaulters (8,815 males and 514 females) were received into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales. I am sorry to inform you that the corresponding information about receptions of sentenced prisoners is not yet available, and that none of the information for 1993 is yet available.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Howard: We have been unable to trace any record of contact with Mr. Doyle, and have no plans to meet him.

Penal Costs

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average cost per month of holding someone in prison in (a) 1990-91, (b) 1991-92, (c) 1992-93 and (d) currently; and what was the total cost for each year available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 18 October 1993]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Ms Joan Ruddock, from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the costs of holding someone in prison.

Year	Total net operating cost of prison establishments £ million	Net operating cost per inmate per month £
1990-91	1,009·6	1,897
1991-92	1,110·6	2,037
1992-93[1]	1,166·8	2,213
1993-94[2]	1,138·7	2,063

[1] Provisional.
[2] Forecast.

The reduction in costs between 1992-93 and 1993-94 is largely due to lower superannuation contributions.

Homosexual Prisoners

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on sending openly homosexual prisoners to HMP Ford.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 October 1993]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Ms Joan Ruddock from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the allocation of homosexual prisoners to Ford prison.

Openly homosexual prisoners are not sent to Ford prison as the allocation criteria excludes actively known homosexuals, except life sentenced prisoners, whose moves have been authorised by the Secretary of State as part of a progression towards release.

Young Offenders

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many 15-year-olds remanded in custody in 1992, spent (a) up to one week, (b) one to two weeks, (c) two to four weeks, (d) four to eight weeks, (e) eight weeks to three months, (f) three to six months and (g) over six months, in prison before their court case was concluded;

(2) how many 15-year-olds remanded into custody in 1993 to the latest date available spent (a) up to one week, (b) one to two weeks, (c) two four weeks, (d) four to eight weeks, (e) eight weeks to three months, (f) three to six months and (g) over six months in prison before their court case was concluded.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 October 1993]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Ms Joan Ruddock from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the length of time remanded 15 year olds have spent in custody before their court case was concluded in 1992 and 1993.

I regret to inform you that the information is not available in the form you have requested. The latest available information relates to the time spent in custody since the inmate's first reception into a Prison Service establishment up until the 30 June in each of the years you have requested. I enclose four tables showing the length of time untried and convicted unsentenced 15 year old inmates have spent in custody from the date of their first reception into a Prison Service establishment up until the 30 June 1992 and 30 June 1993.

The figures quoted include any intervening time spent on bail but exclude any time spent in police cells beforehand.

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking in how many instances of assault reported to the prison authorities the victim was a 15 year old inmate in (a) 1992 and (b) 1993 to the latest available date.

I regret to inform you that the information you have requested is not recorded centrally.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) which prisons and young offender institutions have held 15-year-olds as (a) remanded prisoners and (b) sentenced prisoners in (i) 1992 and (ii) 1993 to the latest date available;

(2) where 15-year-olds currently (a) remanded in custody and (b) sentenced to custody were being held, (i) on 1 January and (ii) at the latest date available;

(3) how many 15-year-olds were being held in custody (a) on 1 January and (b) on the latest date for which figures are available; how many of them were (a) on remand pending trial or entering pleas, (b) on remand pending sentence or (c) sentenced; and, in each category, how many were male and how many were female.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 October 1993]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Ms Joan Ruddock from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

15 year old inmates in prison service establishments

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions asking for the location and numbers of untried, convicted unsentenced and sentenced 15 year old inmates in Prison Service establishments in 1992 and 1993.

I regret that we are unable to supply you with information for 1 January as requested. The readily available information relates to the population of 15 year old males and females in Prison Service establishments on 30 June 1992, 30 June 1993 and 31 August 1993. I therefore attach three tables detailing the population of untried, convicted unsentenced and sentenced inmates by establishment, split by sex for these dates. The information is drawn from central records which are subject to the errors inherent in a large computerised database.

Prison Staff

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what were the (a) targeted staffing levels and (b) actual staffing levels at each prison in England and Wales;

(2) if he will provide a breakdown of staff numbers in each prison in England and Wales, by rank, gender and race.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 18 October 1993]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Ms Joan Ruddock from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about staffing in the Prison Service.

I attach at Annex A a list of target staffing figures and staff in post at each Prison Service establishment on 31 August. As to the differences, for historical reasons some target staffing figures reflect former complements which were unfunded. On 1 April we devolved to governors the responsibility for recruiting prison officers and, subject to the maximum set by the TSF, deciding the number and mix of staff within their running costs budgets.

It may be helpful if I explain the largest gaps between the target staffing figures and staff in post:

Brixton—The target staffing figure on 31 August had still to be adjusted to reflect a transfer of work to Belmarsh; it has since been reduced by 33 to 737;

Hull—The target staffing figure incorporates new posts created as a result of a change of role at the establishment; these posts are in the process of being filled as required;

Leeds—The target staffing figure incorporates the additional posts for two new wings which had not opened by 31 August; the staff in post numbers were still building up in anticipation of opening;

Risley—The staff in post, but not the target staffing figure, include around 30 staff in a temporary allocation centre.

A breakdown of staff in post at every Prison Service establishment, showing grade, gender and ethnic background could only be produced at disproportionate cost. The readily available information at Annex B shows the number and proportion of permanent staff in each grade who are women or members of the ethnic minorities for the Prison Service as a whole.

The figures for staff from the ethnic minorities are based on responses to a voluntary survey of staff ethnic origins and include all who described their own ethnic origin as other than white. Our database of staff ethnic origins now covers approximately 74 per cent. of staff in non-industrial grades. We are taking steps to fill the gaps in that database, and we also hope to extend the database to cover staff in the industrial grades.

Prisons (Blood Transfusion)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on allowing prisoners to give blood.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 October 1993]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Ms Joan Ruddock from Derek Lewis, dated 22 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the policy on allowing prisoners to give blood.

The Prison Service has no general policy on this matter because in practice the National Blood Transfusion Service does not collect blood from prisoners.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Coal

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on what progress has been made by the Government on their policies announced in their White Paper on coal.

Mr. Eggar: As I indicated in my statement on 20 October, Official Report, columns 277-78, we have announced our intention that British Coal's mining assets should be offered for sale in five regional packages; we have issued two consultation papers covering the pensions and concessionary fuel regimes after privatisation; we expect shortly to receive the comprehensive advice of the Health and Safety Commission on all aspects of the post-privatisation safety regime; we are repealing the Coal Mines Regulation Act 1908 with effect from 20 November; Dr. Martin Holdgate has agreed to become chairman of the Energy Advisory Panel; British Coal has offered for licence 20 pits that it does not wish to keep in production and is currently considering 12 tenders for seven of those pits; and, subject to EC clearance, we are offering a subsidy to British Coal in support of additional sales from Ellington colliery to British Alcan's power station at Lynemouth.

Embargoed Police Equipment

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the equipment which is designated as police or security equipment included in the United Nations embargo list.

Mr. Needham: The United Nations does not itemise police or security equipment in any United Nations Security Council resolution. Exports of military and paramilitary police equipment are controlled to all destinations by part III, group I of the Export of Goods Control Order 1992.

Home-based Telecommunications

Mr. Wigley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the current budget of the Department for research and development on home-based telecommunications.

Mr. McLoughlin: DTI expenditure on research and development projects on home-based working with the aid of telecommunications is forecast at around £0·25 million over the next three years. The projects' total value when other partners' contributions are taken into account will be at least double this amount. Because telecommunications may support work practices relevant to both the office and the home, there will also be research not attributed to home-based working which will have some relevance to it.

Projects included a one-year study of the business and economic implications of teleworking; the connected community project—in which Apple Computers and BT have contributed equipment to a community to improve its business and community activities—and several projects under the computer-supported co-operative work (CSCW) programme relevant to home-based working.

There is also a major European Community programme, telematics systems for rural areas, worth 14 million ecu. Two projects within this programme are led by the United Kingdom:

MITRE – Market implementation of teleworking in rural areas; and PATRA – Psychological aspects of teleworking in rural areas.

Nuclear Safeguards

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to advocate an increase to the International Atomic Energy Agency budget for safeguards activities at the review conference on the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in 1995 and all preparatory meetings.

Mr. Eggar: The proper forum for the discussion of the IAEA's budget is the agency's board of governors. The IAEA general conference in September this year requested the IAEA's director general to intensify his efforts towards improving the effectiveness and cost-efficiency of the safeguards system. My Government support this initiative and will continue to argue for the provision of resources sufficient for the agency to discharge all its safeguards responsibilities in a cost-effective manner.

Copyright

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his policy towards the proposed harmonisation of copyright in the EC; when action will become necessary on the issue; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government support harmonisation of copyright laws in the European Community where this is necessary for the proper functioning of the internal market, and particularly when the result is to increase protection elesewhere in the Community for works of United Kingdom origin. The European Commission has already embarked on an extensive programme of copyright harmonisation, the current situation being as follows:

(a) a directive on the copyright protection of computer programs has been adopted and was implemented in the United Kingdom on 1 January 1993;

(b) a directive on rental and lending rights and certain rights related to copyright was adopted on 19 November 1992;

(c) a directive on copyright and related rights applicable to satellite broadcasting and cable transmission was adopted on 27 September 1993;

(d) a common position was reached on 22 July 1993 on a directive harmonising the term of protection of copyright and certain related rights;

(e) a draft directive on the legal protection of databases is under negotiation; and

(f) the Commission is currently considering action on home taping of sound and audiovisual recordings, and is studying moral rights, reprography, artists' resale right and the collective administration of rights.

Fuel Costs

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has on the total expenditure in (a) the domestic sector and (b) all other sectors on (i) gas, (ii) electricity and (iii) all other fuels, in each of the past three years; and if he will estimate expenditure in the current year.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested is shown in the table:

Estimated expenditure on energy by final users

£ million

	1990	1991	1992
Domestic sector
Natural gas	4,865	5,775	5,685
Electricity	6,255	7,105	7,460
All other fuels	1,160	1,240	1,140
TOTAL	12,280	14,120	14,285
All other sectors

Electricity	8,450	9,035	9,645
All other fuels	23,100	23,850	23,910
TOTAL	33,895	35,390	35,960
All final consumers
Natural gas	7,210	8,280	8,090
Electricity	14,705	16,140	17,105
All other fuels	24,260	25,090	25,050
TOTAL	46,175	49,510	50,245

Source: UK Digest of Energy Statistics 1993.

Notes:

1. The figures have been rounded to the nearest £5 million.
2. The "all other fuels" figure includes the estimated commercial value of coal supplied free or at concessionary prices to miners.
3. The domestic sector figures exclude purchases of motor spirit, derv fuel, and lubricating oils which are treated as part of the transport sector.

Most data used to compile this table are collected annually and estimates for 1993 will not be available until mid-1994. However, for the domestic sector figures are available for the first six months of 1993 and show total domestic energy expenditure 1·5 per cent. lower than in the first six months of 1992, with expenditure on gas 1·5 per cent. higher but expenditure on electricity and all other fuels 3 per cent. and 6 per cent. lower respectively.

Land Mines

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to declare a moratorium on the export of land mines from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

We are not contemplating separate legislation to cover the export of land mines from the United Kingdom. We believe that our current stringent controls on the export of defence equipment, which includes control on all mines, are sufficient to stop the sale of these weapons to countries which may use them in an irresponsible manner.

Regional Assistance

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) when he will reply to the letter of the hon. Member for Thurrock dated 26 August relating to assisted area status and objective 2 status; and what is the reason for the delay in his reply;

(2) on what dates in September he met representatives of Southend borough to discuss assisted area and objective 2 status for the Southend travel-to-work area; which hon. Members attended the meetings; which hon. Members representing any part of the Southend travel-to-work area were not invited to the meetings; and what plans he has to discuss assisted area objective 2 status for the Southend travel-to-work area with representatives of the Thurrock borough council and the hon. Member for Thurrock.

Mr. Sainsbury [holding answer 20 October 1993]: Among a large number of requests for meetings about the review of objective 2 and 5(b) areas, I received one from the hon. Member for Thurrock in his letter of 26 August and another from my right hon. Friend the Member for Southend, West (Mr. Channon).

I met my right hon. Friend, my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Sir T. Taylor) and five representatives from Southend borough council on 8 September.

In response to the hon. Member's letter of 26 August, my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Technology telephoned the hon. Member to offer a separate meeting with him and representatives of Thurrock borough council. This offer was, however, declined by the hon. Member and by the council and no further action was therefore taken on the letter.

I have no plans at this stage of the review for further meetings with local authorities. The Government's proposals for objective 2 areas, which include part of Thurrock within the east Thames corridor area, and also part of Southend, are now being considered by the European Commission.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 25 October 1993

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Birkenhead Precinct

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, how the proceeds of selling the commissioners' holding in the Birkenhead precinct have been reinvested.

Mr. Alison: Proceeds from sales of commissioners' property are, generally speaking, applied towards the consolidation of the investment portfolio. Recent sale proceeds, including those from Grange precinct, have been used mainly to fund the remainder of the commissioners' development programme and to reduce borrowings.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Voting Procedures

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he has any plans to change the House's voting procedures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have no such plans.

Parliamentary Television Feed

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will make a statement on securing direct television feeds to hon. Members' offices from the Chamber.

Mr. Newton: Until recently the only Members authorised by the Broadcasting Committee to receive a clean television feed from the Chamber in their offices within the House were the Speaker and the Chairman of Ways and Means. However, at its meeting on 19 July, the Committee agreed that for the purposes of facilitating the management of the business of the House, the following additional Members' offices should be supplied with a clean television feed: the Prime Minister; the Leader of the Opposition; the Leader of the House; the Shadow Leader of the House; the Leader of the Liberal Democrats; and the Whips Offices of the Government, the Official Opposition and the Liberal Democrats. The installation of the necessary cabling and television sets was carried out during the summer recess.

So far as individual hon. and right hon. Members are concerned, the hon. Gentleman will be aware from previous answers on this subject that the Committee has approved in principle the supply of a feed to all Members' offices, provided that the service is available to all parts of the Parliamentary estate simultaneously. The Committee has also accepted, however, that because of the complexity and cost of the cabling work involved in such an undertaking, further progress must await decisions on the broader question of the provision of a parliamentary data and video network to Members' offices. Proposals on this subject, which are currently under consideration by the Information Committee, are not expected to come before the House until the beginning of 1994 at the earliest.

Members' Employees

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many employees of hon. Members are paid out of the office costs allowance; and how many hon. Members have given their employees a contract of employment.

Mr. Newton: At 30 September 1993, 1,656 employees of hon. Members were directly paid salaries which were charged to the employing Members' office costs allowance. A total of 617 hon. Members have given one or more of their employees a contract of employment.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many individuals currently in receipt of employee payments from the office costs allowance are married or otherwise related to current hon. Members.

Mr. Newton: This information is not available.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many hon. Members have not yet given any of their staff a contract of employment; how many individual staff do not have contracts; what action he is taking to ensure contracts are provided; what sanction he has against hon. Members who refuse to issue contracts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Twenty-four Members have not lodged a copy of the contract of employment in respect of any of their staff who are classified as employees.

Copies of contracts have not been sent to the Fees Office in respect of 264 employees of Members. The Fees Office continually monitors the position and periodically reminds hon. Members of their obligation to provide contracts.

I am not aware of any Members who have refused to issue contracts and I have no plans to make a statement.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many parliamentary questions have been answered in the last 12 months with the statement that the required figures are not available.

Mr. Newton: This information is not in a readily available form and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Inhumane Weapons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many states have made representations to his Department with regard to the holding of a conference to review the inhumane weaspons convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are in touch with EC and NATO partners about the proposal to convene a review conference on the United Nations weaponry convention, but no states have so far made representations to us on this issue.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those states that have (a) signed and (b) ratified the 1977 additional protocols to the Geneva conventions.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The following states have ratified, accepted or acceded to additional protocol I to the Geneva conventions:

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those states that have (a) signed and (b) ratified the inhumane weapons convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The following states have ratified, accepted or acceded to the convention:

Australia, Austria, Benin, Bosnia-Hercegovina, Bulgaria, Byelorussia, China, Cuba, Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Ecuador, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Guatemala, Hungary, India, Japan, Latvia, Laos, Liechtenstein, Mexico, Mongolia, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Niger, Norway, Pakistan, Poland, Russia, Slovakia, Slovenia, Sweden, Switzerland, Tunisia, Ukraine and Yugoslavia.

The following states have signed but not ratified the convention:

Afghanistan, Argentina, Belgium, Canada, Egypt, Iceland, Ireland, Italy. Luxembourg, Morocco, Nicaragua, Nigeria, the Philippines, Portugal, Romania, Sierra Leone, Spain, Sudan, Togo, Turkey, United Kingdom, United States and Vietnam.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on how many states have made representations to the United Nations Secretary-General with regard to the holding of a conference to review the inhumane weapons convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Our information is that only France has made representations to the United Nations Secretary General to request the convening of a review conference on the United Nations weaponry convention.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects that the United Kingdom will ratify the 1981 inhumane weapons convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: As I told the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) in my reply to his question on 22 October at column 371, we hope to reach a decision soon on ratification of the 1981 UN weaponry convention.

High Commission, Nairobi

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the cost of the construction of the new British High Commission office in Nairobi, Kenya; and when this work is expected to be completed.

Mr. Goodlad: The estimated outturn construction cost is £5·3 million and the High Commission is programmed to move into the new premises in summer 1995.

European Movement

Mr. Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what extent the European Movement continues to receive funds from his Department.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office gave the European Movement a grant of £30,000 in 1992 to fund a series of regional conferences on the Maastricht treaty. The European Movement will receive a grant of £10,000 this year. No commitment has been given for future years.

Gul Masih

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on the case of Gul Masih, a Christian sentenced to death under the blasphemy laws in Pakistan; and what action he has taken.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There has been considerable parliamentary and public interest in this case. While an appeal is pending and the case is sub judice, we have not taken any formal action. We have however on several occasions made clear informally to the Pakistani authorities the strength of feeling this case has aroused in the United Kingdom. We will consider what action we should take when the appeal has been heard.

Human Rights Week

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support he has given to Amnesty International's Human Rights Week; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We take every opportunity to promote respect for human rights. We recognise Amnesty International's important role in identifying human rights abuses and bringing pressure to bear on governments which commit them. We welcome Amnesty International's efforts to highlight the obnoxious practices of political killings and disappearances.

Human Rights

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what changes have taken place in the procedures of the European Court of Human Rights and the European Commission of Human Rights since the Vienna declaration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There have been no changes because discussions on reform of the procedures of the European Commission and Court of Human Rights are still in progress. The Vienna declaration called for the work on reform to be completed, and a draft protocol amending the European Convention on Human Rights to be finalised, in time for the Council of Europe ministerial meeting in May 1994. The United Kingdom will contribute fully to this process.

Chinese Regional Laws

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the texts of regional law in China are available to his Department.

Mr. Goodlad: The texts of most Chinese regional laws are now published in Chinese and are freely available.

Anti-personnel Mines

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Kingdom will support the United States resolution at the United Nations General Assembly calling for a moratorium on the export of anti-personnel mines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We are in touch with the United States about their draft resolution but we will not be able to take a final position on it until we see the final text.

Israel Trade Boycott

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on discussions with the Arab States on moves to rescind the secondary and tertiary aspects of the Arab trade boycott of Israel.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We welcome the progress towards the relaxation of the secondary and tertiary boycotts. We hope that further progress can be made soon in light of recent developments in the peace process. We continue to urge Arab states to lift the boycott.

European Union

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in what circumstances and when the style European Community will be replaced by the style European Union.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The European Communities, that is to say the European Community, the European Coal and Steel Community and Euratom, will remain in being after the Maastricht treaty enters into force. They are not replaced by the European Union. No decisions have yet been taken on where it may be appropriate to replace "European Communities" by "European Union" as a descriptive title.

Fee-paying Schools

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many officials in his Department have (a) children in fee-paying schools for whom Her Majesty's Government meet the bill because the officials are posted abroad and (b) children in fee-paying schools for whom Her Majesty's Government meet the bill after the officials have returned because their children remain in the school; and if he will detail the cost for the last 15 years for each of these two categories.

Mr. Goodlad: In the time available it has not been possible to retrieve all of the information requested. I shall write to the hon. Member in due course with the balance of the information.

In academic year 1992-93:

(a) 313 officials of the Diplomatic Service serving overseas had children in fee-paying schools in the United Kingdom, plus an unquantifiable number who had children educated locally at post. The cost was £3·9 million in the United Kingdom and £2 million overseas.

(b) 182 diplomatic service officials serving in the United Kingdom had children in fee-paying schools. The cost was £3·93 million.

The comparable figures for the three previous years, are as follows:

1991-92	(a)	340, £3·91 million, £1·78 million
	(b)	200, £3·75 million
1990-91	(a)	374, £3·88 million, £1·67 million
	(b)	223, £3·65 million
1989-90	(a)	390, £3·55 million, £1·57 million
	(b)	240, £3·54 million

This breakdown does not exist for earlier years, in which the total cost for (a) boarding school allowance and (b) local education was:

	(a) Boarding school allowance (£ million)	(b) Local education (£ million)
1988-89	7·08	1·53
1987-88	7·03	1·5
1986-87	6·81	1·3
1985-86	6·44	1·19
1984-85	6·24	1·22
1983-84	5·94	1

The Overseas Development Administration has five officials serving overseas who have children in fee-paying schools in the United Kingdom. The cost in 1992-93 was £45,228·77. One official serving in the United Kingdom has children in a fee-paying school and the cost was £15,620·00. For earlier years the costs were:

	United Kingdom (£)	Overseas (£)
1991-92	2,093	63,170·81
1990-91	nil	65,879·69
1989-90	38,694·67	86,247·82

We do not "meet the bill" for schools in the United Kingdom. Her Majesty's Government make a contribution towards the basic fees, up to a ceiling which is based on the average fee of headmasters' conference schools.

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the agreement reached between Mr. Ekeus as special representative for the United Nations Security Council and the Iraqi Government on 22 July in regard to implementation of United Nations Security Council resolutions in Iraq.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Security Council members, including the United Kingdom, have expressed support for Mr. Ekeus's actions. The Security Council, and UNSCOM, will continue to press for sustained Iraqi implementation of the relevant Security Council resolutions.

Population Control, China

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he expects the citizens of Hong Kong to be forced to comply with Chinese legislation implementing or specifying (a) the need to obtain permission to marry, (b) the one-child policy, (c) the legal obligation to have an intra-uterine device inserted in the woman after one child, (d) the obligation for one of the partners in a marriage to be sterilised after the birth of a second child and (e) the obligation to abort any subsequent pregnancy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: No. The Sino-British joint declaration, a legally binding agreement registered at the United Nations, provides that Hong Kong's present rights and freedoms, including the freedom to marry and the right to raise a family freely, will be maintained. In general Chinese laws will not be applied to Hong Kong.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if China is a signatory to any United Nations statement guaranteeing freedom to marry and the right to raise a family freely; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: Yes. China has signed the convention on the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women, which is a legally binding document. We have consistently urged the Chinese authorities to sign other relevant conventions and covenants, including the international convention on civil and political rights (ICCPR) and the international covenant on economic and social rights (ICESR), and to improve their human rights performance generally.

ENVIRONMENT

Bears

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many import permits have been allowed over the last three years for products derived from (a) Asiatic black bears, (b) any other bear listed under appendix 1 of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species and (c) any bear listed under appendix 2 of CITES.

Mr. Yeo: No import permits have been issued in the last three years for products derived from the Asiatic black bear —Selenarctos thibetanus—or any other species of bear listed in appendix I of CITES. Seventy-four import permits have been issued for products derived from species of bears listed in appendix II of CITES.

Living Space

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average domestic living space available for each individual in the United Kingdom; what are the comparable figures for other EC countries, for the latest year for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures 10 years earlier.

Sir George Young: Our most recent estimate, based on the 1991 census, the 1991 English, Scottish and Northern Ireland house condition surveys and the 1986 Welsh house condition survey, is that the average domestic living space available to each individual in the United Kingdom is 32 sq. m. Comparable figures for other EC countries and for 10 years earlier are not available.

Landlords

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many private sector landlords are approved landlords.

Sir George Young: None: my Department has no power to approve landlords.

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will call for a report from the National Rivers Authority as to how many staff are employed at its Northumbria office; what their functions are; what plans there are for reductions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: No. The questions raised by the hon. Member concern the internal management of the NRA, and are a matter for the board.

PSA (Civil Servants)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many civil servants, previously employed by the Property Services Agency, have now taken redundancy following the sale of PSA Noreast; and what was the cost of the redundancies.

Mr. Baldry: There have been eight redundancies to date as a result of the sale of PSA BM Noreast. The estimated cost of these redundancies is £212,000.

A further seven members of staff employed by PSA BM Noreast, who had earlier agreed to leave on voluntary redundancy terms, have left since 1 October 1993 at an estimated cost of £378,000.

Wind Farms

Mr. Renton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to the environmental impact of wind-farms on beautiful landscapes; and if he will withdraw the subsidy for the generation of electricity by wind turbines situated on high ground.

Mr. Yeo: The Government's policy is to encourage the development of renewable energy wherever it has the prospect of being economically attractive and environmentally acceptable. Planning policy guidance note 22 sets out the Government's planning policies on renewable energy in more detail and advises that local planning authorities must always weigh the desirability of exploiting a clean, renewable energy resource against the visual impact which wind turbines may have on the landscape. We believe it is better to leave it to the local planning authority to determine the suitability of different sites for wind turbines rather than to build site-related provision into the non-fossil fuel obligation arrangement.

Local Government Review

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice or guidance has been given to the Local Government Commission concerning the possible creation of new local authorities which straddle the commission's review areas.

Mr. Baldry: In drafting its final report to my right hon. Friend, in respect of a particular review, the Commission should make recommendations only in respect of the area specified by him in his direction to it.

The procedure guidance issued to the Commission in July 1992 provides that:

"where the Commission judges it necessary, at any stage of a review, to make recommendations concerning localities bordering on that area, it should make a formal request to the Secretary of State, with reasons, for a variation in the direction requiring the review to be conducted."

Military Bases (Closures)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he is giving to local planning authorities on how to deal with the closure of large military bases in their areas; what plans he has to introduce a planning policy guidance not on this subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Local planning authorities should take account of such bases in preparing their development plans, and consider producing site development briefs where appropriate. Circular 18/84 advises on the disposal of surplus Crown land.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made by his Department to date in developing a national plan for waste.

Mr. Yeo: The Government have indicated the need for some form of national waste policy summary when the Environment Agency has been established, to replace the waste disposal plans currently drawn up by waste regulation authorities. We are considering the timing and content of such a policy summary.

Ordnance Survey

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial profit or loss to the Ordnance Survey will arise from its three-year contract with Her Majesty's Land Registry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The information is commercial-in-confidence. However, the pricing of the bid complied with Her Majesty's Treasury and Cabinet Office guidance and was compiled on a fully commercial basis.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what permission has been given to interested foreign organisations and individuals to submit their response to the second consultation on the thermal oxide reprocessing plant authorisations in their native language, and on what dates; in what foreign languages submissions have been received; what arrangements have been made to translate these submissions; how long this has taken; at what cost; and if he will summarise the foreign submissions in regard to whether they expressed support or opposition to Thorp.

Mr. Yeo: Foreign organisations or individuals have not sought permission to submit responses in their native language. Responses to the consultation are being counted and assessed. Information about the responses will be made available once they have all been considered.

Homelessness

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing for each local authority in south-east Northumberland the number of persons accepted as homeless in each year since 1979.

Sir George Young: For the information for the years 1979 to 1991 inclusive, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) on 17 June 1992 at columns 569-70

The information for 1992 for local authorities in south-east Northumberland is as follows:

Households accepted as homeless in 1992[1]

	Number
Blyth Valley	330
Castle Morpeth	[2]24
Wansbeck	317

[1] Excluding intentionally homeless households.
[2] Castle Morpeth only reported figures for two quarters.

City Challenge

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many current city challenge authorities have developed exit strategies.

Mr. Yeo: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 22 July 1993 at column 347.

Council Tax

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals are currently outstanding regarding the council tax.

Mr. Baldry: As at 30 September 1993, 580,721 proposals for the alteration of the valuation list were outstanding in England.

Housing, Lancashire

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions have been made to assist authorities with clearance procedures for new housebuilding; and if he will list what help has been given to each local authority in Lancashire.

Sir George Young [holding answer 22 October 1993]: I shall write to the hon. Member following my meeting with him and other members of the Bishop of Burnley's delegation on Monday 25 October to discuss the Lancashire housing inquiry panel's recent report on housing in Lancashire.

Sour Gas

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the power stations in England and Wales which have been authorised to use sour gas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

Section 14(2) of the Energy Act 1976 requires that notice be given to me of any proposals to enter into contractual or other arrangements to obtain a supply of gas as fuel for a power station. I am empowered under section 14(3) to direct that any proposal of which I am notified should not be carried out, or should be carried out in accordance with specified conditions.

There is no requirement for the notice to distinguish between sour and other gas. However, the following proposals have been notified under section 14(2) which may involve sour gas. I have not given any directions under section 14(3) preventing or modifying them.

Peterhead (North of Scotland Hydro Electric Board)—1,550 Mw Kelt, Ryedale (Kelt (UK) Limited)—50 Mw
Connah's Quay, Clwyd (PowerGen)—1,350 Mw

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Yugoslavia

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest position regarding humanitarian aid to the former Yugoslavia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [pursuant to his reply, 18 October 1993, c. 103]: The total of Britain's financial commitments for humanitarian aid to the former Yugoslavia is £141 million, not £152 million as stated.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Justices' Clerks

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the judicial responsibilities currently performed by the holders of the office of justices' clerk.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Justices' clerks, or upon delegation, any court clerks, have certain quasi-judicial functions in relation to family cases. In criminal cases, some essentially administrative functions formerly exercised by a single justice have been delegated to justices' clerks or on their delegation to court clerks.

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) what assessment he has made of the effects of the White Paper "A New Framework for Local Justice" on the independence of justices' clerks when advising magistrates in relation to their judicial duties otherwise than in individual cases;

(2) what assessment he has made of the effects of the White Paper "A New Framework for Local Justice" on the independence of justices' clerks in the performance by them of their judicial responsibilities.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor and I have considered carefully the implications of the White Paper, studied the views put forward by various bodies, and taken note of the effects of the reforms in those areas where the changes have already been introduced. We are satisfied that the changes will not interfere with judicial independence and we shall emphasis this by including in legislation a provision which makes clear that justices' clerks and other court staff are not liable to direction in respect of the legal advice given to magistrates in court.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to review the legal position of Alzheimer's disease sufferers who are unable to grant power of attorney to relatives or who have no close relatives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Law Commission is reviewing the law and procedures relating to decision-making on behalf of mentally incapacitated adults.

Probate Registry

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the future of the Probate Registry, Cardiff-road, Llandaff, Cardiff, subsequent to the removal of the registry to the new county court complex.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There are no plans to change in any way the status or operation of Llandaff district probate registry following its relocation at the new county court complex currently being built.

Courts and Legal Services Act

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when he intends to bring into force section 13 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990.

Mr. John M. Taylor: It is intended to bring section 13 of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 into effect at the end of 1994.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Whiskies

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people and/or jobs are involved directly or indirectly in (a) the whisky and (b) the whiskey industry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nelson: I regret the information is not available. The standard industrial classification does not separately identify the whisky or whiskey industries from other industries involved in spirit distilling and compounding.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what percentage per capita consumption of (a) all alcoholic drinks and (b) whisky or whiskey has changed in the United Kingdom since 1979.

Sir John Cope: The following figures relate to expenditure by domestic consumers and exclude business expenditure. Consumption per capita of all alcoholic drinks declined in real terms by 6 per cent. between 1979 and 1992. Figures relating to whisky and whiskey are unavailable for years prior to 1984. Consumption per capita for whisky and whiskey combined fell in real terms by 21 per cent. between 1984 and 1992. Separate figures for whisky and whiskey are unavailable.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the sale of whisky and whiskey in the United Kingdom at the last date for which figures are available expressed as a percentage of the figure for 1979.

Sir John Cope: Figures for sales of whisky and whiskey for years prior to 1984 are unavailble. Between 1984 and 1992 sales of whisky and whiskey combined rose from £1,561 million to £2,053 million at current market prices. This represents an increase of 32 per cent. Expressed in terms of constant 1990 prices, expenditure on whisky and whiskey combined fell by 19 per cent. from £2,105 million in 1984 to £1,704 million in 1992. These figures relate to expenditure by domestic consumers and exclude business expenditure.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average retail cost of a 70 cl bottle of Scotch whisky in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) each of the other EC states and (c) the United States of America.

Mr. Nelson: In September 1993 the retail prices index sample gave an average price £10·94 for a 70 cl bottle of whisky in the United Kingdom. Scotch whisky is not specified in the RPI sample which is mainly made up of blended brands. The information for (b) and (c) can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the total earnings from export of (a) whisky and (b) whiskey, distilled in Northern Ireland for each year since 1979.

Mr. Nelson: I regret that trade figures are not available for production from different parts of the United Kingdom, and whiskey distilled in Northern Ireland is therefore not separately distinguished. The value of exports of whisky from the United Kingdom as a whole in each year is as follows.

	£ million
1979	710
1980	748
1981	787
1982	875
1983	864
1984	937
1985	1,001
1986	1,075
1987	1,142
1988	1,298
1989	1,480
1990	1,727
1991	1,853
1992	1,981

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the actual and percentage change in the duty imposed on a 70 cl bottle of whisky since 1979.

Sir John Cope: The following is the information:

Date of change	Alcohol duty on 70 cl spirits (40 per cent. above) £	Per cent. change from previous rate
27 March 1980	3·32	13·7
11 March 1981	3·81	14·6
10 March 1982	4·05	6·4

Date of change	Alcohol duty on 70 cl spirits (40 per cent. above) £	Per cent. change from previous rate
16 March 1983	4·25	5·0
14 March 1984	4·33	1·9
20 March 1985	4·42	1·9
20 March 1990	4·86	10·0
19 March 1991	5·31	9·3
10 March 1992	5·55	4·5

Total change in duty since 1979 is 90 per cent. as compared with 135 per cent. in the general RPI.

Wine

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the volume of wines imported from (a) countries within the EC and (b) countries outside the EC at the last year for which figures are available, expressed as a percentage of the figure for 1979.

Mr. Nelson: The available information on the physical volume of trade in wines, separately distinguishing countries which are now members of the European Community, is as follows:

	Volume in 1992 as percentage of volume in 1979
EC members	148
Other countries	225

Alcohol Duties

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to basing the excise duty on wine, beers and spirits on alcohol content and not category of beverage; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: No Government have ever accepted that relative alcoholic strength should be the sole determining factor for setting duty rates. Unitary taxation would greatly limit my right hon. and learned Friend's room for manoeuvre on fiscal policy, by removing the flexibility to take account of other factors.

Alcohol Contents

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the alcohol contents of (a) a single measure of whisky or whiskey and (b) a glass of wine as sold in public houses in England and Wales; and what is the excise duty imposed in each case.

Sir John Cope: Following is the information:

	Alcohol content (millilitres)	Excise duty (pence)
Spirits measure (1/6 gill at 40 per cent. abv)	9·5	18·8
Glass of wine (12·5 cl at 11·5 per cent. abv)	14·4	16·5

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of contributions made to the Exchequer by companies involved in wheel clamping.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that information is not available. The classification of companies for direct and indirect taxation does not permit wheel clamping companies to be identified separately.

VAT

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how his Department has calculated the effect on carbon dioxide emissions of the imposition of VAT on fuel; and what proportion of the reduction of carbon dioxide emissions will fall on (a) domestic fuel supplies and (b) industrial and other supplies.

Sir John Cope: I refer the hon. Member to the memorandum submitted by Her Majesty's Treasury to the House of Commons Treasury and Civil Service Committee's inquiry into the March 1993 Budget—TCSC 4th Report, 1992-93 session, March 1993 Budget, Cmnd 5788.

EC Contributions

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer under what provisions the United Kingdom is required to increase its gross national product percentage contribution to the EC; and by what date any necessary legislation is required to be passed.

Sir John Cope: The Edinburgh European Council agreed, as part of its conclusions on the Community's finances over the period to 1999, that the current ceiling of 1·2 per cent. of EC GNP on the Community's own resources should remain in force until 1994; and that the ceiling should then rise to 1·21 per cent. of EC GNP in 1995 and by gradual steps thereafter to 1·27 per cent. in 1999. In order to give effect to this agreement from 1 January 1995, it will be necessary to amend the Community's own resources decision—88/376/EEC, Euratom—and for the amended decision to be adopted by the member states. In the case of the United Kingdom, adoption would mean amending section 1(2) of the European Communities Act, 1972. The member states' actual contributions to the EC budget are determined in the annual budgetary procedure, within the ceiling in force.

Income Tax

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the revenue raised by (a) an increase of 1p on income tax across all bands of income tax and (b) the sums resulting from such an increase on each individual band of income tax.

Mr. Dorrell: At 1994-95 levels of income and assuming statutory indexation of allowances and the basic rate limit with the lower rate band set at £3,000 as announced in the March 1993 Budget the full-year yields are as follows:

	£ million[1]
1p increase in the lower rate	100
1p increase in the basic rate	1,800
1p increase in the higher rate	450
1p increase in each rate	2,350

[1] The figures include consequential effects on the yield from capital gains tax and the figure for the lower rate includes the effects of the change on advance corporation tax and on consequent liability to mainstream corporation tax.

Taxation

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the sums of money actually collected by the Inland Revenue for the fiscal years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92, in (a) capital gains tax, (b) inheritance tax, (c) corporation tax and (d) dividend withholding tax.

Mr. Dorrell: Information on tax receipts by head of tax can be found in table 1·2 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1993". There is no dividend withholding tax.

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the sums of money reclaimed and paid to foreign trusts, persons and companies, from dividend withholding tax for the fiscal years (a) 1988-89, (b) 1989-90, (c) 1990-91 and (d) 1991-92.

Mr. Dorrell: The United Kingdom does not have a dividend withholding tax.

Bankruptcies

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total sum of money owed to the Treasury as a result of personal and corporate bankruptcies and liquidations for each of the fiscal years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Dorrell: The total sum of money owed to the Treasury as a result of personal and corporation bankruptcies and liquidations covering the fiscal years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92 is as follows:

(£ thousand)

Year	Inland Revenue	Customs and Excise
1988	469,500	173,800
1989	375,540	151,800
1990	393,946	190,300
1991	631,698	514,200
1992	1,308,826	751,700

The figures for the Inland Revenue are for the accounts year which ends on 31 October each year and the figures for Customs and Excise are for the calendar year.

Taxation

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department has taken to examine the tax position of unincorporated bodies receiving funds from bank accounts in offshore tax havens; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: An unincorporated body which is resident in this country is liable to United Kingdom tax on its worldwide income, on which it makes returns. The Inland Revenue subjects a proportion of total returns to detailed inquiry, which may involve the examination of foreign source income.

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of the number of United Kingdom persons, individual and corporate, who have set up trusts and companies offshore since 1980; and if he will place all such estimates in the Library.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that information on which to base such an estimate is not available.

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases which have been investigated by the Inland Revenue and are currently being investigated by the Serious Fraud Office and by the Metropolitan police and regional fraud squads, involve the use of offshore tax havens in the perpetration of the suspected fraud.

Mr. Dorrell: Figures are not available.

Jet Engine Fuel

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to impose taxation upon jet engine fuel.

Sir John Cope: Decisions on changes in taxation are a matter for the Budget statement.

Tax Avoidance

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list, by date, each study into tax avoidance via offshore ownership made by the Inland Revenue or the Treasury, or on behalf of his Department, since 1984; and if he will place all such studies and reports in the Library;

(2) what reports have been compiled by the Treasury and the Board of the Inland Revenue into tax avoidance and evasion via offshore trusts and companies since 1985; and if he will place those reports in the Library.

Mr. Dorrell: Whilst developments in this area are kept under constant review, no reports or studies have been produced for publication.

Foreign Landowners

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his Department's estimate of the acreage of land in England and Wales owned by foreign companies and trusts.

Mr. Dorrell: No figures are held on which such an estimate could be based.

Composting Plants

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to offer tax incentives to encourage investment in commercial composting and anaerobic digestion plants.

Mr. Dorrell: The hon. Member would not expect me to make a statement on taxation matters at this time of year.

Prime Ministers

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to change the severance payments for Prime Ministers under the Ministerial and other Pensions and Salaries Act 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Section 4 of the Ministerial and other Pensions and Salaries Act 1991 excludes Prime Ministers from receiving a severance payment under the Act.

There are no proposals to change this arrangement.

Foreign Trusts

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the number of persons, trusts or corporations resident in the United Kingdom, who are the beneficiaries of trusts set up abroad; and if he will place in the Library all reports by his Department into the above matter since 1983.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that information on which to base the estimate requested in the first part of the question could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. No reports have been published on matters concerning the second part of the question.

Offshore Sterling Deposits

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average level of sterling deposits, governmental and cash, held in (a) Switzerland, (b) Luxembourg, (c) Liechtenstein, (d) Monaco, (e) Jersey, (f) Guernsey, (g) the Isle of Man, (h) Bermuda, (i) Bahamas, (j) the British Virgin Islands and (k) the Cayman Islands; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: The most recent published figures for sterling deposits in Jersey, Guernsey, the Isle of Man, the British Virgin Islands and the Cayman Islands are as follows:

	£ billion
Jersey	21·9
Guernsey	9·2
Isle of Man	8·0
British Virgin Islands	nil
Cayman Islands	3·1

Figures for Switzerland, Luxembourg, Liechtenstein, Monaco, Bermuda and the Bahamas are not available in the form requested.

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate for the volume of cash transferred to tax havens abroad from the United Kingdom which appears to be associated with fraud, for each year since 1988.

Mr. Dorrell: Reliable estimates cannot be made.

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has for capital remittances made for profits and gains in the United Kingdom, to companies and trusts in Jersey, Guernsey, Isle of Man, Bermuda, Bahamas, British Virgin Islands, Cayman Islands, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Monaco and Switzerland, for each of the fiscal years since 1985.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that information on which to base such an estimate is not available.

Jet Engine Fuel

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have to impose taxation upon jet engine fuel.

Sir John Cope: Decisions on changes in taxation are a matter for the Budget statement.

National Savings

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the future of national savings.

Mr. Nelson: I meet the Director of Savings regularly. National Savings continues to play an important role in the Government's funding programme, and in providing opportunities for the public to invest in savings products.

Privatised Utilities

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, for each privatised utility, he will publish information, for the latest year available, in respect of (a) total Government holding, expressed as a percentage of the utilities' share, and (b) the current value of the Government holding.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 October 1993]: The table shows the ordinary shares held by the Government in the privatised utility companies as a percentage of issued share capital and by market valuation.

Government shareholdings in privatised utility companies

Company	Shareholding as a proportion Per cent.	Value of share-holding (£ million)
British Gas	0·0	0·2

Low Incomes

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 October, Official Report, column 14, how many of the 23·2 million persons who have incomes of less than £100 per week are (a) students, (b) persons between 18 and 65 years of age, (c) pensioners and (d) males between 18 years and 65 years; and what is his estimate of the loss in revenue if none of these persons paid income tax.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 22 October 1993]: Of the estimated 23·2 million people who have incomes below £100 per week in 1993-94 about 1·2 million are aged 16 or 17, 15·7 million are aged between 18 and 65, of whom 5·2 million are males, and 6·3 million are aged 65 or over.

The loss in revenue if none of these people paid income tax would be about £400 million.

PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Prime Minister who is responsible for deciding the maximum permissible cost of answering a written parliamentary question; if that cost is different for different Departments; and how often that amount is reviewed.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

If an answer to any written question is likely to cost more than £450—the current cost threshold, calculated by the Treasury—the answering Minister will decide whether to refuse to answer on the ground of disproportionate cost, or whether to answer it whole or in part regardless of cost. This threshold, which applies to all Departments, is reviewed annually.

Cabinet Committees

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Prime Minister when he next proposes to issue the list of ministerial committees of the Cabinet.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

An updated list of the ministerial committees of the Cabinet, with their terms of reference and membership, will be published shortly.

Civil Rights (Disabled Persons) Bill

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Prime Minister what meetings the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People has had with the sponsors of the Civil Rights (Disabled Persons) Bill and representatives of the all-party disablement group in the House about the Government's response to the Bill and their alternative proposals since the Prime Minister's meeting with the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) and supporters of his Bill on 23 February; what was the date and duration of each meeting; and if he will publish the papers tabled for discussion at the meetings.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

There have been two meetings, on 25 March and 17 May, each lasting about an hour. No papers were tabled at either meeting.

Child Migrant Scheme

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Prime Minister if he will consider moving total responsibility for funding the Child Migrant Trust from the Department of Health in such a way as to ensure that the various Departments with present or previous responsibility for the child migrant scheme contribute towards to the cost of the trust's work.

Mr. Newton: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for child welfare transferred in 1971 from the Home Office to the Department of Health and the territorial Departments. We can see no advantage in changing the Government's responsibilities for funding this kind of activity in the way suggested.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Newton [holding answer 20 October 1993]: I have been asked to reply.

The expenditure by the Office of my right hon. Friend, the Prime Minister, on official hospitality in the financial year 1992-93 was £30,023. This is a reduction of £10,953 or 27 per cent. compared with 1991-92.

TRANSPORT

Speed Control

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 175, when he now expects the village speed control working group to publish its final report and recommendations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: Monitoring results from the individual trial sites are all expected to be received before the end of the year, and analysis is under way. A final report will now be made in spring 1994. In advance of the report, valuable lessons are already being learnt as the trials progress. The messages in the report will be disseminated widely to local highway authorities and other groups who have an interest in this area. To follow on from the village speed working group—VISP—I am planning a further series of trials of traffic calming measures for villages on trunk roads next year, starting with Thorney in Cambridgeshire.

Leasing Funds

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria were used in the decision to allocate £150 million of leasing funds to British Rail; and what were the reasons that the money was allocated to Network SouthEast.

Mr. Freeman: The purpose of the £150 million leasing concession was to encourage the development of a leasing market for passenger trains. The decision to lease trains for Network SouthEast was made by British Rail on the ground that the business case for doing so was superior to that for trains for the west coast main line.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has for any further financing or leasing deals for British Rail similar to that recently awarded to Network Southeast;

(2) if he will permit British Rail to seek private financing for the leasing of rolling stock for the west coast main line.

Mr. Freeman: I will support further leasing proposals for the west coast main line, or any other route, provided they meet the Treasury's criteria for classification as an operating lease and they are good value for money.

West Coast Main Line

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps he will be taking, in conjunction with British Rail, to improve services on the west coast main line; and what plans he has for the modernisation of track and signalling on that route;

(2) if he will guarantee the future of the west coast main line as a high-speed route between London, Warrington and Glasgow.

Mr. Freeman: The Government fully appreciate the importance of modernising the west coast main line. British Rail has set aside funds for design work to renew the infrastructure. From April next year, following our reform of the railways, responsibility for infrastructure will pass to Railtrack. In the meantime, the Government have taken the initiative in appointing Hambros bank to devise proposals for a joint venture to renew the infrastructure on the west coast main line. This is a new departure in the private finance initiative for railways. Instead of waiting for the private sector to come forward with proposals which may or may not be acceptable to the Government, Hambros has been tasked to find a solution which meets the Government's guidelines and will be attractive to the private sector. Hambros will be reporting later in the autumn.

Toll Roads

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will issue guidelines for the development of toll road proposals.

Mr. Key: Privately financed toll roads can be provided only in accordance with the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991, or by individual legislation. Guidelines on the Act were contained in a circular that was issued to local authorities by the Department of Transport and the Welsh Office in March 1992. Evaluation of a prospective concessionaire's proposals will be a matter for the highway authority, but under the 1991 Act, a statement must be published with a draft toll order, setting out the key points of a concession agreement.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that toll road proposals are subject to adequate consultations on and evaluation at all key stages.

Mr. Key: Under the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 the procedures for authorisation of a toll road are similar to those of the Highways Act 1980 that apply to publicly financed roads; there will therefore be a similar approach to public consultation and public inquiry. Any scheme which is taken forward by means of individual legislation would be subject to detailed scrutiny by Parliament.

Birmingham North Relief Road

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to publish the results of the public consultation undertaken by Midland Expressway Ltd. in respect of the Birmingham north relief road.

Mr. Key: The results of the official public consultation exercise held in autumn 1991 are contained in the preferred route statement which was published on 3 March 1992, at the same time as the announcement of the signing of the concession agreement between the Secretary of State for Transport and Midland Expressway Ltd. The results of subsequent consultations with local authorities and other interested groups were included in the environmental statement which was published in June 1993.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultation he proposes with Staffordshire local authorities in respect of those parts of the concession relating to the Birmingham north relief road agreement which deal with non-tolling matters.

Mr. Key: As with all major highway schemes there has been and will continue to be regular consultation with all affected local authorities throughout the development of the scheme.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to ensure that the Birmingham north relief road would be available free of charge for traffic diverted to it.

Mr. Key: I have no such proposals. I see no possibility of road users being compelled to use the Birmingham northern relief road rather than the various alternative routes with which it will compete.

Disposable Nappies

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to encourage parents to dispose hygienically of disposable nappies at lay-bys or motorway stops.

Mr. Key: My Department co-operates with the Tidy Britain Group in publicity to encourage the safe disposal of litter of all kinds.

South Coast Road Expenditure

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has spent over the last 10 years on maintenance and improvement of the A26 between Lewes and Newhaven, the A27 between Lewes and Polegate and the A259 between Newhaven and Seaford.

Mr. Key: Definitive figures for some elements of expenditure in the earlier part of the period in question cannot now be provided without substantial research of archived files. However, our records indicate that about £0·4 million was spent on maintenance and £0·3 million on improvement of this length of the A26. For the A27 trunk road between Lewes and Polegate, the figures are about £5·5 million for maintenance and £2·3 million for improvement. The A259 between Newhaven and Seaford is not a trunk road, and responsibility for it rests with East Sussex county council.

Motorway Surfaces

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what have been the results of studies into the effectiveness of porous asphalt for motorway surfaces.

Mr. Key: Compared with other road surfacings currently in use, porous asphalt offers lower traffic noise and less spray from vehicles in wet conditions. The material has not so far proved as durable as conventional surfacings, there is an increased maintenance requirement and at present its use on roads carrying large numbers of heavy lorries is not advised.

Vehicle Safety

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in what circumstances it is the policy of traffic examiners not to issue prohibition notices on vehicles with only one defect; and what is the rationale for this policy.

Mr. Key: The vehicle inspectorate (VI) is responsible for enforcing roadworthiness standards. Prohibitions are issued by VI examiners in accordance with a published categorisation of defects guide. There is no VI policy to waive a prohibition where only one defect has been found during an examination.

National Travel Survey

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to include journeys of one mile or under within the national travel survey.

Mr. Key: Information on journeys of under one mile have been collected on national travel surveys since they began in 1965. Only a few tables in the 1989-91 report exclude such journeys.

Goods Vehicles

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the number of heavy goods vehicles currently licensed in the 1·5 to 6 tonne range.

Mr. Key: For the purpose of vehicle excise duty (VED), a heavy goods vehicle is regarded as being a vehicle weighing more than 3·5 tonnes, VED rates for heavy goods vehicles are set in bands relating to the vehicle weight and axle configuration with the lowest band covering vehicles between 3·5 and 7·5 tonnes. At the time of the last vehicle census, in December 1992, there were 146,507 vehicles licensed in this band.

A1, Northumberland

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the progress of his plans to upgrade the A1 road in Northumberland to dual carriageway standard, giving the timetable for dualling each section, and the target date for completion of dualling the English section;

(2) if he will make a statement on further schemes for dualling or improving overtaking opportunities on the A1 road north of Morpeth.

Mr. Key: Two sections of dual carriageway have been completed and opened to traffic at Marshall Meadows and Browneside this year. Two schemes to complete the dualling of the Alnwick bypass are in preparation and a scheme to complete the continuous dualling between Newcastle and north of Alnwick is in the road programme.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport announced a review of the road programme in August. Further progress on the upgrading of the A1 will depend on potential schemes meeting environmental, economic and safety objectives, the overall availability of resources, and the relative claims of potential schemes elsewhere in the county.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much funding has been allocated to date in upgrading the A1 in Northumberland; and if he will make a statement on the progress.

Mr. Key: Since 1970, in excess of £60 million at current prices has been spent on a comprehensive programme of upgrading the A1 in Northumberland. Currently there are three schemes in the programme valued at £25 million to complete the continuous dualling between Newcastle and north of Alnwick.

In addition two sections of dual carriageway have been completed and opened to traffic at Marshall Meadows and Browneside this year.

Vehicle Inspectorate

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will give details and amounts of money paid by the DVLA to the vehicle inspectorate.

Mr. Key: In financial year 1992-93 DVLA paid £4,976 to the vehicle inspectorate, for inspections of vehicles involved in applications to transfer cherished vehicle registration marks.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Norris: The information requested is not readily available in respect of personnel overseas before 1991-92 due to changes in the Department's accounting arrangements. The latest available figures are as follows:

Costs arising from premises overseas

Year	£
1989-90	75,000
1990-91	73,000
1991-92	79,000
1992-93	84,000
1993-94 outturn to September 1993	47,000

Costs arising from personnel overseas

Year	£
1991-92	421,700
1992-93	463,700
1993-94 outturn to September 1993	256,000

In addition, some Department of Transport staff are on loan to the FCO to serve overseas, but the costs are borne by the FCO: others are seconded to overseas Governments, but the costs are covered by those Governments.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what forecast he has made of how many passenger operating companies will operate, under his proposals for the privatisation of British Rail, through Brixton, Loughborough Junction, Herne Hill, West Norwood, Tulse Hill and Gipsy Hill.

Mr. Freeman: Each of these stations will be served by one franchisee, except for Herne Hill and Tulse Hill which will be served by two.

Lewes Link Lines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has spent on maintenance and improvement over the last 10 years on the Lewes to London, Lewes to Seaford and Lewes to Eastbourne railway lines.

Mr. Freeman: It is for British Rail to decide priorities for expenditure on maintenance and improvements to the network. In addition to routine maintenance, in April 1991 re-signalling and track improvements were carried out around Eastbourne station at a cost of £2 million, and the station refurbished at a cost of £840,000. Other major projects on the Sussex coast line in the last 10 years have included the renovation of the preserved station buildings at Lewes at a cost of £245,000, which is nearing completion; the recently completed installation of a new electrical control room at Brighton at a cost of £342,000; and the relaying of track lost in a landslide at Glynde in April 1991 at a cost of £10,000.

Bicycles (Carriage on Trains)

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has about the numbers of cycles carried by regional railways following the introduction of the £3 cycle fee.

Mr. Freeman: None. My Department does not hold detailed information of this nature.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Mining Industry

Mr. Allen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how soon after the closure of the consultation period on the future of the mineworkers' pension scheme he will make a public statement as to that future; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Government will give very careful consideration to all responses received on the consultation paper on British Coal pensions after privatisation. It is too early to say how soon conclusions will be reached but Parliament will of course be informed as soon as possible of the Government's proposals.

Nuclear Power Industry

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the timetable and terms of reference for the Government's review of policy for the future of the nuclear power industry; which Department will take the lead in this review; and what will be the role of the Scottish Office.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on Wednesday 20 October to the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill) at column 245.

Opencast Coal

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the total amount of coal available for opencasting in Northumberland and Durham.

Mr. Eggar: British Coal has informed me that, as at March 1993, total reserves of coal estimated to remain unworked in approved opencast sites in Northumberland, Durham and Tyne and Wear were 16,696 million tonnes.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to require the nuclear installations inspectorate to publish full safety reports upon the Bradwell, Hinkley A, Dungeness A and Sizewell A power stations.

Mr. Eggar: The Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate's findings on the long-term safety reviews for Bradwell, Hinkley Point A, Berkeley, Hunterston A, Calder Hall, and Chapelcross have already been published. Reports of the principal findings of the LTSRs for the remaining Magnox power stations will be published in due course. The NII also intends to publish a report on the generic issues arising out of the LTSRs early in 1994.

Coal Investment

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what amount of the £20 billion authorised investment by the Government in the coal industry since 1979 was invested in collieries which have since been closed or which are under threat of closure.

Mr. Eggar: The figure of £20 billion funding referred to represents deficiency and social grants to British Coal and payments under the redundant mineworkers payments scheme. The Government have authorised British Coal to spend nearly £8 billion on capital investment over the same period.

Investment at individual collieries is normally a matter for British Coal although grant approval is needed where capital expenditure exceeds £50 million on a single project. In the period concerned the only projects which came into this category were Selby—capital expenditure to date is about £1,500 million—and Asfordby—capital expenditure to date is about £250 million.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what amount has been invested since 1979 in the collieries at (a) Taf Merthyr, (b) Deep Navigation, (c) Merthyr Vale, (d) Trelewis Drift and (e) Betws.

Mr. Eggar: Investment in individual collieries is a matter for British Coal.

Civil Servants

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many civil servants are working at the offices of his Department in Victoria street, London.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has 2,215 civil servants working at our offices in Victoria street.

Conversion Loans

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the continued appropriateness of his Department's covering of the exchange risks of companies that take European Coal and Steel Community conversion loans in foreign currencies rather than sterling.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have, in conjunction with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales, thoroughly reviewed the exchange risk guarantee scheme, which is run jointly by my Department, the Scottish Office and the Welsh Office. This review has been based on the findings of independent evaluators who assessed the extent to which the scheme achieved its objectives at an acceptable cost. The evaluators found in the scheme no substantial benefits to set against its cost. The DTI, the Scottish Office and the Welsh Office will therefore cease to offer exchange risk cover on any new global loans made by the Commission to United Kingdom financial intermediaries from today.

Termination of the exchange risk guarantee scheme will not affect the availability of the ECSC conversion loans themselves, nor of the associated interest rate rebates related to job creation. The loans will continue to be available to United Kingdom firms, either in foreign currency at their own exchange risk or in sterling on similar terms. Existing global loans will continue to be eligible for cover to the extent that they are drawn down in foreign currencies.

I have today placed in the Library of the House copies of the independent evaluators' reports on the scheme.

South Africa

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the future of the EC code of conduct for companies with interests in South Africa.

Mr. Needham: The EC Foreign Affairs Council announced on 4 October that the requirement for companies to report under the code has been discontinued. EC heads of mission will, however, be required to report annually on developments in the area of labour conditions with particular attention to equality of opportunity.

British Coal (Redundancies)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to extend the present enhanced redundancy arrangements for British Coal employees beyond 31 December 1993.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 20 October 1993:] I announced on 20 October that the Government had informed British Coal that they were prepared to extend its funding for the current redundancy terms for miners until 30 April 1994.

Nuclear Accidents

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to establish an Anglo-Irish bilateral agreement with the Irish Republic for the transmission of information subsequent to a nuclear accident as proposed by European Commission opinion of 30 April 1992 on the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield, as published in the Official Journal of the European Communities No. L138, 36-37, 21 May 1992.

Mr. Yeo: I have been asked to reply.

In addition to existing nuclear incident notification arrangements with the Irish authorities, a more formal bilateral agreement is being explored at regular meetings of United Kingdom and Irish officials.

EDUCATION

Outdoor Education Centres

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received from the Central Council of Physical Recreation on the impact of education reforms on local education authority outdoor education centres.

Mr. Forth: None.

Schools

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many pupils are now being educated in grant-maintained schools; what is the number of grant-maintained schools in England and Wales; what is the percentage of secondary schools in England and Wales that are grant-maintained; and how many applications for grant-maintained status are outstanding and being considered by his Department.

Mr. Robin Squire: Grant-maintained schools in Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. The figures in this answer relate to England only.

About 480,000 pupils are now being educated in 693 self-governing (GM) schools. Fourteen per cent. of secondary schools are now self-governing. A further 61 schools have been approved for self-governing status but are not yet operating.

One hundred and thirty-six applications for self-governing status are under consideration in the Department, and proposals are awaited from a further 31 schools who have voted yes to self-governing status.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is (a) the total number of schools, (b) the number of county schools, (c) the number of voluntary-aided schools, (d) the number of grant-maintained schools which were formerly county schools and (e) the number of grant-maintained schools which were formerly voluntary-aided schools within the (i) primary and (ii) secondary sectors in each local education authority area.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 21 October 1993]: The latest information on the status of maintained primary and secondary schools in each local education authority in England is shown in the table.

National Curriculum

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if he will give a breakdown of the membership of each of the committees which have been established to advise his Department about the national curriculum and associated matters; and if he will indicate in each case those representatives which have been appointed to represent the primary school sector;

(2) if he will make a statement giving details of his policy in connection with the level of representation of (a) the primary school sector and (b) the secondary school sector upon those committees which provide advice to his Department about the national curriculum and associated matters.

Mr. Robin Squire: The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority, under the chairmanship of Sir Ron Dearing, has the main responsibility for advising my right hon. Friend on the national curriculum and associated matters.

My right hon. Friend announced the authority's membership on 14 September. All 14 members have been appointed on the basis of their individual expertise and experience rather than as representatives. They include a teacher and a headteacher from the primary school sector, a college principal with wide experience of primary education, the headmaster of a seven to 18 school, three secondary heads and the headteacher of a special school.

Older Adult Learners

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make it his policy to place specific obligations upon the further education funding councils, further education colleges and local authorities concerning provision for older adult learners.

Mr. Boswell: Under the Further and Higher Education Act 1992, the further education funding councils and local education authorities are between them responsible for securing the provision of all kinds of further education for adults. The educational opportunities secured by the new structure of duties are available to all adult learners, including older adults, and earlier this year the Department for Education was pleased to sponsor a conference on older adults as part of Adult Learners' Week.

Primary Schools

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to ensure that the primary school sector is fully and adequately represented on all committees established to advise his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: The main criterion for choosing the members of advisory bodies is the experience and expertise which they can contribute. When it is appropriate to do so my right hon. Friend will ensure that an advisory body includes members who have experience of primary education.

Opting Out

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if his Department will fund the organisation, Parents Opposed to Opting-Out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received an approach from Parents Opposed to Opting-Out, and will be responding shortly.

Grant-maintained Schools Centre

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many staff are employed at the grant-maintained schools centre; and what plans he has to extend the size or role of the centre.

Mr. Robin Squire: There are currently 29 staff employed by the grant-maintained schools centre. The centre is a company limited by guarantee, which receives grant from the Department for certain specified purposes. The overall size of the centre is a matter for its directors. My right hon. Friend announced on 16 March at column 143 that additional grant would be made available to the centre to support the dissemination of factual information about grant-maintained status. For this purpose, regional advice centres are planned for Bolton, Kirklees, Birmingham and London, which will be grant-aided by the Department.

EDUCATION

Social Science and Arts

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many students embarked on a higher education social science or arts course in 1992; and how many have done so in the current year.

Mr. Boswell: In the academic year 1992-93 there were 56,000 students commencing post-graduate arts courses and 13,000 social science courses in England. A further 244,000 embarked on undergraduate courses, of these 197,000 were studying an arts subject and 47,000 social science. Comparable figures for 1993-94 are not yet available.

Special Needs

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the sum of money that each local authority spent on special educational needs in 1991-92 in the further education sector.

Mr. Boswell: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Spending Statistics

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much was spent per (a) primary and (b) secondary school pupil in each of the local authorities in England and, on average, in England as a whole in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures in 1978-79 at constant prices.

Mr. Forth: Figures for expenditure on nursery and primary pupils are not collected separately. Spending per pupil by each English LEA and on average in nursery and primary schools combined and in secondary schools in 1978-79 and 1991-92 at 1992-93 prices is as shown in the table.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the average per-capita grant to grant-maintained schools in each year since 1989.

Mr. Robin Squire: The average per-capita recurrent grant to grant-maintained schools in each year since 1989 is as follows:

Financial year	Primary £	Secondary £
1989-90	Nil	1,970
1990-91	Nil	2,250
1991-92	1,800	2,400
1992-93	1,900	2,450

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what has been the level of funding from his Department to the grant-maintained schools centre for each financial year from 1988-89 to 1993-94; and for what purpose this funding is intended to be used.

Mr. Robin Squire: Since the establishment of the grant-maintained schools centre in 1988 the following grant has been provided by the Department:

	Grant (£000's)
1988-89	25
1989-90	250
1990-91	425
1991-92	600
1992-93	577
1993-94	[1]198

[1] Grant paid to date in 1993-94.

Grant is provided: to enable the GMSC to offer factual information and advice to schools about GM status (since March 1993); to support information and advice services for existing GM schools; and to underpin the work of the standing advisory committee for GM schools.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the aggregate budget for grant-maintained schools in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Robin Squire: The total amount of grants paid for grant maintained schools in 1991-92 and 1992-93 is as follows:

1991-92	1992-93
£181,900,000	£482,500,000

The bulk of this expenditure is annual maintenance grant which is recouped from the former maintaining authority.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what plans he has to compensate grant-maintained schools for the extension of value added tax on fuel;

(2) what is his Department's estimate of the proportion of the total budget for grant-maintained schools which will be spent on value-added tax after April 1994.

Mr. Robin Squire: It is the Government's policy that special purpose grant should compensate self-governing (grant maintained) schools for the VAT costs they incur. These are currently estimated at 2·5 per cent. of total annual maintenance grant. We will review the estimates in the light of any additional VAT costs placed on self-governing schools. If necessary we will adjust the rate of grant to ensure that self-governing schools are not disadvantaged in comparison with local education authority schools.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total amount spent on fuel by grant-maintained schools in 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proposals he has to fund regional offices of the grant-maintained schools centre; where these offices will be based; what criteria are to be used in deciding the location of regional offices; and how much is it proposed to spend on establishing them.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend is making grant available to the grant-maintained schools centre to establish and operate regional advice centres to disseminate factual information about grant-maintained status, in accordance with his reply of 16 March to the hon. Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Coombs) at column 143. The first advice centres are planned for Bolton, Kirklees, Birmingham and London. These locations were identified by the grant-maintained schools centre as the most suitable for the purposes of ensuring access to an advice centre for a majority of schools. The cost of establishing and operating the advice centres in 1993-94 is exptected to be approximately £140,000.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total amount of value added tax paid to the Treasury by grant-maintained schools in the financial years 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not collected centrally.

Funding Cuts

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment his Department has made of the effect which the Government's decision to cut section 11 funding will have on the education of children for whom English is a second language.

Mr. Robin Squire: The assessment of local pupil needs is primarily a matter for schools and local education authorities although the Department continues to monitor, using the services of OFSTED, the education of children for whom English is a second language. Section 11 funding in 1993-94 should be sufficient to support existing projects in the 1993-94 financial year at the current grant rate of 75 per cent. of salary costs. For the subsequent two years, it will be a matter for local authorities and other grant recipients to decide to what extent the shortfall can be offset from within their budgets and where any reductions need to be made.

National Curriculum Testing

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what information his Department has gathered on what loss of pay or other consequences have been enforced by local education authorities against those head teachers, teachers, officials and school governors who supported the boycott last term of national curriculum testing.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has not gathered any such information.

Civil Servants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many civil servants are working at his Department's offices at Sanctuary buildings, Great Smith street, London.

Mr. Boswell: At present, there are 1,123 civil servants located at Sanctuary buildings.

Outdoor Activity Centres

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he intends to make a statement about safety in outdoor activity centres following the Lyme bay canoeing accident.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend expects to make an announcement shortly.

Pupil Numbers

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is (a) the total number of pupils, (b) the number in grant-maintained schools and (c) the percentage in grant-maintained schools within (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools in each local education authority area.

Mr Robin Squire [holding answer 21 October 1993]: The number of pupils in maintained primary and secondary schools and the number and percentage of pupils in schools currently operating as self-governing (GM) in each local education authority in England is shown in the table. However, pupil numbers shown relate to January 1992, the latest date for which final information is available. Pupils in sixth form colleges have been excluded from the secondary totals.

WALES

Water Disconnections

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will consider collecting and holding centrally information on the number of industrial water disconnections made by water companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No. The collection of statistics on water disconnections is a matter for the Director General of Water Services.

Hill Farming

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hill farmers in Wales have not yet received their hill livestock compensatory allowances in respect of 1993.

Mr. Redwood: Eight hundred and forty-six of the 14,662 claims remain to be paid. Most are held up while queries are resolved, or field inspections are carried out.

Expenditure

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total central Government expenditure for the Welsh Office for the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Redwood: Net central Government supply expenditure by the Welsh Office in 1992-93 was £5,973 million.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of applications in each county in Wales under the (a) main arable area payments scheme and (b) the simplified scheme in 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Three hundred applications were made under the main arable area scheme and 2,177 applications under the simplified scheme in Wales. The following table indicates the counties in which the applicants had their main agricultural holdings, although it is possible that the land for which they claimed aid is spread between more than one county.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Offences (Analysis)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he plans to publish his Department's research document "Analysing Offending"; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when the document "Analysing Offending" was completed; and for what reason publication has been delayed.

Mr. Maclean: "Analysing Offending" was published in July of this year by HMSO and has been publicly available from HMSO bookshops and accredited agents since then.

Mr. George Long

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he received a submission from solicitors acting on behalf of George Long—B25147; and when he expects to reach a decision.

Mr. Maclean: Representations about Mr. Long's convictions for murder in 1979 were received from his solicitors on 24 June 1993. Further inquiries have been made, and my right hon. and learned Friend expects that he will soon be in a position to decide whether there is any action he should take in Mr. Long's case.

Probation Committees

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about how probation committees are constituted; and who are the present members of those covering Kent and Suffolk.

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

The regulations governing the constitution of probation committees are set out in schedule 3 to the Powers of Criminal Courts Act 1973, as amended.

At present the Home Office does not maintain lists of probation committee members; and my hon. Friend may therefore wish to write to the secretaries of the Kent and Suffolk committees. With effect from this financial year, probation committees will be required to include in their annual reports the names of committee members and the official address at which they may be contacted.

Rape

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to abolish the crime of rape.

Mr. Maclean: No.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to provide anonymity for men charged with rape unless and until they are convicted.

Mr. Maclean: We are currently reviewing the law relating to anonymity in cases involving sexual offences and will announce our conclusions in due course.

Parole Board

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make public his full-time appointments to the Parole Board; and if he will make a statement on why full-time appointments are necessary.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: After full consideration, the Parole Board was informed on 3 August this year that six full-time members were to be appointed to the board. A press statement about the appointments was issued on 27 August, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Full-time members will bring valuable managerial and training experience to the work of the board and they will have the time to assist the chairman in long-term planning and the development of policy and procedures.

Departmental Offices

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil servants are working in the Home Department offices at Queen Anne's gate, London.

Mr. Howard: On 21 October there were 1,455 civil servants working in the Home Office's Queen Anne's gate building.

Blakenhurst Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long the disturbance at Blakenhurst prison on 17 October lasted; what was the cause; how many prisoners were involved; what damage to prison installations resulted from the protest; and what injuries to inmates or officers resulted from the protest.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Doug Hoyle from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the disturbance at Blakenhurst prison.

Two prisoners on Houseblock 3 damaged the structure and fittings of their cell during the evening of 17 September 1993. There were no injuries to staff or prisoners. The incident lasted approximately thirty minutes. Houseblock 3 had restricted association that evening which may have been the cause of this incident.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total number of prison officers at Blakenhurst; and how many resignations of prison officers there have been since (a) the prison opened and (b) 17 October.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Doug Hoyle from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prison officers at Blakenhurst; and how many resignations of prison officers there have been since (a) the prison opened and (b) 17th November.

There are now 271 certificated prisoner custody officers at Blakenhurst. Eleven officers have resigned since the prison opened on 26 May. I will write to you again once the figures for 17 November are available.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what reports have been made of the use of the drug LSD at Blakenhurst prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Doug Hoyle from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the use of the drug LSD at Blakenhurst prison.

One small square of paper was found during a cell search on 17 September, which was believed to be LSD. It has been sent for police forensic examination, but the results of that examination are not yet available.

On 3 September inmates reported that the drink of a staff member had been adulterated with LSD. The staff member concerned felt no ill-effects, but, as a precaution she was medically examined. It is doubted whether the report was true. I understand that a rumour about the alleged adulteration is circulating outside the establishment.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the role of the American employees of the prison operators at Blakenhurst.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Doug Hoyle from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the role of the American employees of the prison operators at Blakenhurst.

One American board member of United Kingdom Detention Services (UKDS) is based at Blakenhurst. He is the Operations Director for UKDS.

One consultant on secondment from the Corrections Corporation of America (CCA) is working at Blakenhurst.

In the past a small number of trainers from CCA have been used by UKDS at Blakenhurst.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison officers at Blakenhurst are fully trained in control and restraint procedures.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Doug Hoyle from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many prison officers at Blakenhurst are fully trained in control and restraint procedures.

All prisoner custody officers at Blakenhurst are trained in control and restraint techniques, 64 are trained to C & R level III.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what work is carried out by the prisoners in Blakenhurst prison; what is the nature of the contracts under which they work; how much is paid to the prisoners; and what happens to the profits made.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Doug Hoyle from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to respond to your recent Question about work at HMP Blakenhurst.

Prisoners are currently engaged in kitchen, wing servery, domestic cleaning, works, maintenance, garden, orderlies, light assembly and laundry work. Current pay scales average £6·50 per week, but rates vary according to the work undertaken. Revenue accruing from work is used for prisoner pay or to enhance facilities for prisoners.

Liquor Licensing

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many responses he has had to his consultation on the possible reform of the liquor licensing system in England and Wales; and if he will place in the Library the names of organisations submitting views.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: By 22 October, we had received 621 written responses to the consultation paper. That total excludes responses concerned only with the proposed abolition of the Welsh Sunday opening polls sent to the Welsh Office. A list of the organisations which have provided responses to the Home Office will be placed in the Library shortly.

Criminal Law (Equal Treatment)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation to amend the criminal law to eliminate any instances of unequal treatment between men and women.

Mr. Maclean: There are no general plans to amend the few areas of the criminal law in which there are differences in the way that men and women are treated. We are, however, reviewing the law relating to anonymity in cases involving sexual offences which in practice, although not in principle, may affect men differently from women.

Prisoners (Esapes)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have escaped since 1 April while in the custody of (a) prison officers, (b) police officers and (c) Group 4 officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Martin Redmond from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of prisoners who have escaped since 1 April 1993 whilst in the custody of (a) prison officers; (b) police officers; and (c) Group 4 officers.

The total number of prisoners who have escaped from prison custody since 1 April 1993 to date is 215. Of this 108 escaped from within establishments and 107 from escort.

The following table shows in whose custody the prisoners were when the escapes took place:

	Number
Prison officers (within prison service establishments)	108
Prison officers (escorts)	92
Group 4 custody officers (within HMP The Wolds)	—
Group 4 custody officers (escorts) (HMP The Wolds)	1
Group 4 custody officers (court escort service)	13
UKDS custody officers (within HMP Blankenhurst)	—
UKDS custody officers (escorts) (HMP Blankenhurst)	1
TOTAL	215

The number of prisoners who have escaped from police custody is not recorded centrally.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what financial penalty has been imposed on Group 4 in respect of prisoners who have escaped while in its custody; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Martin Redmond from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about escapes of prisoners from the custody of Group 4.

No financial penalty has been imposed on Group 4 in respect of such escapes. Past experience of both the police and the Prison Service has shown that it is not possible to eliminate escapes from escort, other than at unacceptable cost and with the use of unacceptable methods. Group 4 has faced the same difficulties.

Asylum

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently being detained in Her Majesty's prison establishments awaiting the outcome of their asylum applications; what is the average length of time they are held in prison; and what are the comparable figures for (i) 12, (ii) 24, (iii) 36 and (iv) 48 months ago.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information is not available in the form requested. However, on 21 October 1993, 225 asylum seekers had been detained for one month or more in prison establishments including the Home Office holding centre, Haslar. Of these, 76 had been held for between one and three months; 70 for between three and six months; and 79 for over six months.

Interview Tapes

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what guidelines or regulations are applicable to the police for the retention of tapes used to record routine interviews in the homes of people as to (a) where the tapes are to be stored and (b) for how long such tapes should be retained; and if he will make a statement;

(2) to what guidelines or regulations the police are subject in respect of first advising people, where discussions with the police are to be tape recorded, that such a recording is to be made; what specific provisions are applicable where the interview takes place in the interviewee's home; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: These are operational matters which are the responsibility of chief officers.

Prison Service

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of Her Majesty's prison establishments the key objectives reported by the Prison Service for the year 1993-94; and what they were for the year 1992-93.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Martin Redmond from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993:

KEY TARGETS FOR THE PRISON SERVICE

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about key objectives for prison establishments in 1993-94, and 1992-93.

The Prison Service's key targets for 1993-94 are set out in its Business Plan, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library. The Service's objectives, targets and performance indicators for 1992-93 were set out in its Statement of Objectives and Resources, which is also in the Library. Local targets and objectives are agreed by prison governors and Area Managers in the annual establishment "contracts". These are internal management documents which it is not our practice to publish; and to extract from each the individual objectives and targets could only be done at disproportionate cost.

Telephone Surveillance Warrants

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many telephone surveillance warrants have been signed in each of the past 24 months.

Mr. Howard: Statistics on the number of interception warrants issued by the Home Secretary and the Secretary of State for Scotland each year are published in the annual report of the Commissioner appointed under the Interception of Communications Act 1985. To give a more detailed breakdown would not be in the interests of national security or the prevention or detection of serious crime.

Juvenile Prisoners

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by Her Majesty's prison establishment the number of juveniles held in adult prisons currently and (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Martin Redmond from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993:

JUVENILES HELD IN ADULT PRISONS

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many juveniles are held in adult prisons currently and (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

I attach tables showing the population of untried, convicted unsentenced and sentenced juvenile inmates held in adult Prison Service establishments on 30 June in 1989, 1990, 1991, 1992 and on 31 August 1993.

Isle of Man (Driving Disqualifications)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 October, Official Report, c. 146, concerning enforcement of Isle of Man driving disqualifications in the United Kingdom, what consideration he has given to introducing such a policy; and for what reason he has decided not to do so.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None, but we understand that the Isle of Man authorities are considering whether the Isle of Man should seek a system of reciprocal recognition of driving disqualifications with the United Kingdom. We are ready to consider any proposals which they put to us.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Howard: The estimated cost in the current financial year of the Department having premises overseas is nil. The estimated cost of having personnel overseas is £3 million.

Detailed information for previous years is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prison Assaults

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many assaults by staff on inmates were reported in 1991, 1992 and to date in 1993; and in which prisons they took place.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 October 1993]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Ms Joan Ruddock from Derek Lewis, dated 25 October 1993:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many assaults by staff on inmates were reported in 1991, 1992 and to date in 1993.

The following allegations of assault were reported to the Incident Management Support Unit at Prison Service Headquarters.

1991
One allegation at HMP Belmarsh

1992
One allegation at HMP Shepton Mallet

1993 to date
One allegation at HMP Manchester
One allegation at HMYOI Onley
One allegation at HMYOI & RC Feltham
One allegation at HMP Belmarsh
One allegation at HMYOI Northallerton

Young Offenders

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many 15-year-olds sentenced to prison in 1993 to the latest date available received terms of (a) up to one week, (b) one to two weeks, (c) two to four weeks, (d) four to eight weeks, (e) eight weeks to three months, (f) three to six months, (g) six to 12 months and (h) over 12 months;

(2) how many 15-year-olds sentenced to prison in 1992 received terms of (a) up to one week, (b) one to two weeks, (c) two to four weeks, (d) four to eight weeks, (e) eight weeks to three months, (f) three to six months, (g) six to 12 months and (h) over 12 months.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 19 October 1993]: The table shows for 1992 in England and Wales the number of 15-year-olds sentenced to immediate custody at all courts for all offences by sex, type of court and type of offence. 1993 data will not be available until the autumn of 1994.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Eastern Health and Social Services Board

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which residential homes the Eastern health and social services board proposes to close down; what is the reason; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The Eastern health and social services board's four community units of management are currently in the process of consulting publicly on proposals which involve the closure of nine residential homes for elderly people. The homes are Warren house and Drumlough house, Lisburn; Ardview house, Ardglass; The Banks, Bangor; and Cairns house, Old See house, Enler house, James Dixon house, and Marlborough house, all of which are in Belfast.

The Government's strategy is to build up domiciliary services so that a greater proportion of elderly people can remain in their own homes if they so wish. The Government also wish to achieve a new balance between services provided directly by the statutory sector and those offered by independent providers.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland at what locations there are residential homes controlled by the Eastern health and social services board; and how many residents each of these homes accommodate.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

Statutory residential homes registered with the Eastern health and social services board

Name and address of home	Category of care	Number of places
South and East Belfast unit of management
Brae Valley Residential Home, 23 Breda Terrace, Belfast	Elderly Mentally Infirm	30

Trauma Counselling

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many trauma counselling specialists are currently employed by the Department of Health and Social Services;

(2) if he will make a statement on the availability of immediate and expert post-trauma counselling services for people affected by terrorism.

Mr. Ancram: No counselling specialists are currently employed by the Department of Health and Social Services. However, in each of the four health and social services boards, social work staff are available to provide immediate and post trauma counselling services for people affected by terrorism. These counselling services are mainly provided by volunteer social workers with special skills and training. The Voluntary Bereavement Counselling Agency—CRUSE—also offers help to people affected by terrorism.

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans has he to introduce respite care for multiple sclerosis sufferers in the Down section of the Down and Lisburn unit of management; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: This is primarily a matter for the Eastern health and social services board. Respite care for multiple sclerosis sufferers in the Down area is provided at the multiple sclerosis centre in Dalriada hospital, Ballycastle, and at Thompson house in Lisburn. In addition, the Down and Lisburn unit of management intends to purchase a locally provided package of respite care for multiple sclerosis sufferers and I understand that negotiations to procure this are presently under way.

Armagh Health Centre

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many offers have been received for the purchase of Armagh health centre; and if he will now consider offering the public the opportunity to purchase it.

Mr. Ancram: The general medical practitioners working in Armagh health centre have expressed an interest in buying the premises, and their proposal is being considered by the Southern health and social services board.

A separate offer has been received from the private sector. This is not being pursued, nor is the property being advertised on the open market, because Armagh health centre is not surplus to the requirements of the health and personal social services.

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what capital expenditure has been allocated for the Armagh health centre for the present financial year by the Southern health and social services board.

Mr. Ancram None.

Community Care

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the implementation of the Government's community care policy in the constituency of South Down; and what further action he proposes to take to improve the provision of care in the community.

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Health and Social Services and health and social services boards have put in place comprehensive arrangements for the monitoring of the community care reforms, introduced on 1 April 1993, with the three local units of management of the Eastern and Southern boards, which together serve the constituency of South Down, monitoring their community care activity and expenditure on a monthly and quarterly basis. This information contributes to the Department's overall evaluation of the implementation of community care policy and will inform decisions on the provision of community services within the constituency. The Department is currently undertaking the first six month performance review of the new community care arrangements which will be completed later this year.

Housing Executive

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of Housing Executive properties (a) demolished and (b) replaced in each of the Province's district electoral areas for each year since 1979.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 21 October 1992 at cols. 290-92. The chief executive of the Housing Executive has advised me that the information which is readily available for 1992-93 is as follows:

District Council Area	Demolished	Replaced
Antrim	17	—
Ards	—	16
Armagh	7	2

Note:
This does not cover the Housing Executive's total new-build programme but relates mainly to the replacement of dwellings in redevelopment areas and of unfit dwellings in housing action areas. It also includes replacement dwellings for obsolete purpose-built stock such aas Orlit dwellings, aluminium bungalows and rural cottages.

Fishing Vessels

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the closing date for applications for decommissioning payments for fishing vessels; how many applications were received; when the applicants will receive a decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The closing date for receipt of applications under the Fishing Vessel (Decommissioning) Scheme 1993 was 31 July. Sixty-eight applications were received from Northern Ireland, of which 28 were successful. All applicants were informed on 22 September of the outcome of their applications.

Undergraduates

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many undergraduates there were at each of the campuses of the Ulster university in the academic year 1992-93; and how many were from the Republic of Ireland at each location.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Campus	Total Number of Undergraduates[1]	Number of Undergraduates from Republic of Ireland
Belfast	667	55
Coleraine	3,485	614
Jordanstown	7,028	508
Magee	1,576	329
TOTAL	12,756	1,506

[1]includes part-time undergraduates.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what matters in regard to Sellafield and the new thermal oxide reprocessing plant were raised at the intergovernmental conference on Ireland held on 10 September.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The areas of discussion at meetings of the intergovernmental conference are listed in the communiqués issued afterwards; copies of which are placed in the Library. Details of these discussions are confidential between the two Governments.

Prisons

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list for each of Her Majesty's prison establishments in the Province the key objectives reported for the year 1993-94; and what they were for the year 1992-93.

Sir John Wheeler: All prison establishments in Northern Ireland operate from year to year with the following key objectives:

(a) to keep in custody, with the degree of security and control considered appropriate by staff, each individual person committed to custody by the courts and to produce or release them as required;

(b) to provide for all prisoners the necessities of life; including accommodation, food, exercise, health care and freedom to practice religion, and to provide them with the opportunity to engage in constructive activities, such as work, education, training, hobbies and sport, to fill at least the working day;

(c) to enable all prisoners to retain links with their families and to assist sentenced prisoners in their preparation for release into the community;

(d) to treat prisoners as individuals regardless of their religious beliefs or political opinions and to offer them the opportunity to serve their sentences free from paramilitary influence, and

(e) to manage resources economically and efficiently and, in particular, to enhance the morale and abilities of staff by providing the appropriate conditions of service, management structures and training.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will itemise the cost of establishing national health service trusts;

(2) how much has been spent in each health and social service board on (a) printing and publication costs, (b) publicity and public relations costs, (c) consultation and public meetings and (d) other costs connected with the proposed establishment of NHS trusts in 1991-92 and 1992-93; and what is the expected spending in 1993-94.

Mr. Ancram: Health and social services boards are not required to meet costs of this nature. The Department of Health and Social Services has set aside additional resources to meet the cost of mounting applications for trust status and, where they are successful, other neccesary transitional expenses. Approximately £185,000 is set aside for each successsful applicant to cover the cost of developing and publishing a formal application, remuneration of non-executives during the shadow period and a range of measures to prepare the trust for operational independence.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the revenue grant to national health service trusts during their shadow running period is calculated.

Mr. Ancram: The financial assistance which the Department of Health and Social Services gives to trusts during their shadow period is a one-off payment calculated to meet expenditure on areas essential to the trust becoming operationally independent. The level of assistance is based on that available in other parts of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what will be his Department's total expenditure on the establishment of national health service trusts since their first introduction to the end of the current financial year.

Mr. Ancram: To date a total of around £1.9 million has been spent on the establishment of health and social services trusts in Northern Ireland. Decisions are awaited on two further applications for trust status. Were both of these applications to be successful, this figure would increase by £370,000 making the total expenditure to the end of the current financial year £2,270,000.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the cost of employing management consultants and private agencies to assist in the preparation of national health service trust applications in the Province, and in each health and social services board.

Mr. Ancram: The Department of Health and Social Services has employed consultants from the Institute of Health Services Management to assist in its assessment of applications for trust status. The average cost of this consultancy for each application has been £2,000. Information on other consultancy is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much each national health service trust has spent on (a) shadow board costs, (b) legal expenses, (c) employment of staff and (d) miscellaneous expenses; and if he will define what costs are included under miscellaneous expenses.

Mr. Ancram: During the shadow period between establishment and operational independence trusts do not have funds of their own to meet these expenses and therefore costs are covered directly by the non-recurring assistance made available by the Department of Health and Social Services. Shadow board costs will vary from trust to trust depending on turnover but the average figure is around £20,000 per trust. Legal services for conveyancing etc. are provided by the Department at no cost to the trust. Details of individual costs for the employment of staff are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Miscellaneous expenses might include such items as new signs for buildings and vehicles, new stationery, organisational and management development, induction of chairmen and non-executive directors and consultants fees. Details of spending under individual headings are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the number of applications in each county in Northern Ireland under the (a) main arable areas payments scheme and (b) the simplified scheme in 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The number of applications by county under the arable area payments scheme are as follows:

County	Main scheme	Simplified scheme
Antrim	12	678
Armagh	8	251
Down	66	1,050
Fermanagh	—	2
Londonderry	33	671
Tyrone	7	335
Total	126	2,987

Advance payments for oilseed applications have already been made and payments for cereals, proteins and set-aside will be made during the months of November and December.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

1. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on how local communities can help provide recreational facilities for their communities under the national lotteries provisions.

Mr. Brooke: It is our hope that the national lottery will provide new recreational facilities right across the country. Local communities with projects or schemes in the fields of charities, sports, arts and the heritage will be able to apply to the appropriate distributors of lottery funds.

Built Heritage

10. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what role is played by English Heritage in the conservation of the built heritage.

Mr. Brooke: English Heritage is the Government's principal expert adviser on the historic environment. In addition to maintaining an historic estate of some 400 properties, it gives advice to the general public on conservation issues and gives grants for the repair of buildings of outstanding architectural and historic interest.

Anti-doping Controls

11. Mr. Hall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to intensify the anti-doping controls for all sports in the United Kingdom and introduce common penalties for all offenders following the recent recommendations of the International Olympic Committee.

Mr. Sproat: I welcome the decision taken in June by the IOC and the Association of Summer Olympic International Federations to accelerate the unification of their anti-doping rules and procedures. The Sports Council requires all governing bodies in receipt of grants and services to implement acceptable anti-doping regulations and the council will continue to work with the governing bodies to achieve greater harmonisation.

Arts Council

17. Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he has any plans to meet the chairman of the Arts Council to discuss the funding of the council.

Mr. Brooke: I meet the chairman of the Arts Council from time to time to discuss a range of issues.

Tourism

19. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received regarding the signposting of tourism sights.

Mr. Sproat: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Mid Kent (Mr. Rowe).

20. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what discussions he has had regarding the Coopers and Lybrand report on the English tourist board.

Mr. Sproat: I have had meetings with the chairman, some board members and senior staff of the English tourist board to discuss this report. I have also sought the views of the regional tourist boards and other industry representatives.

Television

21. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has had from the chairman of the Independent Television Commission over the workings of the Broadcasting Act 1990.

Mr. Brooke: Since January 1993, when the provisions of the Broadcasting Act 1990 came fully into effect, I have had four exchanges with the chairman of the Independent Television Commission, mainly to explain how the commission intended to carry out its responsibilities under the Act.

23. Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Independent Television Commission to discuss regulation of the industry.

Mr. Brooke: I have no present plans for a further meeting with the chairman of the Independent Television Commission whom I last met on 19 October.

26. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to meet the chairman of the Independent Television Commission to discuss programme quality.

Mr. Brooke: I last met the chairman of the ITC on 19 October, but I would not plan to meet him to discuss programme quality, since this is a matter for the ITC, not for me.

Arts Spending

22. Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage by how much Government spending on the arts has changed since 1979.

Mr. Brooke: Government funding for the arts has increased by over 45 per cent. in real terms since 1979. The Arts Council's grant-in-aid this year is £225·6 million.

Sports Grounds

24. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has for visiting the new Den to discuss safety of sports grounds.

Mr. Brooke: I have no plans at present to visit the new Den. But I congratulate Millwall football club on being among the first clubs to meet the Government's deadline of August 1994 for all-seating stadia in the top two divisions.

Heritage Buildings (Insurance)

25. Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on representations about costs of insurance for heritage buildings, including churches, in the City of London.

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend has received various representations about the cost of insuring listed churches against terrorist damage. Officials are investigating whether there is any practical way of easing the position.

BBC

27. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when his Department expects to make a statement regarding the future funding of the BBC.

Mr. Brooke: I announced on 21 June at column 27 the appointment of Touche Ross to assess the BBC's progress in achieving efficiency and revenue gains; to advise on the scope for further gains; and to advise whether RPI linkage was appropriate for the licence fee increases due in the next three years. I have received and am considering the Touche Ross report, and I plan to announce the Government's conclusions later this autumn. The longer-term funding of the BBC will be considered as part of the review of the BBC's royal charter.

South East Arts

28. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he last discussed with South East Arts encouragement of local performing arts, including music; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brook: I met the chairman of South East Arts along with the chairmen of the other regional arts boards on 27 September, when a number of matters were discussed.

Old Monuments

29. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps he is taking to preserve old monuments.

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend has a duty to compile and maintain a schedule of monuments the purpose of which is to provide them with statutory protection. English Heritage's monuments protection programme is identifying monuments of national importance and it is expected that within the next 10 years 70 to 80 per cent. of the monuments identified by the programme will have been scheduled. English Heritage also intends over the next two to three years to carry out work to identify those monuments most at risk, so that they can be given priority for scheduling during the remainder of the programme.

Hospitals

30. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress his task force has made on the future of hospitals which are listed buildings.

Mr. Sproat: The task force was established by the Department of Health and English Heritage in autumn 1992 to provide a forum to identify and assist in resolving problems concerning historic buildings and conservation matters in the NHS. It has reviewed a number of specific cases, commissioned the preparation of good practice guidance for NHS managers in respect of both listed hospitals that will continue in use, and those that will close, and is embarking on a review of the listing of redundant NHS institutions.

Regional Theatres

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he has received from regional theatres fearing closure following the Arts Council decisions on the distribution of funding for the next financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I have received a large number of representations from the staff and supporters of regional theatres. Decisions on the allocation of funding are a matter for the Arts Council.

Brodsworth Hall

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what will be the location of the marble statues, greyhounds and urns to be temporarily removed from Brodsworth hall, Brodsworth, South Yorkshire, by English Heritage; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what was the original estimate given by English Heritage of the restoration of Brodsworth hall, near Doncaster, South Yorkshire; what is the current estimate; when it will be fully open to the public; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list the items that have been stolen or lost to date during the restoration by English Heritage of Brodsworth hall, near Doncaster, South Yorkshire; how many have been recovered; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he has visited Brodsworth hall, near Doncaster, South Yorkshire, or intends to visit during the next 12 months in connection with its restoration by English Heritage.

Mr. Brooke: The original estimate by English Heritage of the cost of the restoration of Brodsworth hall was £3 million, at 1991 prices. The current estimate is £3·5 million at 1993 prices. The house is expected to be fully open to the public during the summer of 1995.

One of the notable features of the house and gardens is the Italian marble statuary which was placed in the main areas of the house, and also in the garden. Two of the garden statues, valued at £2,000 each, were stolen around the time of English Heritage's acquisition of the house and since then the garden statuary, which includes large numbers of greyhounds, has been stored at a secret location for security reasons. The stolen statues have never been recovered. The garden statuary will be replaced in situ, with suitable security precautions, when the hall is opened to the public.

I have not yet visited Brodsworth hall, although I should like to do so at some stage in the future to see the restoration work carried out by English Heritage.

Royal Parks Constabulary

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what joint consultation procedure exists between the police committee of the Royal Parks constabulary and that force's Police Federation, and the representative bodies of other ranks, at which matters relating to police pay and conditions of service are discussed; what is the membership of the joint body; and on how many occasions it has met in the past five years;

(2) who serves on the police committee of the Royal Parks constabulary; and how often it has met over the past five years;

(3) to what extent Home Office police regulations are applied to members of the Royal Parks constabulary;

(4) if a Minister from his Department will meet representative organisations of constables, sergeants, and inspectors of the Royal Parks constabulary to discuss the ramifications of (a) the Sheehy report, (b) the White Paper on police and (c) matters of general concern to Police Federation members which are not operational matters reserved for the chief constable.

Mr. Sproat: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Royal Parks Agency under its chief executive, Mr. David Welch. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter to Mr. Andrew Mackinlay from David Welch, dated 18 October 1993

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Mr. Iain Sproat, has asked me to reply to your Written Parliamentary Questions asking:

"To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what joint consultation procedure exists between the Police Committee of the Royal Parks Constabulary and that force's Police Federation, and the representative bodies of other ranks at which matters relating to police pay and conditions of service are discussed; what is the membership of the joint body; and on how many occasions has it met in the last five years."

"To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage who serves on the police committee of the Royal Parks Constabulary; and how often has it met over the past five years."

"To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage to what extent Home Office Police Regulations are applied to members of the Royal Parks Constabulary."

"To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if a Minister from his Department will meet representative organisations of constables, sergeants and inspectors of the Royal Parks Constabulary to discuss the ramifications of (a) the Sheehey Report (b) the White Paper on Police and (c) matters of general concern to federation members which are not operational matters reserved for the chief constable."

Prior to the inauguration of the Royal Parks Agency, the Department of the Environment and subsequently the Department of National Heritage, ensured the management of an efficient and effective Royal Parks Constabulary by a Police Committee. No arrangements existed for consultation between that Committee and the Staff Association.

Following the formation of the Royal Parks Agency and the appointment of a Chief Executive, an Advisory committee was formed to generally oversee the running of the Agency. One of its members is Sir Peter Imbert, Q.P.M., ex Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police. The Chief Executive has, nonetheless, retained the services of the former Deputy Assistant Commissioner as professional consultant on policing matters.

In Home Department Forces the Staff Association ie Police Federation and Superintendents Association, meet with their Chief Constables to discuss welfare and other issues. To the best of my knowledge these Associations do not meet directly with their Police Committees. In the Royal Parks Constabulary identical arrangements prevail.

The membership of the Royal Parks Constabulary Police Committee comprised the Director of Heritage and Royal Estate (Grade 3) as Chairman, with the Head of Division (Grade 5) as his Deputy, a representative from the Parks Management, a Councillor from Westminster and Richmond, together with a professional police consultant. The Home Office were also represented.

The Committee met three times each year over the past five years. The Chief Officer and his Deputy also served as members and reported at each meeting.

The Royal Parks Constabulary is a non-Home Department Police Force and is therefore not subject to the Police Act 1964. Nonetheless, it has an agreement under Section 96 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, with the Home Office and Police Complaints Authority, for the handling and supervision of the police complaints and discipline procedures. In a similar manner, although the Police Regulations do not apply, the spirit of the Regulations—with particular reference to overtime etc., entitlements—are applied in a like manner to Home Department Forces.

The Chief Officer and his Deputy have met with the Assistant Secretary of the National Union of Civil and Public Servants to provisionally discuss the recommendations of the Sheehy Report, and they will meet again once the Government announces its plan of implementation. No discussion has yet taken place or been asked for on the White Paper on Police. The Chief Officer and his Deputy are always available to the Staff Association to discuss matters of general concern to its members. The Chief Executive is likewise available to discuss similar issues with the Chief Officer or the membership as desired.

Licence Fees

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if it is his policy that the retail prices index formula for adjusting the BBC licence fee will continue in the years immediately ahead; and if he will make a statment.

Mr. Brooke: I announced on 21 June that I had commissioned Touche Ross to review the BBC's progress in achieving the efficiency and revenue gains identified by Price Waterhouse in 1990, and to advise whether the licence fee should remain linked to the retail prices index until the renewal of the BBC's royal charter. I have now received Touche Ross's report, and will announce the Government's conclusions shortly.

EMPLOYMENT

Smoking

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 5 July, Official Report, column 56, if he will publish the independent legal advice that his Department has received on which he based his statement that section 2 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provides legal protection for employees at risk from passive smoking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Department is advised on matters relating to health and safety at work by the Health and Safety Executive. The HSE's advice on the application of health and safety law to passive smoking in the workplace is set out in its guidance booklet, "Passive Smoking at Work", a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 5 July, Official Report, column 56, if he will publish the results of the recent surveys which indicate progress towards realising the aim of having the large majority of employees covered by a no smoking policy by 1995; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Summaries of surveys carried out in 1992 for the Health Education Authority and for the Health and Safety Executive have already been published. Further analysis of data from the HEA survey indicated that 52 per cent. of employees worked for organisations which took some action on smoking, and that 49 per cent. of the work force are in workplaces with a formal written smoking policy.

EC Social Fund

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when plans for the operation of European social fund objectives 3 and 4 will be submitted to the EC.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Following a round of consultation we expect to submit the final version of the European social fund objective 3 plan by the end of this month. A copy will be placed in the Library. The use of objective 4 is still being considered.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to implement objective 4 of the European social fund for January 1994 in respect of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A final decision on the use of objective 4 has yet to be taken. Meanwhile, we are waiting to hear from the European Commission how much money will be allocated to each member state, including the United Kingdom, under objectives 3 and 4. It remains our view that the European social fund should continue to focus first and foremost on helping unemployed people.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much European social fund resourcing the United Kingdom is expected to receive from (a) objective 3 and (b) objective 4 under the new European structural funds.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We are waiting to hear from the European Commission how much money will be allocated to each member state, including the United Kingdom, for the European social fund under objectives 3 and 4.

Civil Servants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many civil servants are working in the Employment Department offices in Caxton house, Tothill street, London.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are currently 736 civil servants working in Employment Department offices in Caxton house.

Age Discrimination

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to develop a code of practice for public sector employers concerning age discrimination in employment.

Miss Widdecombe: Age discrimination is wasteful and short sighted. Our policy is to persuade employers in both the public and private sector to recruit and develop staff on merit regardless of age.

The civil service abolished age limits on recruitment to service-wide grades in 1990.

Recently I launched "Getting On"—a drive to combat ageism which offers employers a five point plan to do just this. It urges all employers to follow the lead of the best and drop age bars from job adverts; welcome applications from older people; select on ability; offer flexible arrangements; develop and train all staff, regardless of age.

Wages

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average (a) public sector and (b) private sector weekly wage for each year since 1979.

Miss Widdecombe: Over this period, there have been changes in the composition of the public and private sectors due to privatisations and the contracting out of some jobs. The information available from the new earnings survey given in the table is for the sectors as constituted in April of each year.

Average gross weekly earnings of full time employees on adult rates—pay unaffected by absence: at April

	Public Sector £	Private Sector £
1979	90·9	87·9
1980	114·2	106·8

Training

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to require training and enterprise councils to set targets for training those aged over 50 years and monitor their implementation.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to do so. The Government remain committed, through their contract with training and enterprise councils, to equality of opportunity for all eligible people on training and enterprise programmes.

Pay Rates

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make it his policy to require the Employment Service to retain information on rates of pay for job vacancies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M.E.G. Fogden to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 25 October 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to him about the Employment Service retaining information on rates of pay for job vacancies. This is something which falls within the responsibilities he has delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Jobcentres do have information on rates of pay in their area. This is taken from details given by employers when they notify vacancies and from vacancies advertised in local newspapers. The information, which is rather generalised in nature, is used to advise employers and jobseekers who seek guidance on prevailing pay rates in a locality.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Wages Underpayments

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prosecutions for underpayment of wages were made in each year since 1979; and what number of employees were involved.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 22 October 1993]: The information requested is provided in the table. The policy of the wages inspectorate under all Governments has been to seek compliance with wages council orders by advice and persuasion. Prosecution is usually considered only where an offence is deliberate or repeated and the evidence is considered sufficient.

Year	Number of prosecutions for underpayment	Number of workers involved
1979	9	26
1980	8	43
1981	8	40
1982	4	4

SCOTLAND

Parliamentary Television

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the locations of the television sets in his Department which can receive the live television feed from the Chamber of the House; and what is the total cost to his Department of this service.

Mr. Lang: Dover house, Whitehall is the only Scottish Office building which can receive the live television feed from the Chamber of the House. The total cost of the service is £17,600 per annum, including VAT and maintenance.

Toll Roads

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will issue guidelines for the development of toll road proposals.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Privately financed toll roads can be provided only in accordance with the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991, or by individual legislation. Guidelines on the Act were contained in a circular that was issued to Scottish local authorities by the Scottish Office in March 1992. Evaluation of a prospective concessionaire's proposals is a matter for the roads authority, but a statement is published with a draft toll order, under the 1991 Act, setting out the key points of an assignation agreement.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to ensure adequate consultations on and evaluation of toll road proposals at all key stages.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Under the New Roads and Street Works Act 1991 the procedures for authorisation of a toll road are similar to those of the Roads (Scotland) Act 1984 that apply to publicly financed roads; there is therefore a similar approach to public consultation and public inquiry. Any scheme which is taken forward by means of individual legislation is subject to detailed scrutiny by Parliament.

Justices of the Peace

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to arrangements for the appointment, operation and co-ordination of justices of the peace in his plans for reorganisation of local government in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend intends to maintain the present arrangements for justices of the peace in the context of any amendments to the District Courts (Scotland) Act 1975 required to transfer responsibility for the district courts to the new local authorities proposed in paragraph 3.38 of "Shaping the New Future—The new Councils" (Cm 2267, July 1993).

Transport, Stranraer

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans there are to improve transport links from Stranraer to the main road and railway routes in the vicinity of Scotland's border with England.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The recent review of Scotland's key roads confirmed that the upgrading of the A75, linking Stranraer to the A74, has substantially eliminated the operating difficulties on the route. However, there are minor schemes within the trunk roads programme for further improvements which emphasise safety and overtaking opportunities. The financing of these schemes will begin once projects of greater priority have been completed. With regard to rail links I understand that ScotRail and Dumfries and Galloway regional council are investigating the possibility of restoring a short section of track at Ayr to allow the Stranraer-Carlisle service to run via Mauchline. This could reduce the present journey time between Stranraer and Carlisle by around 25 minutes.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration he has given to the setting up of a staff commission and a property commission to make recommendations in relation to the transfer of staff and property to the new authorities in his local government reorganisation.

Mr. Stewart: I have already announced that an independent staff commission will be set up to oversee the transfer of staff to the new councils. The Scottish Office will shortly be consulting the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities and staff representatives on the remit and membership of such a body. My right hon. Friend also proposes to take powers to enable him to establish a property commission to oversee the transfer of property to the new councils. It is intended that the need for such a body should be the subject of discussions with local government in due course.

Scottish Cancer Trials Office

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for the future of the Scottish Cancer Trials Office.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what functions are performed by the Scottish cancer trials office; what funding has been available since 1980; what funding will be available in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement regarding the future of the Scottish trials office.

Mr. Stewart: None. The Scottish Cancer Trials Office is an independent organisation which, faced with withdrawal of funding by the Medical Research Council, is closing in August next year. The chief scientist office of the Scottish Office is, through its Scottish cancer therapy network, in close contact with the trials office about its closure arrangements. In addition the chief scientist office itself is always prepared to consider applications for the funding of soundly based research projects in this as in other health-related subjects.

Tourism

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total value of (a) local authority and (b) other public contributions made in 1993 to (i) the East Lothian tourist board and (ii) the Scottish Borders tourist board.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total value of contributions to be made by (a) local authorities and (b) the Scottish tourist board to East Lothian tourist board and Scottish Borders tourist board during 1993-94 is set out in the table.

	SBTB	East Lothian
Local Authorities	204,500	271,200
Scottish Tourist Board	85,000	54,000

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many tourists visited (a) East Lothian and (b) Berwickshire, and how many visitor bed-nights were recorded, in the most recent year for which figures are available.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Estimates of tourism volume are available only at the Scottish regional level and relate only to overnight stays of one or more nights. The information in respect of Lothian region and Borders region is as follows:

	United Kingdom residents	Overseas residents
Bednights in Lothian (1992)	4,200,000	5,500,000
Bednights in Borders (1992)	1,000,000	300,000

Labour Statistics

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in (a) the Haddington travel-to-work area and (b) Berwickshire are employed in the tourism and leisure industries; and what proportion of the total work forces those figures represent.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Figures indicating employment in the tourism and leisure industries alone are not available. The information set out in the table incorporates the categories of tourism, leisure, distribution, hotels and catering and repairs.

Travellers

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he proposes to take to review the current policy on travelling people in respect of Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The advisory committee on Scotland's travelling people will be consulted in reviewing current policy on travelling people during the course of 1994.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the target number of caravan pitches set by central Government for each local authority in Scotland for use by travelling people together with the number of pitches provided in each local authority area to date.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The pitch targets set for each district and the pitches provided are listed in the table.

There is no identifed demand for travellers' sites in the areas of the Islands Councils.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of all pitches available to travelling people are now provided by local authorities in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Seventy-two per cent.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the current membership of the advisory committee on travelling people setting out the qualifications of each existing member; when each member's term of service ends; and what is the level of remuneration paid to each member who receives any remuneration.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The committee's membership and qualifications are listed in the table. Their current term of office expires on 31 December 1994. The chairman and members are unpaid but they are eligible for travel and subsistence expenses.

Mr. H. M. Garland MBE—Chairman—Retired. Former Director of Social Work, Central Regional Council.

Mr. J. E. D. Cormie OBE—Deputy Chairman—Recently retired Chief Executive, Perth and Kinross District Council.

Mrs. J. Cameron JP MBE—Councillor, Bearsden and Milngavie District Council. Former Provost.

Mr. P. Collier MBE—Retired. Former Environmental Health Adviser in the Communicable Diseases Unit at Ruchill Hospital, Glasgow.

Mr. C. Douglas MBE—A founder member of the Committee in 1971 and a leader of Scotland's travelling people.

Mr. A. Harper BEM—Former manager of local authority travelling people's site at Double Dykes, Perth.

Miss M. Hendry—Project Manager of the Signpost project at Woodlands Teachers Centre, Glasgow which is involved in traveller education. Settled traveller.

Mr. R. A. J. Moodie—Recently retired Depute Director of Planning, Lothian Regional Council.

Mr. J. Pollock—Part-time Housing Consultant and former Director of Housing Services, Dumbarton District Council.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set out the statutory authority for the setting up of the advisory committee on travelling people; and what plans he has to review its remit.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The advisory committee on Scotland's travelling people is a non-statutory body. Its remit will be reviewed before the current three-year term of office expires at the end of 1994.

Sheep

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the situation facing sheep producers who have been denied quota following the recent changes in the EC sheepmeat regime.

Sir Hector Monro: Until all the allocations of sheep annual premium quota have been completed, including those from the national reserve, I will not be in a position to say whether any producers will be left without quota. Quota is, however, transferable and it is open to sheep producers, including newcomers, to buy or lease quota within the prescribed transfer periods.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the size of the national sheep reserve available for distribution under the new EC sheepmeat regime.

Sir Hector Monro: The legislation provides for separate national reserves in the less-favoured and non less-favoured areas of the country. In both cases the size of the reserve depends in part on the amount of quota siphoned from sales of quota in the 1993 marketing year, since that quota is added to the respective reserve. As transfers of quota are still being processed, a final figure for the size of the reserves is not yet available.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent on official hospitality in his Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 20 October 1993]: My Department spent £94,385 on official hospitality during 1992-93. This figure includes expenditure on official hospitality in connection with events in Scotland arising from the United Kingdom presidency of the European Community.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what was the percentage of ambulances in each service in Scotland that responded within (a) eight minutes and (b) 14 to 20 minutes to emergency calls in (i) 1992-93 and (ii) the first half of 1993-94;

(2) what was the number of ambulance staff in Scotland employed by the NHS in each year since 1990, using whole-time equivalents.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 October 1993]: There is only one ambulance service for the whole of Scotland. The information is as follows:

Performance

	Responses
	0-8 minutes Per cent	14-20 minutes Per cent
1992-93	51	95
April to August 1993[1]	53	96

Number of staff[2]

Year	Ambulance-men/Women	Ambulance Officers and Control Assistants	Total
1990	1,802·7	220·0	2,022·7
1991	1,963·9	223·0	2,186·9
1992	2,093·6	221·0	2,314·6

Notes:
[1] The latest dates for which information is available.
[2] The figures exclude administrative and clerical staff and other support staff employed by the Scottish Ambulance Service.

Plastic Cigarettes

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what policy his office has regarding the sale of simulated plastic cigarettes to children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 21 October 1993]: It is understood that simulated plastic cigarettes are occasionally sold as novelties. Their intrinsic safety is a matter for trading standards officers to assess. The Government deplore any activity which encourages children to think that smoking is a safe or desirable habit.

DEFENCE

Menwith Hill Monitoring Station

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current arrangements with the United States National Security Agency for the operation of the Menwith Hill monitoring station in Yorkshire.

Mr. Hanley: Menwith Hill station near Harrogate is a Ministry of Defence site which has been made available to the US Department of Defence for use as a defence communications facility. It operates with the full knowledge and agreement of Her Majesty's Government.

Bergen-Hohne Firing Ranges

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the types of (a) weapon and (b) ammunition which are authorised for firing by British Army units on each of the firing ranges of the Bergen-Hohne ranges.

Mr. Hanley: The following types of weapon and ammunition are authorised for firing on each of the Bergen-Hohne ranges:

Range	Equipment	Ammunition	Remarks
M1A	Mortars	Illumination	Up to 120mm
1A	Guided Weapons	Swingfire TOW	Limited
	30mm Aircraft Helicopter	30mm APDS	Up to 120mm
	Milan
150C	Mortars		Up to 120mm

HESH —High Explosive Squish Head.
APDS —Armour Piercing Discarded Sabot.
APFSDS —Armour Piercing Fin Stabilised Discarded Sabot.
PE4 —Plastic Explosive 4.
ANFO —Ammonium Nitrate and Fuel Oil (plastic explosive).

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the arrangements for clearance of expended and unexploded ordnance on the Bergen-Hohne ranges.

Mr. Hanley: Clearance of expended and unexploded ordnance is the responsibility of the Bundeswehr who administer the ranges.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the types and amounts of ammunition expended by British Army units on each firing range on the Bergen-Hohne ranges in 1992.

Mr. Hanley: The types of ammunition fired by the British Army on the Bergen-Hohne training ranges are as follows:

120mm MBT ammunition
a. High Explosive Squish Head
b. Squish Head Practice
c. Armour Piercing Fin Stabilised Discarded Sabot
d. Discarded Sabot Trace

30mm Scimitar Warrior Fox
a. Armour Piercing Fin Stabilised Discarded Sabot
b. Practice
c. High Explosive

Miscellaneous Ammunition
a. Inert Giant Viper
b. Swingfire Anti-Tank Missile Practice
c. 7·62mm Ball and Trace
d. 81mm illuminating mortar
e. MILAN
f. 3kg Aircraft bombs
g. MLRS
h. TOW

Details of the actual quantities expended could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide figures showing the extent of use made by British Army units of the Bergen-Hohne ranges in each year since 1985.

Mr. Hanley: British Army units have made use of the Bergen-Hohne ranges as follows since 1985:

Year	Weeks
1985	8
1986	8
1987	4
1988	12
1989	9
1990	9
1991	10

[1] Planned.

Low-Flying

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on informing (a) hon. Members and (b) local media when changes are made in the directional flow control measures in the United Kingdom low flying system.

Mr. Hanley: When significant changes are made to the United Kingdom low flying systems, hon. Members whose constituencies are affected are given appropriate notification as are the local media. The United Kingdom low flying system is, however, under continuous review and changes to arrangements such as directional flow control measures are made when necessary. It is not our practice to notify hon. Members and the local media of all such changes.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of the map showing the general structure of the night low flying system.

Mr. Hanley: A copy of a map of the United Kingdom night low flying system is being placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which aircraft types in British military service are classified as light propellor-driven aircraft for the purposes of the low flying regulations.

Mr. Hanley: The aircraft types in British military service which are classified as light propellor-driven aircraft for the purposes of the low flying regulations are the Bulldog, the Chipmunk and the Islander aircraft.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if light propellor-driven aircraft and helicopters flying at altitudes between 500 and 2,000 ft above ground level are obliged to comply with the directional flow regulations in the United Kingdom low flying system.

Mr. Hanley: All military aircraft, including helicopters and light propellor-driven types, flying at altitudes between 500 and 2,000 ft above ground level are required to comply with the directional flow arrows in the United Kingdom low flying system, whether they are booked into the system or not.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum authorised altitude for Nimrod aircraft flying over the sea.

Mr. Hanley: The minimum authorised altitude for Nimrod aircraft flying over the sea within three nautical miles of the United Kingdom coastline is 250 ft. Beyond three nautical miles from the coastline, the Nimrod is authorised to fly down to 200 ft during the day.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if low flying military jet aircraft seeking permission to enter class D airspace during the course of a low flying sortie are required to meet the regulations for such airspace in respect of (a) not exceeding an indicated airspeed of 250 knots and (b) maintaining a vertical separation from cloud of 1,000 ft.

Mr. Hanley: Low flying military jet aircraft seeking permission to enter class D airspace are not required to comply with the airspeed limit of 250 knots, which applies only to civil aircraft. They do, however, have to maintain a vertical separation from cloud of 1,000 ft if flying under visual flight rules.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which commanders in the Royal Air Force currently hold the authority to approve or decline unit requests to fly at less than 250 ft over the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement on the procedures in force for requests for and authorisations of such flying.

Mr. Hanley: Commanders-in-chief or officers of equivalent status may authorise flying at less than 250 ft, but not less than 100 ft in the tactical training areas in the United Kingdom. In practice, this authority is delegated to the air officer commanding of the group concerned. Units wishing to carry out operational low flying submit requests to group headquarters where they are scrutinised to ensure the activity represents the minimum necessary before authorisation is given.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria are used in determining whether an environmentally sensitive location is granted Provost Marshal Prohibited or Provost Marshal Restricted area status, as opposed to low flying avoidance area status; and what are the differences between Provost Marshal areas and other types of low flying avoidance area, in terms of available sanctions on aircrew breaching these areas.

Mr. Hanley: In the majority of cases where it is agreed to grant avoidance status, a permanent, seasonal, or temporary low flying avoidance area will be declared, thus providing protection from military aircraft conducting low flying training. Exceptionally, if it is necessary to exclude all military aircraft including, wherever possible, those on operational tasks, a provost marshal prohibited or restricted area will be created. There is no difference between a provost marshal area and a low flying avoidance in terms of the available sanctions on aircrew breaching these areas.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the radius of provost marshal prohibited area PMP 103.

Mr. Hanley: Provost marshal prohibited area PMP 103, which applied to the Slimbridge Wildfowl Trust, is no longer in force. It was replaced in April 1987 by a seasonal avoidance which is in effect between 1 September and 15 April each year. It is not our practice to release detailed information on the dimesions of such avoidances.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if individual Royal Air Force flying units maintain their own lists of features for use as simulated targets; and what is the procedure for pre-surveying the areas surrounding these locations in order to ensure their suitability on environmental and safety grounds.

Mr. Hanley: Royal Air Force units maintain locally produced simulated target lists and these are reviewed regularly. Targets are carefully selected and account is taken of the location of nearby habitation and the environmental and safety factors involved.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities for overland low flying at less than 250 ft were made available to (1) Royal Navy Sea Harrier pilots and (2) Royal Air Force Harrier pilots prior to deploying to the south Atlantic for combat operations during the Falklands war.

Mr. Hanley: Since 1979 fixed-wing flying below 250 ft in the United Kingdom low flying system has been restricted to three sparsely populated areas in northern Scotland, central Wales and the Borders which are designated as tactical training area. There is no record of any aircraft having been authorised to fly training sorties below 250 ft outside these areas in preparation for deployment to the Falklands.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to authorise fixed-wing low flying at night at less than 250 ft.

Mr. Hanley: There are no such plans.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the towns specified for avoidance in the United Kingdom Military Low Flying Handbook are also marked as locations requiring avoidance on the pre-printed low flying charts used by aircrew.

Mr. Hanley: Military pilots are instructed to avoid flying low over major conurbations and towns and to avoid all other populated areas wherever possible whether they are listed for avoidance in the United Kingdom Low Flying Handbook or not. The boundaries of the avoidance areas around major conurbations are shown on the low flying charts used by aircrew. In addition, towns sufficiently large to qualify for formal avoidance status are shown as built up areas on the charts, together with some smaller towns, and aircrew will therefore be reminded of their location when planning sorties. The only towns specifically marked as sites to be avoided are a number of small communities within tactical training areas, which are too small to show as built up areas but are to be avoided by aircraft carrying out operational low flying.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the low flying areas in which there is an upper limit on the number of aircraft which can operate within the area at one time; what is the numerical limit in each case; and what was the date of introduction of the limit in each case.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is as follows:

Low Flying Area	Number of aircraft	Date of Introduction
LFA 7	30	October 1987
LFA 12	15	November 1990
LFA 17	20	October 1987

These limits apply to military fixed-wing aircraft, and do not include helicopters.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many formed Royal Air Force Vulcan flight crews held qualifications to fly at 100 ft above ground level in each year from 1977 to 1982.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to carry out a radar surveillance of low flying by military jet aircraft in the Barnsley/Doncaster/Rotherham/Sheffield low flying transit area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: There are no plans at present to carry out a radar surveillance of the transit area.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of low-flying sorties conducted by each type of Royal Air Force aircraft from Canadian forces base Goose Bay during the 1993 flying season.

Mr. Hanley: The number of low flying sorties carried out by Royal Air Force aircraft at Canadian forces base Goose Bay during the 1993 season was as follows:

	Sorties
Tornado GR1	574
Harrier GR7	5
Tornado F3	2

Aircraft Noise

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the highest speed achieved by the USAF F-16 aircraft during noise measurement runs at RAE West Freugh in June 1990; and what plans he has for further measurements of the noise levels generated by this type of aircraft.

Mr. Hanley: The highest speed the F-16 achieved during the noise measurement trials at RAE West Freugh in June 1990 was 453 knots. There are no plans at present for further noise trials of the F-16 aircraft, which is not based in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 13 July, Official Report, column 466, what was the result of the rearranged tests analysing the noise generated by the F-15E aircraft at low level; at what location the tests were held; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The trial to measure the noise generated by the F-15E rearranged for July did not take place, again due to the poor weather conditions. The trial was however conducted successfully at RAE West Freugh during September. The results are at present being analysed.

Missiles

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the current status of the conventionally armed stand-off missile programme.

Mr. Aitken: We are currently revising and updating our requirement paper. We expect to issue a formal request for proposals against a cardinal points specification to interested United Kingdom and overseas companies early in the new year.

Tornado

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Tornado aircraft will be converted to GR1b for the maritime role; and how many of that number will be on the front-line strength of operational squadrons.

Mr. Hanley: We plan to modify a total of 26 Tornado aircraft to GR1b standard for the maritime role. Of these, 24 will be on the front-line strength of operational squadrons.

Ministry Police

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements will be made for providing substantive answers to parliamentary questions relating to the Ministry of Defence police after it becomes an agency.

Mr. Hanley: All chief executives of defence agencies are encouraged to reply to Members of Parliament direct, where the parliamentary question covers matters falling within their area of responsibility. The same will be true for the chief constable, Ministry of Defence police. In such cases, the MP will receive a standard reply from the Minister which states that the chief executive will be replying. The Minister's reply, together with the chief executive's letter, will be published in Hansard.

Goose Bay

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the amounts paid to the Canadian Government each year since 1987 for Royal Air Force use of Canadian forces base, Goose Bay.

Mr. Hanley: The amounts paid to the Canadian Government for the Royal Air Force use of the Canadian forces base, Goose Bay are as follows:

Year	£
1987-88	4,269,000
1988-89	5,262,000
1989-90	5,482,000

Year	£
1990-91	9,468,000
1991-92	12,309,000
1992-93	15,492,000

Jobs

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many jobs are dependent on defence exports (a) as reported in this year's statement on the defence estimates and (b) according to the United Kingdom defence statistics in 1993; how the two sets of figures are calculated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1993" gives a figure of in excess of 100,000 jobs directly or indirectly dependent on defence exports. The 1993 edition of "UK Defence Statistics" gives in table 2·24 for the 1991-92 financial year figures of 75,000 for direct employment, and 70,000 for indirect employment dependent on defence exports. There is only one set of figures, which are those given in "UK Defence Statistics". These are calculated by comparing estimates of the value of defence exports based on data provided by HM Customs and Excise and the Society of British Aerospace Companies, with estimates of sales per employee for the main industries concerned based on data provided by the Central Statistical Office. More details of the methods used to obtain these employment estimates are given in an article in the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1988", volume 2.

RAF Sea Kings

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when RAF Sea Kings dedicated to search and rescue will begin to use a satellite-based navigation system; and when he expects all search and replace aircraft to be using the system.

Mr. Hanley: It is planned to equip Mk3 RAF Sea Kings with a global positioning system—GPS—a satellite-based navigation system. The Sea King Mk3a helicopter scheduled to be delivered to the RAF in 1996 will be fitted with GPS, and it is expected the whole RAF fleet will be equipped with GPS by late 1997. Royal Navy search and rescue helicopters are expected to be fitted with GPS within the next two years.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what navigation system is currently used by RAF Sea Kings dedicated to search and rescue.

Mr. Hanley: The main navigation systems used by the RAF search and rescue Sea Kings comprise a Decca Mk19 hyperbolic navigation system, a doppler radar, an air data system and a tactical navigation system. These are supported by VHF omni-range, instrument landing system equipment, a VHF and UHF homing system and automatic direction finding equipment. In addition, a horizontal situation indicator at each pilot station displays navigational steering information.

Defence Export Services Organisation

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many staff are employed within the Defence Export Services Organisation; and what is the breakdown of those posts.

Mr. Aitken: The following is a breakdown of the staff employed within the Defence Export Services Organisation:

Office	Staff numbers
London Based	263
Overseas	25
Directorate General Saudi Armed Forces Projects (1)	221
Malaysian Project Office (1)	33
Kuwait Programme Office (1)	21
Directorate of Sales (Disposals) British Forces Germany	43
Army Sales Team	60
Total	666

(1) Self funding.

Personnel Statistics

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of (a) uniformed personnel and (b) MoD civil servants on 1 Janaury 1988; and what are the latest figures.

Mr. Hanley: The information is as follows:

	1 January 1988	1 September 1993
United Kingdom Regular Forces	317,300	267,200
MOD Civil Servants (Full-time equivalents)	144,800	(1) 128,000

Note:
(1) Of these some 33,000 are in the administration group, some 54,000 are specialist non-industrial staff and some 41,000 are industrial staff.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civil servants are working at his Department's offices in Whitehall.

Mr. Aitken: On 1 September 1993, there were some 3,400 full-time and part-time MOD civil servants working in the Whitehall area.

Pregnancy (Dismissals)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what extent the negotiations on subsidiarity with the EC will enable him to adopt a policy of not paying compensation to women dismissed from the services on account of pregnancy.

Mr. Hanley: Liability of the Government to pay compensation to women dismissed from the armed forces on account of pregnancy between August 1978 and August 1990 was established following an agreed order of the High Court applying EC directive 76/207—the equal treatment directive. The Government believe that this directive is consistent with the principle of subsidiarity.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many women were dismissed from the services as a result of pregnancy between 1978 and 1990; and on what authority the policy of dismissing such women was based up to 1990.

Mr. Hanley: Some 5,600 women were dismissed from the services on pregnancy between August 1978, when the EC equal treatment directive came into force, and August 1990, when the services discontinued the practice of dismissing women on pregnancy and introduced maternity leave.

The basis for the policy of dismissing service women on pregnancy prior to August 1990 was the exemption granted to the armed forces in the Sex Discrimination Act 1975.

Departmental Costs

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 in rent and other associated costs with the offices of his Department in Whitehall.

Mr. Hanley: The estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 in rent and other associated costs on MoD headquarters offices in Whitehall will be about £58 million. This includes £30 million in rental charges payable to the Department of the Environment under the property repayment services scheme.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Freemasons

35. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received regarding disclosure by freemasons in public life; and what action he has taken.

Mr. David Davis: Apart from representations by the hon. Member, my office has received six letters on this subject. The civil service management code has been amended to identify freemasonry as a possible conflict of interest. A copy is in the Library of the House.

"Realising Our Potential"

42. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about action so far implemented following publication of his White Paper on science technology and engineering "Realising Our Potential".

Mr. David Davis: Progress in implementing the White Paper has been excellent. We have established a new Council for Science and Technology to provide high-level advice. We have embarked on a technology foresight programme, aimed at achieving new working partnerships between industry, academia and Government. We have made preparations for the new research council structure, including appointing the first of the new part-time chairmen. We have announced a number of initiatives to promote public understanding of science, engineering and technology.

Market Testing

39. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the effect of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 on market testing in the civil service.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government issued guidance in March this year which set out a framework for considering questions raised by the regulations. I am happy to say that Departments have made good progress in their market-testing programmes.

44. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what analysis his Department has made regarding the likely outcome of a subsequent review of market testing within a given department.

Mr. Waldegrave: Departments have made good progress in their market-testing programmes. My officials in the efficiency unit are currently undertaking an analysis of the outcome of the market-testing programme for 1992-93, ending on 30 September. They will be reviewing their findings with Departments. I shall report on the results of their analysis when it has been completed.

Wildlife

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what research he has commissioned into development of natural wildlife in pocket parks.

Mr. Waldegrave: This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. For my part, I have not commissioned any research on this topic. I understand, however, that the Ground Work Foundation and English Nature, bodies funded by his Department, are active in the development of such schemes.

Science White Paper

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what further plans he has to implement plans outlined in his White Paper on science published earlier this year.

Mr. Waldegrave: Since the White Paper was published, I have established the new Council for Science and Technology which meets for the first time on 9 November, launched the technology foresight programme and appointed the first of the new part-time chairmen of research councils. I will shortly be appointing the director general of research councils and the remaining chairmen and chief executives. We have launched a new grants scheme to aid small-scale initiatives in the public understanding of science. Finally, the first Forward Look on publicly funded science and technology will be published next April.

Citizens Charters

43. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list those charters and the specific targets where financial compensation is a remedy for failure to meet the charter's standards.

Mr. David Davis: There are seven charters containing provision for financial compensation. They are the British Rail passengers charter; London Underground customers charter; Northern Ireland railways passengers charter; Contributions Agency contributors charter; Contributions Agency employers charter; and the Benefits Agency customer charter.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what representations he has received on the effectiveness of the citizens charter.

Mr. David Davis: My right hon. Friend has received numerous representations about the effectiveness of the citizens charter, most recently at a series of regional forums where local public service managers have been discussing how they are putting charter principles into practice.

Nuclear Test Programme

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what plans he has, following his recent statement on open government in relation to documents which continue to be withheld from public scrutiny beyond 30 years, to release documents having a bearing upon the health and safety of participants in Britain's nuclear test programme.

Mr. Waldegrave: The White Paper on open government (Cm 2290) published on 15 July 1993 states, in paragraph 9.28, that all Departments will, as resources can be made available:

"re-review all material currently withheld for longer than 30 years to see whether its sensitivity has passed and to release it if possible".

Records relating to Britain's nuclear test programme are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence who will be arranging for these records to be reviewed as part of this undertaking.

HEALTH

NHS Trusts

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications for trust status have been made to the South East Thames regional health authority; how many have been approved; how many rejected; and what evaluation has been made of the performance of the trusts which have been approved against the prospectuses issued at the time of their applications.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is shown in the table. The business planning process and financial performance of national health service trusts are monitored by the NHS management executive outposts. The main accountability tools for this purpose are a business plan, a strategic direction, annual accounts and an annual report.

Trust applications in the South East Thames region

	Applications	Approved	Rejected	Deferred	Withdrawn
1st wave	5	1	3	0	1
2nd wave	13	10	3	0	0
3rd wave	13	11	2	0	0
4th wave	12	7	0	[1]5	0

[1] Secretary of State will announce her decisions on these five applications at the turn of the year.

Medical Complaints Appeals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to ensure equality of access to appropriate legal advice for patients and practitioners at medical complaints appeals; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Professor Alan Wilson of Leeds university is chairing a full review of national health service complaints systems. He is due to report at the turn of the year.

Non-urgent Surgery

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the names of hospitals and health authorities who had ceased non-urgent surgery on 30 September.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally. Early evidence indicates that most hospitals are managing their workload effectively. Guidance was issued by the national health service management executive to ensure that effective monitoring systems are in place so that local managers can identify problems early and take action to maintain a balanced activity throughout the year. A copy of the guidance EL(93)10 is available in the Library.

Fund Holding

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances fund-holding general practitioner practices are permitted to pool budgets for extra-contractual referrals with their local district health authority so as to ensure equity of treatment for patients of fund-holding and non-fund-holding general practitioners.

Dr. Mawhinney: General practitioner fund holders do not have a separate budget for extra-contractual referrals. All purchases made by general practitioner fund holders are subject to contracts. In their budgets, fund holders receive only their patients' fair share of national health service resources.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what criteria funds are awarded to fund-holding general practitioner practices (a) in their initial year of operation and (b) in subsequent years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The criteria for awarding funds to general practitioner fund holders are set out in "General Practice Fundholding: Guidance on Setting Budgets for 1993-94", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list, geographically by district health authority area, the name and address of each fund-holding general practitioner practice, the date upon which the practice achieved fund-holding status, the amount of money awarded to the practice in 1993-94 for the purchase of services covered by the fund-holding regulations, the number of patients on the practice's list on the day that its funding was allocated, and the amount of funding per capita awarded to each practice for services covered by the fund-holding regulations.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what average level of funding per capita was allocated in 1993-94 to fund-holding general practitioner practices in (a) England, (b) each regional health authority area and (c) each district health authority area to enable fund-holding practices to purchase those services covered by the fund-holding regulations.

Dr. Mawhinney: The average level of funding allocated to general practitioner fund holders per capita in England in 1993-94 was £152.

The average level of funding allocated to GP fund holders per capita by regional health authority in 1993-94 is shown in the table.

Private Nursing Homes

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will consider holding centrally information of bed numbers in newly registered private nursing homes and residential care homes; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: We have no plans to do so.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she is currently considering for changing the name of community health councils; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is currently considering in respect of the future status and influence of community health councils in respect of NHS trusts; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The role of community health councils is to represent the interests of the public. Many CHCs have developed effective working relationships with trusts which they use to carry out this role. We are interested in the spread of this good practice.

Extra-contractual Referrals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by (a) regional health authority and (b) district health authority the number of extra-contractual referrals that were refused for (i) the last 12 months and (ii) 24 months; on what grounds each was refused; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally. The grounds on which an extra-contractual referral can be refused are clearly laid out in "Guidance on Extra-Contractual Referrals" (EL(92)60), copies of which are available in the Library.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost for the current financial year of her Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department does not hold data relating to the cost of staff based overseas for the financial years 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92. However, during 1992-93 the Department spent a total of £215,362 on overseas personnel. During the current financial year the Department has spent a total of £118,386 to date. These figures relate to the salary and travel and subsistence costs of staff to overseas postings. The Department does not have seconded premises overseas.

Homelessness

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to monitor the provision of community care services for homeless people.

Mr. Bowis: The social services inspectorate is currently carrying out a study in a sample of local authority areas on the way in which community care and housing policies are being co-ordinated. This will specifically address the provision of services for homeless people.

Patients (Spending)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the revenue spending on in and out-patients by each authority in England in 1991-92.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally on a purchaser basis.

Assessment Process

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to provide new guidelines to local authorities on their duties under the assessment process outlined in section 47 of the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990.

Mr. Bowis: Guidance setting out the legal framework within which authorities work has already been issued. Copies of the guidance, CI(92)34, are available in the Library.

Deaths (Inquiry)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will now set up a public inquiry into the mismanagement of patients at Birmingham orthopaedic, Stafford and Doncaster maternity hospitals and the resultant deaths.

Mr. Sackville: We have no plans to do so.

Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Services

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish monitoring information collected during her Department's review of drug and alcohol rehabilitation services.

Mr. Bowis: The report carried out for the Department by Goldsmith's college was published on 28 July and a copy was placed in the Library.

Caesarean Operations

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will consider having the numbers of caesarean operations to deliver babies collated centrally; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The numbers of caesarean operations have been collected centrally since 1973. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Falkirk, East (Mr. Connarty) on 1 March at columns 29-30 for the latest available figures.

Charitable Trust Funds

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she intends to take to ensure that the charitable trust funds held by regional health authorities by reason of the distribution of the national fund in 1974 are passed over to hospitals for the benefit of patients.

Mr. Sackville: None. This is a matter for the trustees of the charitable funds concerned.

Family Planning Services

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide details of the costs of family planning services in England in each year since 1990-91.

Mr. Sackville: Estimated total expenditure on national health service family planning services in England was £109·2 million in 1990-91 and £136·2 million in 1991-92, the latest year for which figures are available. The two figures are not directly comparable because of new reporting arrangements following the national health service reforms.

Rampton Hospital

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement in respect of the conditions and environment of patients at Rampton special hospital after her visit to the hospital on 3 August.

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State did not visit Rampton hospital on 3 August but I did so on 30 September. I was impressed with the advances which have been made in the care and treatment of patients and with the commitment and dedication of the members of the staff and management whom I met. The refurbished ward which I opened, providing accommodation for 20 mentally ill men in individual rooms with their own washing and toilet facilities, represents a significant improvement in the living conditions of these patients.

With the Special Hospitals Service Authority we are committed to achieving and maintaining the highest standards of care at Rampton and the other two special hospitals, and to strengthening their professional links with local and regional national health service psychiatric services. Staff education has a key part to play in this and I was glad to have the opportunity following my visit of speaking at the signing of the agreement between Ashworth and Rampton hospitals and Sheffield Hallam university to designate the hospitals as joint colleges of the university.

Hospital Treatment (Bosnia)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what central Government funds were used for the cost of hospital treatment of Bosnian war victims; what is the total cost to date; what other uses the funds have been put to during the current financial year; what is the total amount of the reserves left; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: These costs have been met from moneys voted by Parliament for the national health service, out of the Department of Health budget for paying provider units the costs of treatments to all overseas visitors exempt from NHS charges. The total budget, the use of which is restricted to this specific purpose, is £12 million for this financial year of which about £6·1 million has been spent. To date, costs of treating Bosnians amount to £517,000 in 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Top Ten Hospitals

Mr. Milligan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the top 10 hospitals in Britain measured by their success rate in (a) general surgery and (b) heart surgery.

Mr. Sackville: Information on surgical success rates in hospitals is not available centrally. A system of medical audit is in place in every hospital, which provides confidential peer review by doctors of clinical standards and practices.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it is her policy to receive delegations from community health councils which have formally objected to hospital closures.

Dr. Mawhinney: Formal objections to hospital closures should be made to the district health authority.

Where the regional health authority supports the district health authority, it will refer the matter to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for a final decision.

Whether we receive a delegation from the community health council will depend on the view we take of the particular closure, taking account of all the relevant facts.

Capital Allocation

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to change the system of capital allocation.

Mr. Sackville: A steering group has been developing a new system for allocating captial to respond to changes in the new national health service. The group's proposals will need further development in the light of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's statement on 21 October. Allocations for 1994-95 will be based on existing arrangements.

Anencephaly

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the number of preventable cases of anencephaly and spina bifida caused by insufficient folic acid in the diet.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available. An expert advisory group report on folic acid and the prevention of neural tube defects, published in December 1992, confirmed evidence that women who increase their intake of folic acid when planning a pregnancy can significantly reduce the risk of having a baby with neural tube defect. A copy of the report is available in the Library.

Hearing Loss

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which units in this country provide psychiatric services for people with hearing loss; and what plans she has to continue supraregional funding for these units.

Mr. Bowis: Mental health services for deaf people are provided at Springfield hospital, London, Prestwich hospital, Manchester and Queen Elizabeth psychiatric hospital, Birmingham. The units at Springfield and Prestwich hospitals have received supraregional funding for seven years through to 1994 to give the units time to establish referral patterns for subsequent years.

"Patients Charter News"

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated cost of production and circulation of the "Patients Charter News"; and if she will list its print total and number of editions each year; what is its purpose; to whom it is circulated; and who is responsible for its content.

Dr. Mawhinney: The patients charter has stimulated many innovative ideas and much good practice throughout the national health service. The patients charter news, published every other month, aims to share ideas with NHS staff to stimulate improved performance on the charter.

Forty-four thousand copies are printed of each edition. Copies are distributed to all parts of the NHS, including health authorities and hospitals.

The estimated annual cost of patients charter news for this financial year is £30,000. The patients charter unit of the NHS management executive has responsibility for the content of the newsletter.

NHS Premises (Tobacco Sales)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 1 July, Official Report, column 618, if she will publish the data on which she based the statement that the ending of sales of tobacco products on NHS premises has now largely been achieved.

Mr. Sackville: The reply was based on advice from regional health authorities. As the information provided varied in format, publication is unlikely to prove useful but the results showed that, on all but a handful of sites, sales of tobacco products had ceased. Action continues to ensure the remaining outlets comply with the policy as soon as possible.

South and East Cheshire Health Authority

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement setting out the conditions of service and remuneration of the appointment as executive directors of the South and East Cheshire health authority of Mr. Simon Cussons, Christine Hannah, Hilary Blumer, Neil Campbell, Paul Harvey, Dr. Leslie Klein and Mr. Gary Lucking.

Dr. Mawhinney: Mr. Simon Cussons is the non-executive part-time chairman of South and East Cheshire health authority, and was appointed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for a term of office commencing 1 October 1993 until 31 March 1997. Chairmen of health authorities are remunerated within the range £15,125 to £19,285 per year, according to the district revenue budget. The appointment of non-executive members to district health authorities is a matter for regional health authorities. The annual remuneration of non-executive members of district health authorities is £5,000. The chief executive of a district health authority is appointed by the chairman and non-executive members, and the other executive members are appointed by the chairman, non-executive members and the chief executive of that authority. The remuneration and conditions of service of the chief executive and other executive members are a matter for the authority, within guidelines laid down centrally, copies of which are available in the Library.

Queen Victoria Hospital, East Grinstead

Mr. Renton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the burns and plastic surgery units will remain at Queen Victoria hospital, East Grinstead; and whether she will be able to attend the opening ceremony for the new burns unit at that hospital early in 1994.

Mr. Sackville: The burns and plastics services provided by Queen Victoria hospital were included in the specialty reviews which were carried out following the Tomlinson report and "Making London Better". The recommendations of the specialty review are available to inform the South East Thames regional health authority together with the Kent and Sussex purchasing agencies when deciding upon the provision of burns and plastic services for their residents. The Queen Victoria Hospital will become an independent national health service trust in April 1994, a decision which reflects the hospital's justified reputation as a centre of excellence.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision her Department is making over the next five years for the younger sufferers from Alzheimer's disease; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: The arrangements for assessing and meeting the needs of younger sufferers from Alzheimer's disease are decided by local health and social services authorities.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the aims and methods of assessing Alzheimer's disease sufferers' needs; and if she will make it her policy to allow more weight in assessment to be given to the views of family carers.

Mr. Bowis: The introduction of the health checks on patients aged 75 and over in general practitioners' contracts provides an opportunity for the cognitive impairment caused by Alzheimer's disease to be detected. Under the new community care arrangements care managers are responsible for assessing the needs of sufferers from Alzheimer's disease and for arranging for their needs to be met. Guidance emphasises that carers views' should be taken into account and, where appropriate, carers should be offered a separate assessment.

Child Migrants

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions she had during her recent visit to Australasia on her policy towards British child migrants; and if she will make a statement;

(2) pursuant to the announcement of the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Suffolk, Central (Mr. Yeo) of 19 May regarding the Child Migrants Trust, what progress has been made in discussions with the Australian Government regarding the child migrant scheme.

Mr. Bowis: Correspondence between myself and the Australian Minister for Immigration and Ethnic Affairs was already in train before my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's visit to Australia in September. It was not therefore a matter for my right hon. Friend to raise during her visit.

Officials in Australia have, through the British high commission in Canberra and the consular department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, written to officials in my Department providing details of the activities, to date, of the Child Migrants Trust in Australia. Both Governments are funding the Child Migrants Trust in support of their record tracing and advisory activities.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will take steps to arrange financial assistance and retrospective payments to former child migrants who have incurred expenditure in returning to Britain to locate and be reunited with their natural families.

Mr. Bowis: The migration schemes for children from the United Kingdom in the care of voluntary and statutory agencies, were run mainly by voluntary bodies. The Government are funding the Child Migrants Trust to assist it in record tracing and in providing an advisory service, and continue to support constructive contacts between the trust and the voluntary bodies which ran the schemes. The Government did not deal with individual cases. We do not consider that it would be appropriate to provide financial assistance directly to former child migrants.

Dentistry

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list for each family health services authority since July 1992 (a) the number of patients seeking emergency dental treatment from their general practitioners, (b) the number of courses of dental treatment given by general practitioners and (c) the number of patient referrals of dental emergency cases referred to accident and emergency departments.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 21 October 1993]: Information about the number of patients seeking emergency dental treatment from their dentists and the number of patients referred to accident and emergency departments for emergency dental treatment is not available centrally.

The number of courses of dental treatment for England for the period July 1992 to September 1993 is shown in the table. Since October 1990, the majority of treatment for children has been carried out under capitation arrangements where courses of treatment are not identified separately. Figures for adults and children, therefore, are not comparable.

British Nuclear Fuels plc

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the health detriment to the United Kingdom population of the BNFL proposal of retaining intermediate and low-level wastes and return of high-level wastes.

Mr. Yeo: I have been asked to reply.

Since 1976, all BNFL's contracts for reprocessing overseas spent fuel included provision for the return of wastes. Under its proposals for waste substitution, BNFL would offer to return to customers, with whom it has such contracts, an equivalent amount in radiological terms of high-level radioactive waste in place of intermediate and low-level waste arising from reprocessing.

We have asked the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee for further advice on the integrated radiological toxic potential system, which BNFL proposes as the basis for determining radiological equivalence.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Lone Parents

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the lone parents claiming one-parent benefit are aged (a) under 16 years, (b) 16 to 19 years, (c) 20 to 24 years, (d) 25 to 29 years, (e) 30 to 34 years, (f) 35 to 39 years or (g) 40 years and over; and what percentage of mothers in each of those age groups are married or have previously been married.

Mr. Burt: Information about the age of one-parent benefit recipients is not held in all cases and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Information on recipients' marital status is not available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the lone parents claiming family credit benefit are aged (a) under 16 years, (b) 16 to 19 years, (c) 20 to 24 years, (d) 25 to 29 years, (e) 30 to 34 years, (f) 35 to 39 years or (g) 40 years and over; and what percentage of mothers in each of those age groups are married or have previously been married.

Mr. Burt: The numbers of lone parents in receipt of family credit analysed by age are in the table.

Age band	Number of lone parents in receipt of family credit
Under 16 years	n/a
16 to 19 years	1,240
20 to 24 years	17,820
25 to 29 years	37,040
30 to 34 years	48,360
35 to 39 years	46,840
40 years and over	54,520
Total	205,820

Notes:
1. These figures include both lone mothers and lone fathers.
2. Information is not available on the marital status of lone parents receiving family credit.

Source: 5 per cent. of sample of family credit recipients at 30 April 1993.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the lone parents claiming income support benefit are aged (a) under 16 years, (b) 16 to 19 years, (c) 20 to 24 years, (d) 25 to 29 years, (e) 30 to 34 years, (f) 35 to 39 years or (g) 40 years and over; and what percentage of mothers in each of those age groups are married or have previously been married.

Mr. Burt: The figures requested are in the tables. The figures in both tables include both female and male lone parents.

[4] "Previously Married" refers to lone parents who are widowed or divorced.
[5] "Currently Married" refers to lone parents who are separated from their partners, or prisoners' partners.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many lone parents claiming housing benefit are aged (a) under 16 years, (b) 16 to 19 years, (c) 20 to 24 years, (d) 25 to 29 years, (e) 30 to 34 years, (f) 35 to 39 years or (g) 40 years and over; and what percentage of mothers in the above age groups are married or have previously been married.

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

3. "Married": indicates that the recipient has a partner.
4. "Previously Married": refers to recipients who are widowed or divorced.
5. "Currently Married": refers to recipients who are permanently separated from their partners because their partner is in prison.

Maxwell Pensioners

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with the Maxwell pensioners trust on arbitration on disputes between pension funds and financial bodies, as a means of reducing legal and accountancy fees; and if he will make a statement on developments to date.

Mr. Hague: The trustees of the Maxwell pensioners trust have taken an initiative to promote an overall settlement to the many disputes relating to missing Maxwell pension scheme assets. The Government welcome this initiative, which is being taken forward on behalf of the trust by Sir Peter Webster, a retired High Court judge.

Although the details of Sir Peter's work must necessarily remain confidential to him and those directly involved, I and my right hon. Friend stay in touch with overall progress through Sir John Cuckney, chairman of the trust.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number of beneficiaries, and the total amounts paid, for housing benefit among (a) income support claimants, (b) family credit claimants and (c) others.

Mr. Burt: Information is not available in the form requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost to the Exchequer of reducing the taper for withdrawal of housing benefit from 65p in the pound to 50p in the pound.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Newcastle-under-Lyme (Mrs. Golding) on 13 July 1993 at column 478.

Disability Allowances

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many successful claims have been made for disability working allowance; what is the total number of applications made; and if he plans to amend the current regulations governing this benefit.

Mr. Hague: By 30 September 1993, 34,958 applications had been received and 7,917 claims had been successful. We have commissioned the Policy Studies Institute to carry out research to help us evaluate disability working allowance. Until we have completed the evaluation, we do not envisage making any major structural changes to the benefit.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the most recent figures for waiting times from application for appeal to appeal hearing for (a) attendance allowance, (b) mobility component disability living allowance, (c) care component disability living allowance and (d) disability working allowance.

Mr. Burt: In the year ending December 1992, the last period for which figures are available, the average time taken from application to clearance was:
(a) attendance allowance—33·2 weeks
(b) disability living allowance—17·9 weeks
Figures for disability living allowance are not broken down into the components.
No appeals on disability working allowance were received.

Benefits and Allowances

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of gross domestic product, annually, was spent on (a) income support, (b) invalidity benefit, (c) mortgage interest tax relief, (d) attendance allowance and (e) disability living allowance, for each year since 1988.

Mr. Burt: The information requested on items, a, b, d and e is given in the table.

Notes:
1. The information requested on item c is not a matter that is dealt with by this department.
2. Disability living allowance commenced in April 1992.

Adjudication Cases

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases are considered by adjudicating officers in an average month; and what number of cases is considered by each officer during an average working day.

Mr. Burt: The information is not available.

Civil Servants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many civil servants are working at the Adelphi, 1-11 John Adam street, London.

Mr. Burt: There were 758 staff working for the Department at the Adelphi on 1 October 1993, the latest date for which figures are available.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for industrial disablement benefit for a prescribed industrial disease were received by the Benefits Agency in the period since January 1991; how many of those claims resulted in medical examinations; what were the outcomes of the medical examinations; how many appeals were received from claimants against the examinations; and what were the results of any subsequent medical appeal tribunal hearings.

Mr. Scott: The administration of industrial injuries disablement benefit is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. Michael Bichard to Mr. David Clelland, dated 26 July 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many claims for industrial disease were received by the Benefits Agency in the period since January 1991; how many of those claims resulted in medical examinations; what were the outcomes of the medical examinations; and what were the results of any subsequent medical appeal tribunal hearings.

Information on the number of prescribed claims and the outcomes of such claims since January 1991 is not available in the format requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, it may be helpful if I set out such information as is available below.

Information on Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit—Prescribed Disease new awards is only available from October 1992, prior to this date new awards were not identified separately. In the period October 1992 to June 1993 there were 3,354 new awards. The information is based on a 100 per cent. count of the number of new awards of Disablement Benefit in benefit offices and is subject to amendment.

Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit—Prescribed Disease new claims for the same period were 35,324. However some claims made during this period will not have been assessed yet and therefore the figures are not directly comparable. The information is again based on a 100 per cent. count of claims received in benefit offices and is subject to amendment.

I hope you find this information helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sweeteners

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will publish the annual review of the markets for intense and bulk sweeteners as considered by the Food Advisory Committee in November 1992.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: This would not be appropriate since the commercially sensitive data for this review were obtained on assurances of confidentiality. However, some information on the development of the United Kingdom market in recent years has been made available by my Department in food surveillance paper No. 37 "Dietary Intake of Food Additives in the UK" and in papers presented by my officials in the course of scientific proceedings.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals her Majesty's Government intend to put forward at the convention of contracting parties on the sea disposal of wastes, to be held in London on 8 to 12 November, in regard to the permanent ban on disposal of radioactive wastes at sea.

Mr. Jack: Any proposals the United Kingdom may make to the 16th consultative meeting of the London convention 1972 on the sea disposal of radioactive wastes will be made in the light of discussions at that meeting on the final report of the convention's intergovernmental panel of experts on radioactive waste disposal at sea (IGPRAD).

Lobster Creels

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on damage done to lobster creels by seals.

Mr. Jack: I am not aware of any proven instances of damage to lobster creels by seals. If the hon. Member has any such evidence I would be glad to receive it.

Animal Transport

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will support the German proposal in the Council of Agricultural Ministers working group that an overall limit be placed on the journey time of animals being transported for slaughter.

Mr. Soames: In submitting proposals for further rules to protect animals in transport, the Commission drew attention to the difficulties of enforcing overall journey limits for particular categories of animals. In the negotiations we are seeking strong and enforceable welfare safeguards for all types of animals, including appropriate feeding and watering intervals, based on the high standards which we are applying in this country.

Coppice Schemes

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has for supporting short-term coppice schemes for alternative fuels; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: Short-rotation coppice has the potential to become an important alternative crop as a source of renewable energy. The Government are supporting it already. Short-rotation coppice is eligible for establishment grants of between £975 and £1,575 per hectare under the woodland grant scheme and for the better land supplement of £600 per hectare except when grown on land under the arable area payments scheme.

We have, however, secured agreement in Brussels that short-rotation coppice can be grown on non-rotational set-aside land, where it will be eligible for annual set-aside payments of around £320 per hectare in England from 1994. We are pressing for changes to facilitate its establishment on set-aside land. Electricity generated from short-rotation coppice will be able to benefit from the provisions of the third Non-Fossil Fuel Obligation Renewables Order, announced by my hon. Friend the Minister for Energy on 21 July 1993, and the Government are funding work on the growing of short-rotation coppice and its conversion to energy.

Set Aside

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make it her policy to include trees in set-aside schemes; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: We have been pressing for the EC rules of the arable area payments scheme to be amended to enable land which is taken out of production under forestry schemes to count against set-aside. My right hon. Friend the Minister raised this most recently at the Council of Agriculture Ministers this week, and we will continue to argue in favour of establishing this important link between set-aside and forestry.

Seed and Plant Breeders

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the future of farm-sowed seeds, royalties, older United Kingdom seed varieties and plant breeders' rights for the next five years.

Mr. Jack: I touched on most of these issues in my scrutiny debate speech on EC plant variety rights on June 23 this year—Official Report of European Standing Committee A of 23 June 1993. In particular, we are anxious to promote a healthy and competitive United Kingdom plant breeding industry which will provide farmers with a flow of new, improved plant varieties. We are therefore anxious to see a Community solution to the farm-sowed question which balances the breeders' and the farmers' interests and will provide breeders with the necessary funding to develop new varieties. We fully support the introduction of Community plant variety rights which will not only simplify the process of obtaining protection for new plant varieties across the whole EC, but will also propose some controls on farm-sowed seed. This aspect is under debate at the moment. We intend to ratify the revised UPOV convention at the earliest opportunity to provide breeders with the increased protection this affords. We are also pressing the Community to reduce the regulation of traditional vegetable varieties used by the amateur gardener.

Brucellosis

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how long it took to discover the link between the Cheshire and Anglesey brucellosis infected herds; what was the reason for the time taken; and if she will make a statement on difficulties which may have arisen in the training exercise to obtain comprehensive information as early as possible on livestock movements affecting the herd where the outbreak was first discovered.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Brucellosis was officially confirmed on a farm in Anglesey on 1 October on the basis of preliminary laboratory tests completed on 30 September. Also on 30 September the herd in Cheshire was restricted and testing set in hand. This is normal procedure and there was no delay nor particular difficulty in tracing the animals concerned.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information she has on the original source of the recent outbreak of brucellosis; and what assessment has been made of whether it is likely to have been imported from overseas.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Some of the cattle now affected with brucellosis were imported. Investigations are under way to determine the source of infection and it would be premature to speculate at this stage. The last confirmed case of brucellosis in Great Britain was in 1990.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the recent outbreaks of brucellosis in herds in Anglesey and Cheshire.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: On 1 October brucellosis was confirmed in a dairy herd on a farm in Anglesey. All animals in that herd were slaughtered by 5 October with compensation. All the cattle which had left that herd since 26 June are being traced and slaughtered.

All the animals which came on to the premises since 26 June have been traced back to the place of origin and testing undertaken there. This has shown a further three positive reactors to brucellosis in a herd in Cheshire. These three animals have been slaughtered. All other animals on these premises have been tested and are negative at this time but the herd remains under restriction and will be retested in due course. We are currently tracing all the animals, over 500 on 130 premises, which have left these premises since 17 June and the animals which were in contact with the three reactors before they came on to the premises. Further action may be necessary as the investigations continue.

Levies and Refunds

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the amounts in pounds sterling paid in the EC for (a) import levies and (b) export refunds since 1987 by product up to the latest available date; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The following table provides details of EC expenditure on export refunds by product, and the total amount of agricultural import levies, from 1987 to 1992. No breakdown by product is available for the agricultural import levies.

Beef Premium Scheme

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has had regarding the administration of the beef special premium scheme.

Mr. Jack: I have received correspondence from hon. Members and others: representations have declined as the new arrangements have become more familiar to the livestock industry.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans she has to review the beef special premium scheme to make it simpler to operate, fairer to rearers and finishers without distorting the market and capable of securing the existing compensation for reduced intervention support;

(2) what discussion she has had regarding the National Farmers Union proposals to simplify and improve the beef special premium scheme; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: My officials have had two meetings with representatives of the livestock industry, including the National Farmers Union, to review the beef special premium scheme. We are continuing to examine ways of simplifying the scheme in consultation with the industry within the constraints of the European Community legislation.

Arable Area Payments

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the number of applications in each country in England under (a) the main arable area payments scheme and (b) the simplified scheme in 1993; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: A total of 27,705 applications were made under the main arable area payments scheme and 18,789 applications under the simplified scheme in England. Because applicants had to submit a single area aid application in respect of all their land, some applications will cover a number of holdings which may be situated in more than one county. In such cases the application will be linked to the county in which the applicant's main holding is situated. I will publish information on this basis as soon as it is available.

Export Refunds

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the amounts in pounds sterling paid out in the United Kingdom on export refunds in each of the last six years by product; what were the amounts exported in each case; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Responsibility for this matter is delegated to the Intervention Board Executive Agency and I have asked the chief executive to reply to the hon. Gentleman direct.

Letter to Mr. Eric Martlew from Guy Stapleton, dated 25 October 1993:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your priority written Parliamentary Question tabled for answer on 25 October 1993:

> To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, if she will list the amounts in pounds sterling paid out in the United Kingdom on export refunds in each of the last six years by product, and what were the amounts; and if she will make a statement.

The export refunds paid out in the United Kingdom and quantities exported in respect of those refunds paid are detailed in the attached schedule. The figures have been obtained from the EAGGF Accounts, for the last six available years, which are submitted to the EC Commission on an annual basis to support the funding claim.

I am sending a copy of this letter to the House of Commons Library and the Public Information Office.

Forestry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what contribution the United Kingdom has made to the steering committee of the joint Food and Agriculture Organisation/Economic Commission for Europe/International Labour Organisation committee on forest technology, training and management in 1993.

Sir Hector Monro: I have been asked to reply.

The Forestry Commission has been an active participant in the work of the joint committee on forest technology, management and training, although the United Kingdom is not currently represented on the steering committee. The objectives and operation of the joint committee are being reviewed at present by the parent bodies, including the European Forestry Commission of the Food and Agriculture Organisation, one of whose vice-chairmen is an official of the British Forestry Commission.

DEFENCE

Gibraltar

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information Her Majesty's Government have been given since 1963 by the French authorities on the degree of radioactive contamination suffered by British citizens resident in Gibraltar.

Mr. Aitken: None. I am not aware of any such contamination that would warrant investigation.

French Nuclear Tests

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ask his French counterpart for information provided by the French nuclear authorities under article 34 of the Euratom treaty since 1963 in connection with French atmospheric nuclear tests in Reganne, Algeria.

Mr. Aitken: No. Article 34 of the Euratom treaty does not apply to military activities.

Inhumane Weapons

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to ratify the 1981 inhumane weapons convention.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office gave to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 22 October, Official Report, column 371.

Tornado Collision

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Tornado aircraft involved in the mid-air collision over Cumbria on 23 June was the same aircraft that overflew the village of Clayton, near Doncaster, South Yorkshire during its sortie.

Mr. Hanley: The Tornado involved in the mid-air collision was part of a two-aircraft formation; neither aircraft passed near the village of Clayton. Their route took them some 40 nautical miles north of Clayton, on their westbound heading towards Cumbria.

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many operational low-flying sorties were authorised in (a) the northern Scotland tactical training area, and (b) the central Wales tactical training area in each month from (i) January 1979 to December 1987, (ii) November and December 1990 and (iii) from May 1992 to the latest date available.

Mr. Hanley: Figures for operational low-flying sorties are not available. The numbers of operational low-flying movements authorised into the northern Scotland and central Wales tactical training areas in each month during the periods requested are set out in the table. A breakdown by month is not available for 1979.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sources of weather data for individual low flying areas are available to the tactical booking cell, RAF West Drayton, for onward transmission to aircrews; and what changes have been made to the meteorological data collection facilities in low flying areas since 1979.

Mr. Hanley: The tactical booking cell, RAF West Drayton has no involvement in the transmission of weather data to aircrews. Before flying, aircrew receive a full and comprehensive meteorological briefing from the professional meteorological staff at their station. These staff have direct access to the facilities of the Meteorological Office at Bracknell.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-level training sorties were carried out by Royal Air Force V-bomber aircraft from Goose Bay, Labrador, in each year from 1963 to 1982.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost and effort.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the changes made to the weather minima for visual flight rules operations in the United Kingdom low flying system since 1979.

Mr. Hanley: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low flying sorties were booked in the United Kingdom low flying system by aircraft from RAF Germany in each month from January 1992 to the latest available date, broken down by aircraft type.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of sorties booked in the United Kingdom low flying system by aircraft from RAF Germany, which on 1 April 1993 was redesignated No. 2 Group RAF Strike Command, during the period from January 1992 to August 1993, the latest date for which data are available, are set out in the table.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum authorised altitude at which aircrew are trained to fly in (a) the tri-national Tornado training establishment and (b) each of the fast jet operational conversion units; and what changes have taken place in these authorised minima since 1985.

Mr. Hanley: The minimum authorised heights at which aircrew are permitted to fly are as follows:

(a) Tri-national Tornado Training Establishment—500 ft.
(b) Fast Jet Operational Conversion Units—250 ft.

The only change to have taken place in the authorised minima since 1985 occurred in 1991 when the authorised minimum height for all tri-national Tornado training establishment crews was raised from 250 ft to 500 ft.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the crew of the three Tornado F.3 aircraft of No. 29 squadron Royal Air Force which were involved in an unauthorised overflight of the community of Rigolet, Labrador, on 12 April, arrived at Canadian forces base Goose Bay.

Mr. Hanley: The aircrews of the aircraft concerned, which were staging through Canadian forces base Goose Bay en route to Alaska, arrived at Goose Bay on 12 April 1993. The incident occurred as they were approaching Goose Bay on their inward flight.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what warnings were given laterally and vertically to the low-flying military jet aircraft operating between approximately 2100 hours and 2130 hours on 10 August overflying the village of Clayton-with-Frickley, South Yorkshire, that there was a helicopter operating in the vicinity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: A number of Tornado aircraft from RAF Cottesmore conducted routine low-level training in the areas at about the times stated on 10 August. No military helicopters were booked to low fly in the area at the time, and no notification was received under the civil aircraft notification procedure or by other means of any civil aircraft activity.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates, nationality, number and type of aircraft, host air base, and host unit for all exchange visits by foreign air force units to the United Kingdom over the last five years; and what was the minimum authorised altitude for low flying by foreign aircrew involved in each of the exchange visits.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost and effort.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications took place between Royal Air Force officers and the Canadian authorities between February and June 1990 concerning changes in the radii by which RAF aircrew deployed to Goose Bay for low-level training were required to avoid hunting and fishing camps.

Mr. Hanley: The local files containing details of this exchange have since been destroyed and the information requested is therefore not available. Any changes in flying regulations resulting from the exchange would have been reflected in the appropriate operations directives issued by the Canadian authorities at Goose Bay at the time.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what disciplinary action was taken against the leader of the formation of Tornado F3 aircraft from No. 29 squadron Royal Air Force which was involved in an unauthorised overflight of the community of Rigolet, Labrador, on 12 April.

Mr. Hanley: Local action was taken against the individual concerned, but it is not our practice to give details of such action. Letters of apology were sent to the mayor of Rigolet by the leader of the formation and by the Officer Commanding No. 29 Squadron.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what numerical limits on US Air Force aircraft low flying in the United Kingdom have been agreed with the United States authorities since 1990 in order to accommodate increased low flying by aircraft from RAF Germany.

Mr. Hanley: A limit of 18,800 low flying sorties by Third United States Air Force aircraft in the United Kingdom low flying system was agreed for 1991 in order to provide leeway for increased low flying in the United Kingdom by aircraft from RAF Germany. Since then, Third United States Air Force low flying has reduced as a consequence of the withdrawal of aircraft from the United Kingdom and it has not been necessary to impose any specific ceiling on activity.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the numbers of low flying sorties, by each specified foreign air arm, in the United Kingdom low flying system for each month from January 1992 to the latest date available; and how many of the sorties for each air arm were authorised to minimum heights of (a) 250 ft, (b) 500 ft and (c) 1,000 ft or above.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of sorties flown by aircraft of foreign air forces in the United Kingdom low flying system in each month from January 1992 to September 1993, the latest date for which information is available, are shown in the table. This flying is carried out under reciprocal arrangements which permit RAF aircraft to fly at low level in the countries concerned. The figures exclude low flying by foreign aircraft based in the United Kingdom.

Information on authorised minimum heights could be provided only at disproportionate cost and effort. In general, sorties will not have been authorised below 500 ft or, in the case of German and Belgian aircraft, 1,000 ft.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the crew of the three Tornado F3 aircraft of No. 29 squadron Royal Air Force which were involved in an unauthorised overflight of the community of Rigolet, Labrador, on 12 April, had confirmed in writing prior to their flight that they had read and understood the Canadian forces base Goose Bay flying orders.

Mr. Hanley: The aircrew concerned had not read the Canadian Forces Goose Bay flying orders as they were not planning to operate out of Goose Bay other than for transit in and out of the air base, en route for Alaska.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the (a) recorded height and (b) aircraft type of the military fast jet aircraft that overflew the village of Clayton-with-Frickley in South Yorkshire at approximately 1359 hours on 22 September; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: A Tornado aircraft from RAF Cottesmore was conducting a routine low-level training sortie in the area at about the time stated on 22 September. We have no reason to believe the aircraft flew below the permitted height of 1000 ft.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the minimum authorised altitude for the flight by three Tornado F3 aircraft of No. 29 squadron Royal Air Force from Canadian forces base Goose Bay which overflew the community of Rigolet, Labrador, at approximately 2 pm on 12 April.

Mr. Hanley: 2000 ft.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many sorties by Royal Navy Sea Harrier aircraft in the United Kingdom low flying system at less than 250 ft were authorised in each year since 1979.

Mr. Hanley: The available statistics on operational low flying in the United Kingdom low-flying system do not distinguish between sorties flown by Royal Navy Sea Harrier aircraft and those flown by Royal Air Force Harrier aircraft. The Sea Harrier, however, carries out very little flying below 250 ft over land.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the crew of the three Tornado F3 aircraft of No. 29 squadron Royal Air Force which were involved in an unauthorised overflight of the community of Rigolet, Labrador, on 12 April received a briefing from Canadian forces personnel on the environmental restrictions in force for military flying from Goose Bay prior to their flight.

Mr. Hanley: The aircrews concerned did not receive a briefing from Canadian forces personnel before their flight, as the flight originated in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the required continuation training flying hours of Royal Air Force Tornado aircrew consisted of low altitude flying (a) before and (b) since 1991.

Mr. Hanley: Until very recently the Tornado continuation training syllabus has not specified any minimum requirement for low-flying training. The general principle which has applied and continues to do so is that aircrew should carry out the minimum necessary low flying consistent with acquiring and maintaining the necessary skills. This position did not change in 1991.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the bird strike incidents involving Royal Air Force fast jet aircraft operating from Canadian forces base Goose Bay since 1990, providing for each incident (a) the date, (b) the location, (c) the height and speed of the aircraft, (d) the species or type of bird involved and (e) the category of damage to the aircraft.

Mr. Hanley: There has been only one recorded bird strike since 1 January 1990. On 31 August 1993, a Tornado GR1 hit an unidentified bird species 130 nautical miles north west of the Goose Bay airfield. There was no damage to the aircraft, which was operating at 120 ft and 420 knots.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-level sorties have been conducted from Canadian forces base, Goose Bay during 1993 by Royal Air Force Tornado F3 aircraft; and if he will indicate the dates during which Tornado F3 aircraft were deployed at Goose Bay.

Mr. Hanley: Royal Air Force Tornado F3 aircraft carried out two low-level sorties at Goose Bay during 1993. These aircraft were deploying to Alaska, but staged through Goose Bay, and were there from 12 to 15 April.

Exercise Red Flag

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which RAF Tornado GR1 squadrons sent crews to participate in (a) the second two-week period and (b) the third two-week period of Exercise Red Flag 93-1; and where their pre-exercise work-up training was conducted in each case.

Mr. Hanley: No. 2 (Army Cooperation) Squadron sent crews to participate in the second two-week period of Exercise Red Flag 93-1, and carried out work-up training in the United Kingdom. No. 9 Squadron sent crews to participate in the third two-week period, and their work-up training was carried out at Goose Bay, Canada.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Tornado GR1 crews responsible for ferrying aircraft from Canadian forces base Goose Bay to Nellis air force base for Exercise Red Flag 93-1 in October 1992 also participated in the exercise; and where their pre-exercise work-up training was conducted.

Mr. Hanley: Yes. Pre-exercise work-up training was carried out at Goose Bay.

B52 Bombers (Near Miss)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has yet received a report from the US Air Force on the incident in which two of its B52 bombers on a NATO exercise narrowly avoided a civilian helicopter near Aberdeen on 7 September; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: An initial report has been received from the United States air force and the joint air miss section is currently investigating this incident. The joint air miss working group's final report will be published in due course.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Hanley: The information is not held in the form requested. We are, however, currently forecasting a sum of £2·27 billion for 1993-94 for the operating costs incurred in countries where there are significant numbers of permanently garrisoned United Kingdom military personnel. The comparable figure for 1992-93 is £2·34 billion and for 1991-92 £2·50 billion. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Conservative Party Conference

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total cost to his Department for arrangements arising from the 1993 Conservative party conference in Blackpool.

Mr. Hanley: In response to a routine request from the Lancashire police, a small number of specialist military personnel were deployed to assist the police in searching the conference area for explosive devices and on standby for potential bomb disposal tasks. No readily identifiable additional costs to the defence budget arose from this operation.

In addition, staff from Ministers' private offices visited Blackpool in order to deal with departmental work. Travel, subsistence and communications costs were incurred on defence votes.

Officers and Other Ranks Ratio

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the ratio of officers to other ranks in each of the three armed services in 1980 and 1992.

Mr. Hanley: The ratio of officers to other ranks in each of the three armed services in 1980 and 1992 were as follows:

	1 April 1980	1 April 1992
Royal Navy (including Royal Marines)	1:6·1	1:5·2
Army	1:8·3	1:7·4
Royal Air Force	1:5·1	1:4·7
All Services	1:6·6	1:5·9

Hercules Accident

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress being made in the investigation of the accident to Hercules XV193; what is the expected date of completion of the accident investigation; and what is the expected date of publication of the military aircraft accident summary.

Mr. Hanley: The board of inquiry has completed its investigation and the findings are now being considered. This process should be completed by late December. Publication of the military aircraft accident summary will follow shortly thereafter.

Shackleton Aircraft

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the Shackleton aircraft was first clear for carriage of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Hanley: The Shackleton maritime aircraft was first certified for carriage of American nuclear depth charges in the mid-1960s.

"Bridging for the 90s"

Mr. Couchman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the production order for the "Bridging for the 90s" equipment.

Mr. Aitken: I am pleased to announce that the "Bridging for the 90s" (BR90) production contract negotiations have concluded very satisfactorily. The production order was issued and accepted on 22 October 1993. The value of the order is approximately £140 million.

The BR90 family of bridges is planned to enter service between January 1996 and June 1997 as follows:

January 1996
General Support Bridge
November 1996
Close Support Bridge
May 1997
Two Span Bridge
June 1997
Long Span Bridge

BR90 will be deployed with Royal Engineer units in both Germany and the United Kingdom.

This order will secure up to 250 jobs at the prime contractor, Thompson Defence Projects in Wolverhampton, as well as 50 jobs at Unipower in Watford and Tipton and many more at the other sub-contractors.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Sour Gas

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what research his Department has carried out into the (a) toxicity and (b) inflammability of sour gas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: None.

Farm Incomes

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the (a) gross and (b) net farm income in Northern Ireland in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Ancram: The two measures of agricultural income published by the Department of Agriculture are net of all material and service input costs. The broader measure is total income from farming which gives the sum available to reward farmers, their spouses and family workers for their labour and enterprise and to provide a return on their own capital invested. The second, narrower, measure is farming income which is the sum available to reward only farmers and their spouses for their labour and enterprise and to provide a return on their own capital invested. Figures for the period 1983-92 are as follows:

£ million (current prices)

	Total income from farming	Farming income
1983	130·3	90·2
1984	163·5	122
1985	125·4	81
1986	106·9	61·1
1987	161	113·7
1988	184·1	136·3
1989	212·8	160·6
1990	155·3	103·3
1991	180·3	125
[1]1992	224·2	168·1

Land Ownership

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the Government's estimate of the acreage of land in Northern Ireland owned by foreign companies and trusts based (a) in the Republic of Ireland and (b) elsewhere outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Chief Electoral Officer

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the report of the Chief Electoral Officer for Northern Ireland for 1992-93.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The Chief Electoral Officer's report has been laid before Parliament today. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT

Environmental Action Fund

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the launch of the 1994 environmental action fund announced on 16 August.

Mr. Yeo: Since the launch of the environmental action fund for 1994, applications have now been received and are being assessed. I have asked the Civic Trust, which manages the local projects fund on behalf of the Department, to extend its remit to include the management of all new projects commissioned in 1994. The Department will continue to manage existing projects and strategic funding.

Warehouse Racking Systems

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the Government will take steps to implement the Wood committee's recommendation that warehouse racking systems in England be removed from the list of rateable appliances in the Plant and Machinery Order.

Mr. Curry: We are currently considering all the Wood committee's recommendations as part of the preparation for the 1995 rating revaluation.

Special Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 15 July, Official Report, columns 587-88 in respect of special waste, when he will have the information available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: Waste regulation authorities hold some of the information asked for, but we do not at present collect it centrally. We are, however, looking at ways of improving the coverage of our special waste statistics and are aiming to complete our studies and our consultations in the first half of 1994.

Drinking Water Provision

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions exist for the provision of drinking water in public places; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: Under section 14 of the Public Health Act 1925, local authorities may provide drinking fountains for public use in any convenient public place. With the consent of the local authority, any person may make similar provision. It is for each local authority to decide whether to provide such facilities, having regard to their own priorities and the availability of resources.

Water Disconnections

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps the Government are taking to ensure compliance with section 63(1) of the Water Industry Act 1991; and if he will list the number of disconnections notified to local authorities under this section, broken down by local authority district.

Mr. Yeo: Breaches of compliance should come to the attention of the local authority on which the water company has failed to serve, within the required period, notice of its failure to reconnect, in the time specified, the service pipe to a house which it has earlier disconnected. Numbers of disconnections notified to local authorities under section 63(1) of the Act, broken down by local authority district, are not available centrally.

The latest figures for domestic disconnections in the financial year 1992-93 in the area of each OFWAT customer service committee region is set out in the following table. Each entry covers one of the privatised water and sewerage undertakers, together with figures for the water supply companies operating within that area.

Region.	Number
Central	3,100
Eastern	926
North West	495
Northumbria	754
South West	300
Southern	4,800
Thames	3,665
Wales	2,448
Wessex	315
Yorkshire	1,833

EC Funds

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the London Boroughs Association on the campaign to win European Community structure funds for London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I have had no discussions with the London Boroughs Association on this matter.

Lead Pollution

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to prescribe pollution control standards for lead.

Mr. Yeo: The Government's long-standing policy is to reduce exposure to lead wherever it is practical to do so. This policy is currently implemented in a number of ways, including setting pollution control standards for lead in air, water, food and drinking water.

Minerals

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what plans he has to present safeguards for the environment through the revision of Mineral Planning Guidance 3; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he intends to publish the results of the consultation on the revision of MPG3; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will publish the names of organisations and individuals who have made representations regarding changes to MPG3.

Mr. Baldry: A list of those organisations that responded to my Department's initial consultation exercise on the effectiveness of MPG3 was placed in the Library of the House in June 1992. My right hon. and learned Friend the then Secretary of State announced on 25 March that we intended to proceed to consultation on revised planning guidelines which would reflect the Government's commitment to the protection of the environment. We will do this as soon as possible. The results of this consultation exercise will be published in due course.

Countryside Stewardship Scheme

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his answer of 20 July, Official Report, column 99, on the countryside stewardship scheme, what is the cost of the additional payments for open access.

Mr. Yeo: For agreements entered into in 1991 and 1992, expenditure in respect of open access sites under the countryside stewardship scheme is expected to be £565,700 in 1993-94.

Local Government

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the cost, to date, of the Local Government Commission's review of local government in England and the expected full cost of the completed review.

Mr. Baldry: The Local Government Commission incurred expenditure of £2·056 million in 1992-93. We are making available some £3·259 million to fund the Commission's activities in 1993-94 and have made provision of £3·300 million and £3·439 million for the two following years. These figures are being reviewed in the usual way as part of the public expenditure round.

Disabled Facilities Grant

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will exclude works pensions from income calculations for disabled facilities grant;

(2) if he will revise disabled facilities grant regulations to take account of average mortgage payments;

(3) if he will encourage the use of disabled facilities grant in cases where rehousing effectively and economically meets the needs of disabled people;

(4) what plans he has to amend disabled facilities grant regulations.

Sir George Young: The Department is currently reviewing options for change to the house renovation grant system in the light of responses to the consultation paper issued on 21 June. This review covers disabled facilities grants and will include the points raised by the hon. Member.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications for disabled facilities grant have been (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful, in each year since 1990.

Sir George Young: The number of successful applications for disabled facilities grants for England and for Wales is shown in table 2·19 of the publication "Housing and Construction Statistics—Part 2". Figures for the number of disabled facilities grants paid out for individual local authorities is shown in the publication "Local Housing Statistics". Copies of these publications are available in the Library.

The Department does not have any information about unsuccessful applications for the disabled facilities grant.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies have been undertaken to identify the number of disabled facilities grant claimants who have received financial assistance from local authority social services departments; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The Department is not aware of any such studies undertaken or of any planned for the future.

Private Tenants (Home Purchase)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce measures to enable private sector tenants to buy their homes; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: No.

Extending the right to buy to the private rented sector would discourage landlords from letting their property. The sale of privately owned property to sitting tenants is a matter for negotiation between landlord and tenant.

Council House Sales

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total value of receipts from council house sales, to date, resulting from tenants exercising their right to buy.

Sir George Young: Figures for receipts resulting from council tenants exercising their right to buy from local authorities are not separately collected by the Department. However, between the introduction of right to buy in 1980 and the end of June 1993, the total value of council dwelling sales to sitting tenants, net of discounts, is estimated to be £17·7 billion.

The number of sales to sitting tenants during this period was almost 1,240,000, and 92 per cent. of such sales resulted from tenants exercising their right to buy.

Water Meters

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many and which water companies have installed pre-payment meters in the last six months.

Mr. Yeo: I understand that four water companies have installed pre-payment meters in the last six months. The companies are as follows:

Bristol Water plc
Mid-Kent plc
North West water Ltd.
Severn Trent Water Ltd.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many reported instances of self-disconnections there have been in the pre-payment metering trial being undertaken by Severn Trent water authority.

Mr. Yeo: I understand that to date there have been 113 instances of self-disconnection in the pre-payment metering trial undertaken by Severn Trent Water Ltd. The majority were reconnected within 48 hours.

Lappel Bank

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has received from English Nature on whether the intertidal mud flats of Lappel bank on the Isle of Sheppey, Kent, qualify on scientific grounds for inclusion within the proposed Medway Estuary and Marshes special protection area and Ramsar site.

Mr. Yeo: English Nature has advised that Lappel bank is a good quality productive feeding and sheltering ground for a range of bird species and is an integral part of the Medway estuary and marshes potential special protection area. I understand that the area of Lappel bank is less than 1 per cent. of the proposed Medway SPA.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will reconsider his provisional intention to exclude Lappel bank from the Medway estuary and marshes special protection area following the judgment of the European Court of Justice in case C-355/90 relating to the Santona marshes in Spain.

Mr. Yeo: The Secretary of State is currently considering whether the Medway estuary and marshes should be designated as an SPA and whether Lappel bank should be included. The Santona marshes judgment is one of many factors which he will take into account before reaching his decision.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what account he has taken of the research into the hydrodynamic effects of port expansion in the rest of the estuary, carried out by the university of Hull and commissioned by English Nature; and if he will now consider the revocation of the extant planning permission on Lappel bank.

Mr. Yeo: The Secretary of State is currently considering whether the extant planning permission for the reclamation of 22 ha at Lappel bank should be revoked. The report on the "Medway Estuary Coastal Process and Conservation", produced by the Institute of Estuarine and Coastal Studies, is one of many factors which he will take into account before reaching his decision.

EC Habitats Directive

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date the EC habitats directive will come into force.

Mr. Yeo: Member states are required by 5 June to bring into force the laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with the EC habitats directive.

Lower Severn Estuary

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the completion of his consultations with English Nature, the Countryside Council for Wales and private landowners and others on the preparation of the lower Severn estuary proposed special protection area under the wild birds directive, 1979.

Mr. Yeo: The Government consider that co-operation with owners and occupiers is vital if wildlife habitats are to be protected. Detailed consultations are therefore conducted to ensure that any conflicts of interest are closely examined, together with the scientific evidence. The Severn estuary is included in the accelerated designation programme on which the Government are currently working. I am unable to say when consultations on this particular site will be completed.

Integrated Pollution Control

Sir Rhodes Boyson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes are to be made to the scheme of fees and charges for integrated pollution control operated by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution.

Mr. Yeo: Minor technical changes to the HMIP integrated pollution control fees and charges scheme 1993-94 take effect on 26 October 1993. They are necessary to ensure that the scheme fully reflects changes in the governing legislation made by the Environmental Protection (Prescribed Processes and Substances) (Amendment) (No. 2) Regulations 1993, SI 1993/2405, which come into operation on that date. Copies of the amendment to the scheme are being placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to abolish the client contribution payable under the Government's home energy efficiency scheme.

Mr. Yeo: I have received many representations on the client contribution payable under the home energy efficiency scheme. To meet concerns that this contribution may deter some people from applying for a grant to have their homes insulated, I will shortly be laying before Parliament proposals to amend the regulations governing HEES which would remove the requirement for a client contribution.

Housing, Lancashire

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of the housing investment programme bids his Department has authorised in respect of each local authority in Lancashire over the last three years in relation to their bid; and what is the cash figure.

Sir George Young [holding answer 22 October 1993]: The information requested is given in the table.

The levels of local authorities' bids for housing investment programme resources reflect, in part, the competition for these resources and therefore often exceed the amount of resources likely to be available.

Notes:

[1] Under the new capital finance system, the HIP allocation is an assessment of relative need for housing capital expenditure. Borrowing approval is conveyed by the single, all service, basic credit approval. The allocation figures are the housing annual capital guidelines plus specified capital grants, issued prior to the start of the financial year. These figures do not include any supplementary credit approvals issued during the year.

Hedgerows

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give (a) the number of agreements, (b) the amount of money spent and (c) the length of hedgerow affected in each county under the hedgerow incentive scheme in (i) 1992-93 and (ii) to date in 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Under the 411 agreements made in the first year of the scheme some 600km of hedgerow will be restored over a period of five years. The Countryside Commission is currently considering new bids for the 1993-94 round of agreements.

The information is not available in the form requested. Total spend in the financial years requested as at 25 October 1993 is set out on a regional basis. These figures do not include additional resources available under the scheme from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, which account for an approximate addition of 15 to 20 per cent.

Opencast Coal

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the outcome of the review of guidance to planning authorities on opencast coal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 25 October 1993]: I intend to publish draft revised planning guidelines for opencast coal for public consultation as soon as possible.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what assessment has been made by his Department in respect of new nuclear power stations of the risks of (a) turning out to be a poor performer, (b) major construction cost increases, (c) (i) retrofitting, (ii) power downrating and (iii) closure arising from the tightening of (1) safety standards, or (2) environmental standards resulting from a major accident or otherwise and (d) major increases in (i) spent fuel management, (ii) decommissioning and (iii) radioactive waste management costs;

(2) if he will make a statement on the strategic benefits of nuclear power which have been identified in his Department's nuclear review;

(3) what consideration his Department's nuclear review has given to assessing viability of new nuclear power stations to the delays and uncertainties in the development of a national radioactive waste repository; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what discount rate will be used in his Department's nuclear review in investment appraisal for new nuclear power stations;

(5) what are the results of his Department's nuclear review in respect of tests to determine whether new nuclear power stations are commercially viable;

(6) what consideration his Department's nuclear review has given in assessing the future security of nuclear power to the economic, social and political impacts of a major nuclear accident; and if he will make a statement;

(7) if he will list the (a) risks and (b) uncertainties associated with nuclear investment which have been identified as a result of the nuclear review; and what plans he has for determining who will be responsible for covering them;

(8) if he will list the options being considered in his Department's nuclear review for financing new nuclear power stations.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

It remains Government policy that Nuclear Electric plc will not be granted capital expenditure approval for any new nuclear stations pending the outcome of a review of the future prospects for nuclear power in the United Kingdom. Options for the scope and format of the review are currently under consideration within Government.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Second Church Estate Commissioner

Mr. Wallace: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners, what estimate has has made of the cost to the Church Commissioners in the last financial year in respect of his discharging his responsibilities in Parliament as Second Church Estate Commissioner.

Mr. Alison: There is no direct cost to the Church Commissioners in relation to my duties in Parliament as Second Church Estate Commissioner.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, as representing the Church Commissioners, what was the cost to the Church Commissioners of answering written and oral questions to the Second Church Estate Commissioner in the last two parliamentary Sessions and in the present Session, up to and including 27 July.

Mr. Alison: A total of 79 questions were answered between 1 October 1991 and 27 July this year, but it has not been the Commissioners' practice to keep a record of the cost.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Ecclesiastical Matters

Mr. Wallace: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what estimate he has made of the staffing costs incurred by House of Commons staff and officials in connections with work associated with the Ecclesiastical Committee or other parliamentary matters relating to the Church of England.

Mr. Beith: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Thurrock (Mr. Mackinlay) on 25 March, column 663. The total cost is of the order of £2,000 per annum.

TRANSPORT

British Rail Privatisation

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to involve non-metropolitan local authorities in the franchising of rail services following the privatisation of British Rail.

Mr. Freeman: We propose to incorporate in the Secretary of State's statutory guidance to the Franchising Director the following:

Outside PTE areas you should consult such representatives of local government as appear to you to be appropriate about the pattern of services and the quality of services to be provided through franchising. In your consultations you should seek to agree practical arrangements which will provide for effective mutual communication between local authorities and franchisees. You should also include within franchise agreements a requirement for franchisees to take reasonable steps to keep the local authorities for the areas served by their franchised services informed of significant intended changes to the pattern of franchised services. These arrangements must be implemented in such a way as to place the minimum burden on franchisees. I would expect local authorities to consult you before formally adopting plans and policies dealing with the role of passenger rail services in their areas.

Motor Rescue Services

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has yet concluded whether rights of access to motorway service areas similar to those currently enjoyed by the RAC and AA should be extended to other motor rescue services.

Mr. Key: My predecessor decided that the requirement on motorway service area operators to permit access at all times to the employees or agents of the AA or the RAC to carry out emergency repairs to members' vehicles should continue under the new regime announced on 6 August last year. I have now decided that similar rights should be extended to any repairer requested to carry out an emergency repair by the driver of a broken down or damaged vehicle.

Goods Vehicles

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a statement on the differences in safety regimes between operator licence exempted vehicles and licensed vehicles;

(2) if he will list by type the numbers of vehicles which are exempt from holding a goods vehicle operator's licence;

(3) what studies have been carried out to determine whether operator licence exempted vehicles are more or less likely to be involved in accidents than licensed vehicles;

(4) how many vehicles are exempted from goods operator licensing regulations.

Mr. Key: Applicants for operator licences must satisfy financial requirements and requirements of good repute and professional competence or fitness to operate. They must show that they have adequate maintenance arrangements, and operators of goods vehicles must also satisfy the licensing authorities that they have an environmentally acceptable operating centre.

Whether or not they are covered by operator licensing, all goods vehicles, with some minor exceptions, are subject to the same roadworthiness requirements, including annual roadworthiness tests and possible roadside enforcement checks. All goods vehicles, apart from certain specialised types, are also subject to drivers' hours and tachograph regulations, although drivers of vehicles which do not require an operator's licence are exempt from the need to keep records under domestic drivers' hours legislation.

The classes of vehicles exempt from goods operator licensing comprise vehicles not exceeding 3·5 tonnes; Crown vehicles; and those listed in schedule 5 of the Goods Vehicles (Operators' Licences, Qualifications and Fees) Regulation 1984, as amended. The main categories are:

- tractors when hauling agricultureal and certain other equipment;
- dual-purpose vehicles and their trailers;
- vehicles used between private premises and not exceeding 6 miles by road in any one week;
- funeral vehicles;
- police and fire brigade vehicles and ambulances;
- vehicles used for fire-fighting or rescue operations at mines;
- vehicles used for test or trial;
- vehicles used under a trade licence;
- United Kingdom and visiting forces vehicles;
- trailers used for road maintenance or construction;
- road rollers;
- Coastguard and Royal National Lifeboat Institution vehicles;
- vehicles with certain fixed equipment;
- local authority weights and measures vehicles;
- local authority civil defence vehicles;
- steam-propelled vehicles;
- tower wagons or trailers;
- vehicles used within aerodromes;
- electrically propelled vehicles;
- showman's goods vehicles and trailers;
- certain vehicles first used before 1 January 1977 with a gross weight exceeding 3·5 tonnes but not 3½ tons;
- vehicles used by a highway authority for weighbridge purposes;
- water, gas, electricity and telephone emergency vehicles;
- recovery vehicles;
- vehicles used for snow clearing or the distribution of grit, salt or other materials on icy roads;
- vehicles going to or from a test station.

We have no information on the number of vehicles exempted from operator licensing, nor am I aware of any studies on whether operator licence exempt vehicles are more or less likely to be involved in accidents than those within the operator licensing system.

Vocational Drivers

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on procedures available to vocational drivers in other member states of the European Community to appeal against the refusal of a licence on medical grounds.

Mr. Key: Our information on appeal arrangements elsewhere in the European Community is currently incomplete. I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of whether appeals against refusal of LGV/LPV licences which are medically resolved at the DVLA are receiving an adequate level of consideration, of numbers of vocational drivers proceeding to the final level of appeal at magistrates courts and of the costs to the individual vocational driver of pursuing an appeal to the magistrates courts.

Mr. Key: Notifications of appeals which are resolved at DVLA are considered by the agency's medical adviser and, if necessary, the legal adviser, who take account of any fresh medical evidence provided by the appellants or their doctors. Appellants are required to pay a small lodging fee plus the cost of their counsel or expert witnesses if used.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of whether representative numbers of appeals against DVLA medical decisions on LGV/LPV vocational drivers' licences are going to the magistrates courts; and whether sufficient advice is available to the courts on the medical issues involved.

Mr. Key: The number of appeals against medical decisions on LGV/PCV licences has remained fairly constant over recent years. From April 1992 to September 1993 DVLA's medical section handled 54,786 LGV/PCV applications/notifications. Of these 7,036 applicants/drivers were refused licences or had licences revoked. An intention to appeal against the decision was lodged by 257 individuals of which 15 proceeded to court.

The court is provided with a report from the DVLA medical adviser, who also attends the hearing and will provide clarification on the medical issues involved if required. Appellants are also free to provide their own medical experts.

Vehicle Operator Licensing

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list, for each traffic area, the number of goods vehicle operator licences revoked in 1990, 1991 and 1992; and what were the reasons in each case why the licences were revoked.

Mr. Key: The numbers of licences revoked are given in the "Annual Reports of the Licensing Authorities", copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library. The reasons for revocation in each case could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each traffic area the number and nature of objections and representations received against the issue of goods vehicle operator licences in 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Key: Information on objections and representations is published each year for the period 1 April to 31 March in the "Annual Reports of the Licensing Authorities", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many heavy goods vehicles exempt from goods vehicle operator licensing were involved in road traffic accidents in 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Key: The numbers of exempt vehicles involved in road traffic accidents is not available.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether emergency vehicles operated by public utility companies are exempt from goods vehicle operator licensing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: A vehicle being held ready for use in an emergency by an undertaking for the supply of water, electricity, gas or telephone service is listed as exempt from goods vehicle operator licensing in schedule 5 to the Goods Vehicles (Operators' Licences, Qualifications and Fees) Regulation 1984, as amended. We keep all exemptions under review.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the organisations and individuals who have responded to his consultation paper on the deregulation of goods vehicle-operator licensing.

Mr. Key: Comments were received from the following associations representing the interests of those in the transport industries:

Freight Transport Association
Road Haulage Association
Bus and Coach Council
Vehicle Builders and Repairs Association
British Association of Removers
National Farmers Union
United Kingdom Agricultural Supplies Trade Association Ltd.
Federation of Small Business
National Association of Waste Disposal Contractors
British Vehicle Rental and Leasing Association

Comments were received also from the:

Council on Tribunals
Transport Tribunal
Traffic Commissioners

There were in addition over 100 responses from individual operators, local authorities and others having an interest in the operator licensing provisions.

Rail Franchising Director

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to appoint the franchising director; and how rapidly he would expect him to enter into discussions with the potential lessors of rail rolling stock.

Mr. Freeman: The Franchising Director will be appointed shortly after Royal Assent to the Railways Bill. The Franchising Director-designate is already involved in discussions about the establishment of rolling stock leasing companies and will be able to enter into substantive discussions with potential lessors of rail rolling stock once he is formally appointed.

Buses

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the names and addresses of all bus companies which have been found guilty of operating vehicles which failed to meet the minimum requirements of maintenance standards; what assessment he has made of the operations of the vehicle inspectorate and traffic commissioners in this respect; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The names and addresses of the relevant bus companies are not readily available. The vehicle inspectorate and the traffic commissioners publish annual reports on their activities including the enforcement of maintenance standards. The Department maintains regular liaison with both the inspectorate and the traffic commissioners. An annual review is undertaken of the targets set for roadside checks and maintenance inspections of vehicles by the vehicle inspectorate.

Tobacco and Alcohol Imports

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to check for overloading of private vehicles returning from France importing tobacco and alcohol products for personal use.

Mr. Key: Privately operated light goods vehicles and minibuses are subject to weight checks by examiners from the vehicle inspectorate and local authorities and can be prohibited where they are found to be overloaded. Vehicles are checked at ports and other locations in the same way as are heavy commercial vehicles. Drivers can also be prosecuted for using a vehicle which is dangerously overloaded.

Accident, Sowerby Bridge

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what investigations have been carried out into the Sowerby bridge road traffic accident on 6 September.

Mr. Key: The lorry involved in the accident has been examined both by the police and by the vehicle inspectorate. I understand the operator of the vehicle is helping with further inquiries.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the heavy goods vehicle involved in the road traffic accident on 6 September at Sowerby bridge was (a) a motorway maintenance vehicle or (b) exempt from goods vehicle operator licensing.

Mr. Key: Neither. The vehicle was specified on a goods vehicle operator's licence.

"A Guide to Making Representations"

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list where, other than traffic area offices, the publication "A Guide to Making Representations" can be obtained.

Mr. Key: The guide is also available from the traffic area co-ordination division of the Department of Transport, Room P2/029B, 2 Marsham street, SW1P 3EB.

Traffic Area Network

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make a decision on the possibility of agency status for the traffic area network.

Mr. Key: We are currently examining the scope for applying next steps principles to the traffic area network. I hope to announce a decision soon.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the containers used to transport plutonium-contaminated materials from the Drigg nuclear disposal site to Sellafield meet current International Atomic Energy Agency regulations.

Mr. Freeman: No plutonium-contaminated materials have been moved from Drigg to Sellafield.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Officers

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the number of serving police officers in England and Wales who are ethnically Romanic and gipsy by origin.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This information is not collected.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the establishment number of police officers for each county in England and Wales; and what is the ratio of police officers to population for each county.

Mr. Charles Wardle: With one exception, the information requested can be found in the appendix to the annual report of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Constabulary 1992, a copy of which is in the Library.

Since December 1992 the formal establishment of Kent county constabulary has been increased by 40 posts, all for policing the channel tunnel. These posts are subject to reimbursement of full costs, by the tunnel operator. The establishment of the force is now 3,136 and the ratio of police to population 1:491.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish life expectancy tables for retired police officers; and whether such information was provided to and examined by the Sheehy inquiry.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No. Aggregate data from which such tables would be derived are not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Cautions

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the current guidelines on cautioning, with particular reference to the categories of offences and persons who receive cautions.

Mr. Maclean: The current guidance to the police on the use of cautioning is set out in Home Office Circular 59/1990, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. I am about to consult interested parties on the content of some supplementary guidance which I have decided that it is now necessary to issue.

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the latest available figures on cautioning; and what the figures were (a) 12 months ago and (b) two years ago.

Mr. Maclean: Information for the years 1990 to 1992, which is provisional, is given in the table. 1993 data will not be available until autumn 1994.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the highest award given in (a) Merseyside and (b) Liverpool by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board at the latest date.

Mr. Maclean: The board does not keep information on the payment of awards by locality.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of state for the Home Department what are his plans for putting the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board on a statutory basis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: There are no plans to make the present criminal injuries compensation scheme statutory since, as previously announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the then Home Secretary, the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr. Clarke), on 23 November 1992, column 457, it is to be replaced next year by a new scheme based on a tariff of awards. Details of the new scheme will be set out in a White Paper later in the year.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long is the average waiting time for the settling of a case with the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The board does not maintain statistics on the average time taken to deal with a case. However, paragraph 6 of the 28th annual report of the board (Cm 2122), a copy of which is held in the Library of the House, does provide some information about the time taken to resolve cases.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total amount awarded by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board at the latest date.

Mr. Maclean: Appendix A to the 28th annual report of the Board (Cm 2122), a copy of which is held in the Library of the House, shows that in the period 1 August 1964 to 31 March 1992 a total of £757,244,992 had been paid out in compensation. Since then provisional figures indicate that a further £224·78 million has been paid out in the 18 months ending 30 September 1993. That latter figure is, of course, subject to audit.

Young People (Custody)

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) 15 and 16-year-olds and (b) 17 to 21-year-olds were sentenced to custody in England and Wales in each of the last 12 months.

Mr. Maclean: Information for 1992, which is provisional, is given in the table. 1993 data will not be available until autumn 1994.

[1]Provisional

Ms Ruddock To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) of those 15-year-olds (a) remanded into custody and (b) sentenced to custody in 1992, how many faced charges of committing or attempting to commit the offences of (i) theft, (ii) handling, (iii) deception and fraud, (iv) burglary, (v) taking without consent, (vi) allowing to be carried, (vii) aggravated vehicle taking, (viii) motor vehicle interference, (ix) criminal damage, (x) common assault and actual bodily harm, (xi) sexual offences, (xii) other offences of violence against the person, (xiii) possession of drugs, (xiv) possession with intent to supply drugs or (xv) other offences; and how many of the 15-year-olds in each case were (1) male and (2) female;

(2) how many 15-year-olds (a) remanded into custody and (b) sentenced to custody in 1993 to the latest date available faced charges of committing or attempting to commit the offences of (i) theft, (ii) handling, (iii) deception and fraud, (iv) burglary, (v) taking without consent, (vi) allowing to be carried, (vii) aggravated vehicle taking, (viii) motor vehicle interference, (ix) criminal damage, (x) common assault and actual bodily harm, (xi) sexual offences, (xii) other offences of violence against the person, (xiii) possession of drugs, (xiv) possession with intent to supply drugs or (xv) other offences; and how many of the 15-year-olds in each case were (1) male and (2) female.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 19 October 1993]: The analysis requested of persons remanded is not available centrally because although some information on the use of remands during proceedings is collected, the amount of detail recorded is limited and does not identify separately every individual offence. Moreover the data which are collected are particularly subject to data quality problems.

Information for England and Wales in 1992, which is provisional showing the number of 15-year-olds sentenced to immediate custody by offence and sex is given in the table. 1993 data will not be available until the autumn of 1994.

West Yorkshire

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next intends to pay an official visit to West Yorkshire.

Mr. Howard: I intend to visit West Yorkshire when my diary permits.

Wrongful Convictions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action has been taken to date in investigating possible wrongful convictions in each of the cases of which notice has been given to him; and in those cases where a person has already been released, what compensation has been paid.

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

Prisoners (Court Transfers)

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for the Metropolitan police area, for the year to 30 June (a) the number of prison movements to and from courts, (b) the number of prisoner escapes from police and Prison Service custody in transit to and from courts, and from custody at court, (c) the number of deaths, including suicides, by prisoners at court or in transit to and from court, (d) the number of assaults on police and prison officers while escorting prisoners to and from courts and (e) the number of prisoners arriving at court more than one hour late.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is as follows:

(a) prison movements to and from magistrates courts—57,213.
(b) prisoner escapes—12 from police custody, 5 from Prison Service custody.
(c) deaths—1 suicide.
(d) assaults—56 police officers, 4 prison officers.
(e) Information on the number of prisoners arriving more than one hour late for court is not available centrally.

Rape

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each of the last five years and for the current year to date (a) the number of cases of (i) rape and (ii) attempted rape on males that have been reported and (b) the number of successful convictions that have ensued in (i) and (ii).

Mr. Maclean: The available information relates to the number of male offenders cautioned and convicted of acts of non-consensual buggery and is given in the table. Data for 1993 will not be available until autumn 1994.

Miscarriages of Justice

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when C3 division expects to complete its current investigations into alleged miscarriages of justice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: In each of the cases of alleged miscarriage of justice currently under consideration, we shall aim to reach a decision as quickly as possible. Some cases may take longer than others to decide, depending upon the nature of the representations and the extent of any police or other inquiries which may need to be made.

C3 Division

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are currently employed in his Department's C3 division; and if he will list each individual employee's qualifications.

Mr. Maclean: A total of 69 staff, of whom 22 are engaged in considering alleged miscarriages of justice, are currently employed in C3 division of the Home Office. All are administrative civil servants in grades up to and including grade 5, having a variety of backgrounds, experience and qualifications.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases C3 division are currently investigating in respect of alleged miscarriages of justice; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: On 30 September 1993 179 cases of alleged miscarriage of justice were under consideration in C3 division of the Home Office.

Mentally Disturbed Patients

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by regional health authority and by year for the last five years and the current year to date the number of cases reported of (a) unlawful sexual intercourse with (i) a male and (ii) a female who is a defective under the terms of the Sexual Offences Act 1956, section 7, as amended by the Mental Health Act 1959, section 127, (b) a (i) male and (ii) female member of staff of a hospital or mental nursing home having unlawful sexual intercourse with a patient under the terms of the Mental Health Act 1959, section 128(1)(a) and (c) a (i) male and (ii) female having unlawful sexual intercourse with a mentally disordered patient who is subject to care under the terms of the Mental Health Act 1959, section 128(i)(b); and how many successful convictions have ensued in each category listed.

Mr. Maclean: The readily available information for England and Wales is provided in the tables.

Information is available only for the numbers prosecuted and those cautioned or found guilty in the courts. These specific offences are not separately identified in the statistics of recorded crime. Statistics on courts proceedings are not available by regional health authority.

The Mental Health Act 1959 refers only to males who have unlawful sexual intercourse with females.

Drink Driving

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list significant changes in law, enforcement and sentencing relating to drink driving since 1979.

Mr. Maclean: The Transport Act 1981 introduced evidential breath testing in May 1983.

A "high risk offenders scheme" under which certain categories of drink-drive offenders must demonstrate that they are not alcohol dependent before their licences are restored to them was introduced in 1982 and extended in 1990.

A new offence of causing death by careless driving while under the influence of alcohol or drugs was introduced in July 1992 under the Road Traffic Act 1991 to strengthen the courts' powers to deal with those drink-drivers who kill. The maximum penalty for this offence was doubled to 10 years' imprisonment in August 1993.

The same 1991 Act also introduced an experimental scheme of rehabilitation courses for those convicted of drink-driving offences, designed to influence the attitudes of such offenders away from alcohol and driving.

The Department of Transport runs at least one major publicity campaign on a drink-drive theme each year and in many years there have been two such campaigns.

Taken together, these measures to which my hon. Friend made a significant contribution as Minister of State, have resulted in a reduction in the estimated number of drink-related fatalities on the roads from 1,550 in 1982 to 610 in 1992.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list as a ratio the number of drink-drive related deaths compared with the number of murder victims in each year from 1979.

Mr. Maclean: The available information on murder relates to the number of offences decided at court to be murder. Figures for the number of deaths in drink-drive accidents have been supplied by the Department of Transport. These figures, and the calculated ratios, are given in the following table.

Offences decided at court to be murder, fatalities in drink-drive accidents, and the ratio between them, 1979 to 1991
England and Wales

Year	(a) Offences decided at court to be murder	(b) Drink-drive fatalities	(b)/(a)
1979	160	1,640	10·25
1980	126	1,450	11·51
1981	148	1,420	9·59
1982	160	1,550	9·69
1983	152	1,110	7·30
1984	165	1,170	7·09
1985	167	1,040	6·23
1986	204	990	4·85
1987	198	900	4·55
1988	178	790	4·44
1989	183	810	4·43
1990	179	760	4·25
1991	[1]124	660	5·32

[1] At the time these statistics were compiled (September 1992), there were 204 court decisions pending on offences initially recorded in 1991. On past experience, about 65 further offences will eventually be decided at court to have been murder.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will estimate the number of crimes (a) excluding and (b) including drink driving in 1979 and in the latest year;

(2) if he will estimate the number of offences and the proportion detected in 1979 and in the latest available year.

Mr. Maclean: Drink driving is not a notifiable offence and does not form part of the recorded crime series. The available information relating to drink driving is on findings of guilt at all courts for driving or being in charge of a vehicle after consuming alcohol or taking drugs. There were 67,000 findings of guilt in 1979 and 103,800 in 1991, the latest available year.

The information relating to notifiable offences recorded and cleared up by the police is published for 1979 in tables 2.17 and 2.18 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1989" and, for 1992, in table 6 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin 9/93; copies of both publications are available in the Library.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate the number of fatalities associated with drink driving in 1979 and the latest year.

Mr. Key: It is estimated that in 1992 around 610 people were killed in accidents where a driver or rider was over the legal limit compared with 1,640 in 1979. The way in which these figures were derived is explained in "Road Accidents Great Britain 1992".

West Midlands Police

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the West Midlands chief constable as to how many officers were disciplined as a result of the West Yorkshire inquiry; what were the offences involved; and what penalties were imposed.

Mr. Charles Wardle: No. These are matters for the chief constable of the West Midlands.

Police Reform

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has had from the Greater Manchester police authority in regard to police reform; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Since the White Paper on police reform was published in June, we have received representations from the Greater Manchester police authority in the form of a letter dated 23 September from the clerk to the police authority. A reply was sent on 7 October. The points raised in the letter are being taken into account as work on developing the proposals for police reform proceeds.

Anti-British National Party Demonstration

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost of (a) policing the anti-British National party demonstration in Woolwich and Bexleyheath on 16 October, (b) the overall additional police costs arising out of protecting the BNP and (c) what contribution the BNP will be asked to make towards these additional costs.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and noble Friend the Earl Ferrers will write to the hon. Member.

Police, Plumstead and Greenwich

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what representations he has received regarding the reduction in the number of police constables in the Plumstead division and the proposed further reduction before the end of this year; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will meet a deputation from the Greenwich police consultative committee to discuss their concerns about reduced policing levels in the Plumstead and Greenwich divisions.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and noble Friend the Earl Ferrers will write to the hon. Member.

Victim Support

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the level of funding for victim support in the current financial year; and which plan he has to increase this sum;

(2) what is the expected level of funding for victim support in 1994-95.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 21 October 1993]: Home Office grant aid to Victim Support in the current financial year will amount to £8·375 million, an increase of 15 per cent. on last year's grant of £7·26 million.

In November 1991, we informed Victim Support that the increase in funding it would be receiving over the next three years would be £7·3 million, £8·3 million and £8·6 million, respectively. We made it clear that it would need to devise budgets to operate within this level of funding and that there could be no expectation of further increases.

Details of Home Office funding for 1994-95 will be made known as soon as possible.

Young People (Remand)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many 15-year-old (a) males and (b) females, remanded into custody pending trial or sentence in 1993 to the latest date available, received custodial sentences at the conclusion of their cases;

(2) how many 15-year-old (a) males and (b) females, remanded into custody pending trial or sentence in 1992, received custodial sentences at the conclusion of their cases.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 19 October 1993]: In 1992, of the 376 persons aged 15, all of whom were male, received into Prison Service establishments on remand, about 120 were recorded as subsequently received under sentence. I regret that information for 1993 is not yet available.

EDUCATION

Chief Education Officer, Birmingham

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received concerning his remarks about the Birmingham chief education officer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patten: I have received a number of letters.

School Numbers

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on how many occasions since 1 January his Department has declined a local education authority application to reduce standard numbers.

Mr. Robin Squire: Since 1 January my right hon. Friend has declined 43 applications from LEAs to reduce school standard numbers. Over the same period he has approved reductions at 312 schools, of which 215 were approved without modification.

National Curriculum Council

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the costs of relocating and merging the National Curriculum Council and the Schools Examination and Assessment Council.

Mr. Robin Squire: The estimated total cost of establishing the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority and winding up the National Curriculum Council and School Examinations and Assessment Council is £4 million. There will be recurrent savings, estimated at £1 million a year, arising mainly from a reduction of almost 50 in the total number of staff employed and from giving up the NCC's premises in York.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many OFSTED reports on grant-maintained schools have been published;

(2) how many grant-maintained schools have received OFSTED inspections.

Mr. Robin Squire: The arrangements for inspecting schools under the Education (Schools) Act 1992 are a matter for OFSTED.

I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Member.

Primary School Teachers

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many comments he has received on his Department's draft circular on the initial training of primary school teachers; and how many expressed opposition to the circular.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has received about 4,000 responses to the draft circular on the initial training of primary school teachers, expressing a wide range of views on the various proposals it contains. My right hon. Friend intends to issue a substantive circular later this autumn which will take account of these responses.

Student Unions

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many comments he has received on his proposals for the reform of student unions; and how many have expressed their opposition to the proposals.

Mr. Boswell: Since my right hon. Friend announced his proposals for student union reform on 1 July, he has received some 1,265 written representations in response to the consultations on implementation. Comments have also been received in meetings and visits. Many comments have questioned particular aspects of the implementation of the reforms, while passing others in silence; others have similarly expressed support for particular points and for the principles which underlie the reforms.

Special Educational Needs

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the sum of money that the Further Education Funding Council spent on special educational needs in 1992-93, by local authority area.

Mr. Boswell: The Further Education Funding Council did not assume its responsibilities until 1 April 1993. In 1993-94 the council has allocated the bulk of the funding for provision for students with learning difficulties and disabilities as part of colleges' recurrent funding. The allocations represent broadly stable funding and reflect the council's commitment to providing continuity of provision for these students.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he intends to respond to the third report from the Education Select Committee of Session 1992-93 on "Meeting Special Educational Needs: Statements of Needs and Provision".

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he intends to respond to the third report from the Education Select Committee of Session 1992-93 on "Meeting Special Educational Needs: Statements of Needs and Provision".

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend today issued the Government's response to the report "Meeting Special Educational Needs: Statements of Needs and Provision" by the Select Committee on Education. The Government welcome the report. The provisions in the Education Act 1993, including the draft code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs, published today, will improve the framework for special education.

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he intends to consult about a draft code of practice on special educational needs under section 158 of the Education Act 1993.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend is today issuing for consultation a draft of the code of practice on the identification and assessment of children with special educational needs together with drafts of the regulations governing statutory assessments and statements. Copies will be placed in the Library. All maintained schools and local education authorities will have to have regard to the code, as will district health authorities and social services departments when they assist LEAs in their duties towards children with special educational needs. The consultation period will last until 14 January. Subject to the approval of Parliament, the code will come into effect in September 1994.

Schools Technology Initiative

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many applications he has received from businesses willing to participate in his schools technology initiative.

Mr. Robin Squire: Schools wishing to become technology colleges under the programe which the Government announced on 27 September will prepare a development plan backed by private sector sponsors. It is not for sponsors to apply direct to the Department for Education. Over 100 schools have already expressed interest in becoming technology colleges. Many of these have identified business sponsors and have begun to prepare their development plans. My right hon. Friend expects to announce in the new year the names of the first group of schools which will begin operating as technology colleges in September 1994.

Student Finance

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what plans he has to compensate students in higher education to take account of the imposition of VAT on fuel; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what estimate he has made of the impact on student incomes of the imposition of VAT on fuel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: It is my right hon. Friend's policy to review annually the overall level of mandatory support available to students through the basic grant and loan, in the light of forecast cost movements. The rates for the 1994-95 academic year will be announced in due course.

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the annual expenditure on discretionary awards for students attending further education college courses for each of the metropolitan authorities, for each financial year since 1990-91.

Mr. Boswell: Expenditure on discretionary awards for further education by metropolitan authorities for the academic years 1990-91 and 1991-92 is shown in the table. Data for later years are not yet available.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Forestry

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give, for each of those forest areas in Lincolnshire, Yorkshire and Humberside currently for sale to the private sector, details of (a) how rights of public access will be maintained, (b) how the environmental code for forestry enterprise will be enforced, (c) what charges she will allow for access, (d) how many people are currently employed on these forests, (e) what percentage it is of the Forestry Commission's land in each county (i) in 1980 and (ii) at present and (f) what were the criteria for selection for privatisation.

Mr. Jack: The areas of forest land currently being offered for sale by the Forestry Commission in Lincolnshire, Yorkshire and Humberside are shown in the table.

	Area (hectares)
Lincolnshire	[1]—
Yorkshire
Cannon Park Estate	194
Gateforth East	27
Gateforth West	47
Hayton Wood	51
Hazelhead Wood	94
Hazelwood	56
Howsham Wood	81
Humberside
Greenwickdale	44

a. Access to Forestry Commission woodlands can be either by means of public rights of way or by permission. Public rights of way will not be affected by a change of ownership. Arrangements for securing continued permissive public access to Forestry Commission woodlands after sale, through prior agreements entered into between the Commission and local authorities, were introduced in October 1991. Of the forest areas listed above, access agreements have been concluded under these arrangements for Gateforth East, Hayton Wood and Hazelwood, and an agreement is currently being negotiated for Hazelhead Wood.

b. The Environmental Code was drawn up specifically in relation to the management of the Commission's woodlands by its Forest Enterprise arm. Private woodland owners participating in the Woodland Grant Scheme are required to follow environmental guidelines published by the Forestry Commission. Grants are withheld if the guidelines are not followed.

c. No charges are allowed for public access under the agreements described at a. above.

d. These are small woodlands which do not have any staff assigned to them on a regular basis.

e. The areas of forest land currently for sale in Yorkshire amount to about 2 per cent. of the total woodland area managed by the Forestry Commission in the county, both in 1980 and in 1993. The one area for sale in Humberside represents about 8 per cent. of the total woodland area managed in 1980 and about 12 per cent. of the current area.

f. The main considerations to be taken into account in selecting properties for disposal were set out in 1981 by the then Secretary of State for Scotland in a letter to the Chairman of the Commission. That letter is reproduced at Appendix V to the Commission's 1981-82 Annual Report, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list all the pieces of Forestry Commission land in Yorkshire which have been sold in the last 10 years; and if she will list for each sale (a) the name of the forest or piece of land, (b) its area in acres, (c) the sale price, (d) the name and address of the purchaser and (e) whether the current owner provides a public right of access to the land.

Mr. Jack: Details of the areas of forest land sold by the Forestry Commission in each county, from the start of the disposals programme in July 1981 to December 1992, are given in lists held in the Library of the House. For all sales since June 1985 the commission has sought permission from the purchasers to disclose their names and the prices paid; where such permission has been given these details are included in the lists.

Information about the sale of other categories of land, such as agricultural land, houses and gardens, is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Government retain no direct interest in land which has been sold by the commission, so no official records have been collected on the provision of public access by the new owners. Public rights of way will not, however, be affected by a change of ownership.

Cereals

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current world price of (a) feed wheat and (b) milling wheat.

Mr. Jack: There is no single definition of what constitutes millling wheat or feed wheat—considerable quantities of miling wheat are used for feed—and prices and price differentials for wheat on world markets vary according to quality and other factors. Illustrative prices for 1992-93 and September 1993 are given in the table, but it should be noted that the current exceptionally wide divergence in prices reflects shortages of high quality wheat on world markets.

Wheat prices on world markets (£'000)

	Canadian Western Red Spring No. 1 (fob Vancouver)[1]	US Hard Red Winter (fob Gulf)[2]	EEC Standard Wheat (fob Rouen)[3]
1992-93	120	88	82
September 1993	164	87	57

[1]Canadian Western Red Spring No. 1 is a premium hard wheat with a protein content of 14 per cent. or above. Because of its high protein content and quality, it is used for premium breadmaking.

[2]US Hard Red Winter wheat also has a high protein content (12-13 per cent.) and is used for breadmaking.

[3]EEC Standard wheat has a lower protein content (9·5-10 per cent. on an equivalent moisture basis) and produces a softer flour. It is used for some types of bread and gluten can be added to improve the strength of the grist. Depending on supplies and prices, this wheat may also be used for animal feed.

Porcine Somatotropin

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information she has on the commercial availability of porcine somatotropin; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: Porcine somatotropin is not commercially available in the United Kingdom. I have no information on its commercial availability in other countries.

Chemical Pollution

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what policy proposals she has developed as a result of the findings and recommendations of the second joint annual report of the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment and the Committee on Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment.

Mr. Soames: So far as the responsibilities of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food are concerned, the safety assessments carried out by these committees form an essential basis for all policies related to the safety of food. In the case of the second joint annual report, the conclusions of the committees were reflected in the policies pursued in EC negotiations on the approval of specific food additives, in the clearance of food use of a novel fat, and in the withdrawal from sale of certain comfrey products.

Ostriches

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many consignments of ostriches have been flown in to the United Kingdom since January 1993; how many birds were involved; and how many birds died during transit.

Mr. Soames: Two consignments have been flown to the United Kingdom this year involving 107 ostriches. The Welfare of Animals during Transport Order 1992 and EC directive 91/628 require all such transport to comply with standards of care laid down by the International Air Transport Association. One ostrich died during the journey.

The Department is monitoring this trade and guidance has been prepared for the authorities in other countries and importers on the additional welfare standards to be observed during air transport.

Live Animal Imports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give an estimate of the annual number of live animals arriving in the United Kingdom illegally; what type of animals are involved; what countries are involved; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: Comprehensive information on live animals imported into the United Kingdom in contravention of animal health import legislation, which is enforced by local authorities, is not held centrally.

However, a number of importers are still failing to provide my Ministry with the required advance notification of their intention to import live animals and consignments have been imported with incorrect official health certification. In each case my Ministry has taken up the matter either with importer concerned or with the veterinary authorities in the exporting member state, as appropriate.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received concerning EC legislation to protect the welfare of live farm animals during transport.

Mr. Soames: During the last 12 months the Government have received over 100,000 pieces of correspondence, and 81 petitions representing approximately 27,000 signatures, concerning the welfare of animals during transport, of which the majority concern our trade with the Community. New proposals to amend directive 91/628, on the welfare of animals during transport, were sent to over 500 interested organisations and individuals for consultation this summer. We have received 86 replies.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the proportion of consignments of animals imported from other EC member states from which blood samples have been taken since January; and what were the equivalent proportions for each of the previous two years.

Mr. Soames: The state veterinary service is carrying out at places of destination a significant number of veterinary checks—which includes, if appropriate, the taking of samples for testing—on animals imported from other member states. The number of blood, or other, samples varies according to the species of animal being imported, the country of origin, and the perceived disease risk at the time of import, but precise figures cannot be published for operational reasons.

Beta-agonists

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the use of beta-agonists in food animals.

Mr. Soames: Beta-agonists are a group of drugs which have been used for a number of years in both human and veterinary medicines. In the United Kingdom there are five licensed veterinary medicines containing clenbuterol, a member of the family of beta-agonist drugs. These can be used legally only on prescription from a veterinary surgeon and are used in the treatment of respiratory ailments in cattle and horses and as an aid to cattle at the time of calving.

When fed to food-producing animals at high dosages, beta-agonists have been found to improve the lean content of the carcase. No beta-agonists have, however, been licensed in the United Kingdom or in any other member state for this purpose and any such use would therefore be illegal.

Surveillance for residues of beta-agonists in meat is carried out in Great Britain under the national surveillance scheme for residues in meat. Under this scheme randomly selected samples are collected from carcases at slaughterhouses and from live animals on farms. No beta-agonist positives have been identified from samples taken under this scheme since testing commenced in August 1989.

Separate surveillance arrangements directed at retail and wholesale premises, cover both imported and domestic supplies. Two clenbuterol positive samples were reported in 1992 (Official Report, 2 March 1993, column 78). Neither was likely to have posed any threat to human health, but it was not possible to establish whether the samples originated in Great Britain or elsewhere. No further positive samples have been reported in 1993 to date.

Because of the evidence of abuse of beta-agonists outside Great Britain, surveillance has been increased under both schemes this year. In particular, as a result of the recent reports in the media following the finding by Somerset county council of traces of clenbuterol in samples of pig liver pâté manufactured in Belgium, sampling of pâté has been increased. Under the retail animal products survey approximately 70 samples of pig liver pâté will have been collected from retail outlets across the United Kingdom by the end of November. The full results of this survey will be published as soon as all the confirmed results become available. The confirmed results of the analysis of the first 25 samples taken during September have, however, shown no evidence of contamination with clenbuterol.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the cost of the current financial year of her Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Jack: The Department has no overseas premises, nor does it have any personnel based overseas who are carrying out departmental functions. Staff on loan to work in the agriculture sections of British embassies are funded by the Foreign Office.

RAF Aston Down

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the nature of the work carried out by the wildlife unit based at Royal Air Force station Aston Down; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The wildlife unit carries out badger removal operations to control the spread of bovine tuberculosis from badgers to cattle and advises farmers who have experienced a breakdown on methods designed to reduce the risk of further cattle infection.

Peat

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make it her policy to promote the use of long-term set-aside for peat soil adjacent to raised bog habitats.

Mr. Jack: We have recently completed consultations on the introduction in England of a habitat scheme which will offer incentives to take selected agricultural land out of production for 20 years. There was general support for the priorities identified for this scheme, but land adjacent to raised bog habitats was not one of them. As a result, we do not plan to include such land in the pilot phase of the scheme.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to produce a manual for professional horticulturalists identifying the available peat-free products and giving advice on their use in horticulture.

Mr. Jack: Advice on the range and use of commercial products is a matter for the suppliers themselves. The Horticultural Development Council is, however, undertaking research on peat alternatives and plan a seminar on this subject on 1 December. Currently I am not planning to publish a manual on this matter.

Sewage Sludge Dump, Bristol Channel

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will place in the Library a map showing the boundaries of the sewage sludge dump in the Bristol channel.

Mr. Jack: All dumping of sewage sludge in the Bristol channel ceased in October 1992. The two designated disposal sites in use at that time were each circular areas of radius of 1 nautical mile centred at co-ordinates:

51 22.5N 03 56.0W (site LU050) and 51 24.5N 04 04.0W (site LU160).

A map showing these areas has been placed in the Library.

Stoke Park Wood

Mr. Milligan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to sell Stoke Park wood in Bishopstoke, Hampshire.

Mr. Jack: There are no plans to sell this wood.

Set-aside

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of land, and what amount in hectares, in rotational set-aside in 1993-94 she predicts will be put into non-rotational set-aside for the following year.

Mr. Jack: There has been considerable interest shown in non-rotational set-aside, but detailed figures will not be available until aid applications are submitted next year.

EC Surplus Cereals

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the price charged at the most recent date for surplus cereals from the EC sold on the world market; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: Export sales from intervention are made by weekly tender. In setting prices under these tenders, account is taken of factors such as the current market situation, demand for the grain concerned, the need to minimise intervention stocks and the need to obtain the best possible price.

Details of the most recent sales on to the world market from EC intervention stores are as follows:

Quantity (tonnes)	Price (ECU/tonne)	Member State
Wheat (21 October 1993)
192,867	71·23	Germany
72,446	73·10	France
Barley (14 October 1993)
138,254	55·58	Germany
34,540	57·72	France
Maize (21 October 1993)
27,700	91·02	France
Rye (21 October 1993)
7,131	52·12	Germany

In the current marketing year, no cereals have been exported on to the world market from United Kingdom intervention stocks.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what amounts of cereals are in storage in each of the 12 member states of the EC.

Mr. Jack: According to information supplied by the EC Commission, at 17 October 1993, the amounts of cereals in intervention in each member state are as follows:

Member state	Quantity (tonnes)
Belgium	252,211
Denmark	1,362,375
Germany	10,446,515
Greece	789,731
Spain	1,056,491
France	7,973,282
Ireland	235,792
Italy	2,459,03[illegible]
Luxembourg	2,20[illegible]
Netherlands	—
Portugal	4[illegible]
United Kingdo[illegible]	1,729,849

Dairy Intervention Stocks

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the level of intervention stocks held in the United Kingdom in the dairy sector at the last date for which figures are available.

Mr. Jack: On 16 October 1993 there were 9,236 tonnes of butter and 1,200 tonnes of skimmed milk powder in intervention stores in the United Kingdom. This is down on the stocks held on the same day last year when there were 9,941 tonnes of butter and 1,700 tonnes of skimmed milk powder in intervention stores.

Pig Slaughtering

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the number and percentage of pigs which have to be re-stunned at slaughter; and what steps she is taking to reduce this number and percentage.

Mr. Soames: There are no centrally held figures, although a MAFF-commissioned survey undertaken by Bristol university during the period 1989 to 1992 suggested that in the region of 13·5 per cent. of pigs were re-stunned. On 1 January this year two statutory codes of practice on the welfare of red meat animals at slaughter came into force and the requirement for supervision by official veterinary surgeons was extended to all licensed slaughterhouses. In response to the survey results we have recently issued new comprehensive guidance to pig slaughterhouse operators and enforcement authorities on the electrical stunning of pigs. In addition, veterinary officers from this Department have been asked to pay particular attention to pig stunning and slaughter practices during their monitoring visits, and to report on the standards observed.

Novel Foods and Processes

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the members of the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes indicating what sector or establishment each of them comes from.

Mr. Soames: The membership of the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes is listed, together with details of the establishment to which each member belongs.

Marine Mammals

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures she intends to introduce in order to meet the requirements to monitor and control incidental capture and killing of cetaceans as set out in the EC habitats and species directive article 12(4).

Mr. Jack: Article 12(4) of the EC habitats and species directive requires member states to establish a system to monitor the incidental capture and killing of certain animal species, including cetaceans. In anticipation of this obligation, in January 1992 the UK Fisheries Departments introduced a voluntary scheme for fishermen to report incidents involving the accidental capture of marine mammals. This scheme has not been successful and is currently being reconsidered. Separately, the Department of the Environment funds marine mammal strandings schemes for England and Wales and for Scotland through which post mortems on recovered carcases are carried out and particular stranding incidents investigated.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what powers her Ministry possesses to regulate fishing operations, including attaching conditions on the siting or the use of fishing nets, for the express purpose of conserving cetaceans.

Mr. Jack: The powers available to regulate fishing operations are in relation to sea fish as defined in the Sea Fish (Conservation) Act 1967. This definition does not include cetaceans. Obligations on the United Kingdom in relation to the incidental capture and killing of cetaceans are set out in the EC habitats and species directive.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many reports have been received from fishermen of incidental catches of marine mammals under her Ministry's voluntary monitoring scheme; what assessment she has made of the extent to which this is a true reflection of the scale of incidental catches around the United Kingdom coast; and if she will make a statement on the adequacy of this scheme.

Mr. Jack: Since the scheme was introduced by the United Kingdom Fisheries Departments in January 1992 six reports of incidental catches have been received. These involved five common porpoises, three common seals, one grey seal and one common dolphin. Two of the common seals and the dolphin survived and were released. The scheme has not been successful as returns clearly fall short of the number of strandings from all sources recorded by the Department of the Environment's marine strandings co-ordinators. The scheme is currently being reconsidered.

Weeds Act 1959

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has for the future of the Weeds Act 1959; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: After careful consideration by Agriculture Ministers of responses to consultations on the future of the Weeds Act we have decided to retain it. This was announced on 11 October by my noble Friend the Earl Howe.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Customs Searches

Mr. McFall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what records are kept on the ethnicity of persons entering the United Kingdom who are stopped and searched by Customs and Excise officials.

Sir John Cope: HM Customs and Excise record the ethnic grouping of persons who, on entry to the United Kingdom, are selected for search of their person.

Reading Material

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have to impose VAT on reading material in the Province.

Sir John Cope: It would be inappropriate for me to comment in advance of the Budget statement.

Income Tax

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 479, what is his most recent estimate of the number of taxpayers with gross and taxable incomes within specific income bands.

Mr. Dorrell: Latest estimates for 1993-94 are given in the table.

Thousands

	Number of taxpayers by range of Gross income[1]	Taxable income[2]
Under 5,000	2,100	8,200
5,000 to 10,000	7,800	6,800
10,000 to 15,000	6,100	4,400
15,000 to 20,000	3,900	2,400
20,000 to 25,000	2,000	1,200
25,000 to 30,000	1,100	630
30,000 to 40,000	940	590
40,000 to 50,000	340	210
50,000 to 70,000	250	180
70,000 to 80,000	60	40
over 80,000	170	140
Total taxpayers	24,800	24,800

[1] Gross income is defined as total income for income tax purposes. It excludes income from certain social security benefits and some investment income such as National Savings Certificates.

[2] Taxable income is defined as gross income for income tax purposes less those allowances and reliefs which are available at the taxpayer's marginal rate.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 683, what estimate he has made of the effect of increases on the lower rate band of tax, in 1994-95.

Mr. Dorrell: Estimated costs compared with the statutory indexation of allowances and with the lower rate band width of £3,000 announced in the March 1993 Budget are in the table.

Increase in the lower rate band £	Revenue cost in 1994-95 £ million	Revenue cost in a full year £ million	Additional numbers of taxpayers with a marginal rate of 20 per cent. Males (000s)	Females (000s)
100	80	100	60	80
500	400	500	310	450
1,000	780	980	710	860

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what would be the estimated cost if the higher rate of income tax were levied only on those earning over £45,000 per annum;

(2) what would be the estimated yield if the higher rate of tax were increased to 50 per cent. on those earning over £70,000 per annum.

Mr. Dorrell: Higher rate income tax is charged on taxable income—that is gross income for income tax purposes less those allowances and reliefs, which are available at the taxpayer's marginal rate—in excess of the basic rate limit.

At 1994-95 income levels the estimated full-year cost of increasing the basic rate limit to £45,000 would be £3.4 billion compared with statutory indexation. The yield from the introduction of a 50 per cent. rate on taxable incomes over £70,000 would be about £1·4 billion. These estimates do not allow for any behavioural effect that might result from such changes to the tax system and do not include capital gains tax.

VAT

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has had from British Airways and other airlines in regard to VAT on domestic air fares; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: A number of such representations have been received. It would be inappropriate for me to comment in advance of my right hon. and learned Friend's forthcoming Budget statement.

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the yield if VAT at 5 per cent. were levied on all items which are currently zero rated or exempt other than food.

Sir John Cope: The publication "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" shows the cost of not applying VAT at the standard rate to those goods currently zero rated or exempt. Although such a calculation may be misleading, adding together the figures for 1993-94 for all items in these groups other than food comes to £17·8 billion. It is not possible to calculate pro rata the figure for exempt goods but 5 per cent. on zero rated items other than food would be expected to raise £3·0 billion. These estimates take no account of behavioural changes.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment has been made of the revenue to be gained from imposing VAT on the footwear and clothing of women whose size enables their clothing to be free of VAT.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The law provides that articles designed as clothing or footwear for young children and not suitable for older persons are zero rated. Although certain adults may be able to purchase certain items of zero rated clothing for themselves, we do not believe the VAT receipts forgone from these purchases to be large.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what calculation he has made of the effective transfer of resources from families of children aged 10 to 16 years in the top clothing size quartile to families of children aged 10 to 16 years in the bottom clothing size quartile arising from the present VAT provisions.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 25 October 1993]: None, as there is not the data on which to base a reliable calculation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Matrix Churchill

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests for information on Government export control policy have been received from Lord Howe in connection with the Scott inquiry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Like other witnesses before the Scott inquiry, Lord Howe has been given access to papers relevant to his evidence by the Departments in which he held office.

Israel

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further steps he has taken to ascertain the whereabouts of the Israeli navigator captain Ron Arad.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We continue to raise the case of Ron Arad with those who might be able to help, but we have not obtained reliable information as to his whereabouts. We continue to believe that the best hope for a solution lies with the efforts of the United Nations.

Science Museum

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment he has made of whether the trustees of the science museum are able to meet their obligation under the National Heritage Act 1983 and to discharge the museum's mission statement including care and research of the national collection; if the proposed reduction in staff will leave in po ' an adequate number of curators, conservation staff and librarians; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sproat: Under the National Heritage Act 1983, the trustees of the science museum may generally promote the public's enjoyment and understanding of science and technology and of the development of those subjects, both by means of the board's collections and by such other means as they consider appropriate.

In considering future policy for the national museum of science and industry the trustees are naturally aware of their fiduciary responsibilities to the collections and the care and research that attaches to them. They are concerned to ensure that the buildings that house the museums and the public displays presented in them meet the museum's stated mission. The current plans are being implemented in the light of those concerns in order that the museum can improve what it delivers to its various publics and play its proper role in promoting the public understanding of the history and—in particular—the contemporary practice of science, technology, industry and medicine.

Works of Art (Export)

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the report of the reviewing committee on the export of works of art 1992-93 will be published.

Mr. Brooke: The reviewing committee's annual report 1992-93 has been published today, and copies have been laid before both Houses.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Mobile Phones

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the completion of his Department's project, "Interaction of the Body with Radio Emissions from Hand Held Transceivers".

Mr. McLoughlin: The project, "Interaction of the Body with Radio Emissions from Hand Held Transceivers", is due to complete in December 1995. On completion of the project, a document summarising the results will be made public. I will review the need for a statement at that time.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what level of capital investment is required for building nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: It remains Government policy that Nuclear Electric plc will not be granted capital expenditure approval for any new nuclear stations pending the outcome of a review of the future prospects for nuclear power in the United Kingdom. Options for the scope and format of that review are currently under consideration within Government.

Telecommunications

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to alter the wayleave regulations under the Telecommunications Act 1984 following privatisation to make them more suited to use by private companies laying fibre optic cables.

Mr. McLoughlin: Any operator licensed under the Telecommunications Act 1984 may negotiate wayleaves freely for the installation of any kind of apparatus. In addition, licensees granted powers under that Act's telecommunications code may, in certain circumstances, ask the court to decide the terms of a wayleave which has not been freely agreed by the landowner. I have no plans to alter these arrangements.

Pollution Control Equipment

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action has been undertaken by his Department to stimulate the development of pollution control equipment in industry in the United Kingdom following the Centre for Exporation of Science and Technology's report in 1991.

Mr. McLoughlin: Since the publication of the Centre for the Exploitation of Science and Technology's report in 1991, the DTI has created, in association with the Department of Environment, the joint environmental markets unit. The main aims of the unit are to increase United Kingdom firms' awareness of the huge and growing markets for environmental goods and services and to assist United Kingdom companies to exploit such opportunities. In addition to the creation of this unit, my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister launched, in March this year, the technology partnership initiative which aims to encourage appropriate environmental technology co-operation between United Kingdom business and developing countries. These two initiatives mean that the DTI is developing a close working relationship with United Kingdom manufacturers and suppliers in the environmental field.

Under a three-year environmental technology programme—DEMOS, ETIS and Euroenviron—grants amounting to £13·8 million have been made to a total of 77 projects involved with the development of innovative environmental technologies, techniques and processes, including pollution control equipment.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make representations to the Nuclear Installations Inspectorate and Nuclear Electric requiring them to state what accident scenarios are considered during the planning and carrying out of defuelling and decommissioning of nuclear reactors.

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate and Nuclear Electric plc. NE is required by nuclear site licence conditions to produce a safety case which demonstrates the safety of such activities to the HSE's NII. This includes an emergency plan to ensure that the public would be adequately protected in the unlikely event of an accident occurring during the decommissioning process.

Exports to China

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade to what extent the embargo on arms exports to China applies to the export of radar systems for use by military aircraft.

Mr. Needham: The terms of our arms embargo on China were announced to the House by my right hon. Friend the then Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 6 June 1989, Official Report, column 30. The embargo applies to the sale of weapons as well as any equipment that could be used for internal repression.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what communications his Department has had with the International Plutonium Management Study Committee of the Japanese Science and Technology Agency about the THORP contracts; and what documents have been provided by the committee on the management of Japanese-owned plutonium at Sellafield.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has frequent discussions with representatives of the Japanese Science and Technology Agency on a range of topics of mutual interest. The THORP contracts are a commercial matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc and its customers.

Electricity Imports

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer 19 July, Official Report, column 13, what are the latest monthly figures for the amount of electricity imported via the channel interconnector; and what are the prospects for the remainder of 1993 and the first half of 1994.

Mr. Eggar: Net imports across the interconnector in the five months from May to September 1993 were 6·75 TWh. As I said in my answer of 19 July, the future pattern of trade will depend on the operation of commercial contracts.

Coal Imports

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 28 June, Official Report, column 371, what are the latest monthly figures for coal imports; and what assessment he has made of the prospects for the remainder of 1993 and the first half of 1994.

Mr. Eggar: Import figures for 1993 are still subject to revision, but estimates for the period January to August 1993 suggest that imports in 1993 will be about 10 to 20 per cent. below imports in 1992.

Orkney Wind Turbine

Mr. Wallace: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the number of hours of operation and the electricity generated, in kilowatt hours, by the Orkney 3 MW wind turbine at Burgar hill in each year since 1988 and in 1993 to date.

Mr. Eggar: Operating records of the Orkney 3 MW wind turbine at Burgar hill are described in the table:

Year	Hours run	mKWh generated
1989	1,551	1·926
1990	1,103	1·549
1991	790	1·135
1992	3,662	5·152
1993	—	—

The machine has not operated in 1993 pending a decision on recommissioning it following completion of its experimental programme.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what estimate he has made of the costs of repairing the crack in the rotor in the Orkney 3 MW wind turbine discovered in December 1992; and when he expects the repairs to be completed;

(2) if he will make a statement on the future operational programme for the Orkney 3 MW wind turbine.

Mr. Eggar: The turbine has completed its experimental programme and therefore its future depends on its viability as a generator of electricity. This is under consideration and my Department and Scottish Hydro-Electric plc hope to make a statement before the end of the year. The cost of repairing and recommissioning would be in the region of £50,000.

Nuclear Review

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will announce the terms of reference of the 1994 nuclear review.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I made on Wednesday 20 October to the hon. Member for Clackmannan (Mr. O'Neill), Official Report, column 245.

Energy Review Panel

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will appoint members of the energy review panel, which he announced in the coal White Paper.

Mr. Eggar: I announced to the House on 20 October that I had asked Dr. Martin Holdgate to chair the energy advisory panel, and had written to other experts in the energy field asking them to serve as members. I will make an announcement of the full membership of the panel as soon as possible.

Post Office Pension Schemes

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what access to the funds and assets of the Post Office superannuation and Post Office pension schemes will be afforded private companies who take over ownership in the event of privatisation of Post Office Counters Ltd., Royal Mail Ltd. and Parcelforce Ltd.;

(2) what arrangements are planned in the event of the privatisation of Post Office Counters Ltd., Royal Mail Ltd., and Parcelforce Ltd., for any staff made redundant to take their current pension entitlements with them to alternative employment.

Mr McLoughlin: The Government are continuing their review into the future structure and organisation of the Post Office. Once the Government have decided on the future of the Post Office and its constituent businesses, they will be able to consider any implications for pensions in detail. Until then, these questions are hypothetical.

Post Office Chairman

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what criteria he judges the performance of the chairman of the Post Office; when he will next review his performance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 25 October 1993]: I look to the chairman of the Post Office to lead the board and the Post Office as a whole in providing high quality of service to its customers, efficiently and effectively, particularly measured against the financial and efficiency targets for the Post Office and its businesses set by Government as detailed in the Post Office annual report and accounts, and against targets agreed for the quality of service provided by the businesses.

Redirected Mail

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the percentage and actual increases in the charges for redirection of mail between 1991 and 1993, and what was the retail prices index increase over the equivalent period.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Charges for redirection of mail service have increased between 1991 and 1993 as follows:

Charge from:	1 month	3 months	12 months
16 September 1991	£3·50	£7·75	£18·75
13 September 1993	£6·00	£13·00	£30·00
Percentage increase	71·4	67·7	60·0

The retail price index increase between September 1991 and September 1993 was 5·4 per cent.

These increases bring the charges more closely into line with the costs of the mail redirection service and reflect the improvements recently made to these services.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Department and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 21 October 1993]: My Department has no record of any contact with Mr. Patrick Doyle.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

R. v. Morris, Reade and Woodwiss

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will place in the Library a copy of Mr. Justice Garland's judgment in the case of R. v. Morris, Reade and Woodwiss.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have arranged for a copy of Mr. Justice Garland's judgment to be placed in the Library.

WALES

Welsh Language Board

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what his estimate is of the budget for a full year of the Welsh Language Board.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The budget for 1993-94 for the advisory Welsh Language Board is £400,000. Decisions about future provision for the statutory Welsh Language Board will be made in the context of the current and subsequent public expenditure surveys and will take into account the change in status, duties, functions and remit of the board brought about by the Welsh Language Act 1993. I will announce my decisions in due course in the normal way.

Community Care Housing

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what level of increased capital funding has been granted to Tai Cymru to meet community care housing needs.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Housing needs of this type are provided for from within the gross resources available to Housing for Wales which for this financial year represent an increase of approximately 5 per cent. on 1992-93, excluding acquisition initiative funding.

Special Needs Housing

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of Tai Cymru funding was allocated towards approved development programmes of new housing for (a) special needs groups and (b) sheltered housing for elderly people in each year since 1990-91.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Capital funding for new special needs projects as a percentage of the total programme was as follows:

	Per cent
1990-91	9·3
1991-92	7·2
1992-93	4·4

Housing for Wales estimates that the figure for 1993-94 will be 8 per cent.

Separate figures for sheltered elderly allocation are not available for the period in question.

These figures are for new build only. They do not include the increasing number of homes being allocated to people in these groups from general needs provision.

Morriston Hospital, Swansea

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales by what date the new cardiac surgery centre will be completed at Morriston hospital, Swansea; and in what year 600 adult open-heart operations will be carried out there.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There is presently no estimated completion date, but the project board established to manage the development of cardiac services at Morriston hospital is drawing up a detailed timetable for the project.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many dedicated intensive care beds will be provided at the new cardiac surgery unit at Morriston hospital, Swansea.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My announcement on 21 June gave the overall capacity of the unit—600 open heart procedures a year. Clearly, appropriate intensive care facilities will be needed to support this level of activity, but the detailed planning under way has not yet reached a stage where I could indicate the precise services to be provided.

Dental Treatment

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library for each family health service authority area in Wales, the telephone number and contact name for use by any person not registered with a general dental practitioner who requires emergency dental treatment at night or during the weekends.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Non-registered patients requiring emergency treatment at night or at weekends should contact their nearest local dentist who may be willing to treat them. Alternatively, patients should contact their GP who will be able to provide pain relief and, where clinically necessary, refer the patient onwards to a local casualty department or appropriate hospital unit. Patients may also refer themselves to casualty departments.

Local Government Boundaries

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will ensure that the geographical boundaries of the proposed new unitary local authorities will be co-terminous with health authority and family health service authority boundaries.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government propose, in consultation with the health authorities and the family health service authorities, to review their boundaries so that, as far as possible, they do not cross those of the new unitary authorities.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the dates by which he will require hospital trusts in Wales to publish their annual reports.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Except in the first year of operation, the statutory annual public meeting of NHS trusts must be held on or before 30 September to present the audited accounts, annual report and any report on the accounts.

Diabetes

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in Wales are diabetics dependent on insulin injections; and in what form and at what level of disaggregation the information is held.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Health Planning Forum's protocol on physical and sensory disability, which was published by the Welsh Office in November 1991, estimated that there are between 50,000 and 60,000 diabetics in Wales, of whom 30 to 40 per cent. are dependent on insulin injections. This estimate drew on the Welsh Medical Committee's report on diabetes, published the same year.

Further information on the number of people with diabetes, their capacity to cope with everyday life and their views on the management of their care will be available in 1994 from a survey of the health of the people of Wales commissioned by the Welsh Office.

NHS Trusts and Fund Holders

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the current official listed business address of (a) each NHS hospital trust and (b) each general practitioner fund-holding practice in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The list of addresses is as follows.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had in relation to the treatment of VAT on new headquarters buildings to be owned by (a) training and enterprise councils, (b) the Welsh Development Agency or (c) training and enterprise councils and the Welsh Development Agency jointly; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: None. North East Wales training and enterprise council and the Welsh Development Agency have taken account of, inter alia, VAT requirements in preparing their proposals.

Urban Investment Grant

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 11 June, Official Report, columns 346-48, if he will list for each of the recipients of urban investment grant in Wales, both as regards Welsh Office direct payment and via Cardiff Bay development corporation, how much has been (a) agreed, and (b) paid in each quarter.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply my right hon. Friend gave him on 11 June and on 22 June at column 114.

Details of projects approved in each of the quarters are given at table 1—Welsh Office—and table 2—CBDC. Payments are made in arrears and calculated on the basis of certificated measured work and, where appropriate, site acquisition costs.

European Elections

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the advertising expenditure of his Department on the proposed new Euro-constituency boundaries in Wales; and if he will separately distinguish the sum spent on (a) television advertising and (b) newspaper advertising.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

The total sum spent on advertising the provisionally recommended boundaries for European parliamentary constituencies in Wales has so far been £5,336·23. This was all spent on newspaper advertising, in both English and Welsh in the following papers: Western Mail, Liverpool Daily Post, Evening Leader, Wrexham, Y Cymru.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the names and addresses of all the establishments in Wales where members of the public may view the boundaries of the proposed Euro-constituencies within Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

PRIME MINISTER

Overseas Journeys

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what has been the total cost to public funds of his journeys abroad since 9 April 1992.

The Prime Minister: The cost to public funds of my journeys abroad since 9 April 1992 is estimated to be £1,979,000.

Yasser Arafat

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to meet Mr. Yasser Arafat; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I hope to see Mr Arafat in London before the end of the year.

Commonwealth Heads of Government Meeting

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Cyprus.

The Prime Minister: With my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, I attended the meeting of the Commonwealth Heads of Government in Cyprus from 21 to 25 October. The final communiqué of the meeting and accompanying documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

The emphasis of the meeting was on the practical and constructive work of the Commonwealth. Agreement was reached on a range of important subjects. The "Limassol Statement on the Uruguay Round" expressed the Commonwealth's strong collective commitment to a comprehensive, equitable and balanced conclusion of the round by 15 December 1993. Commonwealth Heads decided to send a mission of Ministers from Barbados, Canada, Ghana, Malaysia and Mauritius to call on the GATT Director General in Geneva, the European Commission in Brussels and selected capitals to press for urgent progress in the trade talks. Nothing will do more to promote growth and jobs for developed and developing countries alike.

The meeting called for additional measures to reduce the debt burden of developing countries to sustainable levels and, in particular, for the full implementation of the Trinidad terms. These discussions confirmed me in the view that the neediest countries, with a trace record of economic reform, should be offered early and sufficient reduction on their whole stock of official debt. We will continue to press for this.

I secured strong support for my proposal that Commonwealth countries should strengthen their co-operation in combating the international menace of financial crime. There was agreement to work towards implementation of the 40 recommendations of the financial action task force set up in 1989 at G7 initiative. The United Kingdom is the current chairman. This means that Commonwealth countries will seek to adopt best international practice in this area. Law and Finance Ministers are following up in detail. This will also help Commonwealth work on drug abuse and proceeds of illicit trafficking. I encouraged all Commonwealth Governments not yet party to the relevant 1988 United Nations convention to do so as soon as possible and put in place enforcement mechanisms.

We agreed that the Commonwealth observer mission to South Africa was making an important contribution towards helping to stem the violence and should remain there until after the election next year. We also agreed that a Commonwealth group should observe the elections as part of a wider international presence to build confidence in the electoral process. We looked forward to welcoming South Africa back into the Commonwealth at the earliest possible opportunity after democratic elections, if South Africa decides to reapply for membership. In lifting all economic sanctions still in place, we endorsed the appeals by President de Klerk and Dr. Nelson Mandela for foreign investment in, and increased trade with, South Africa to help overcome the social and economic legacy of apartheid.

The 1991 Harare declaration on good governance has proved its worth. Since 1991, five out of the nine Commonwealth members without democratic government then have held multi-party elections. The Commonwealth has sent observer missions to each of these countries and has provided technical assistance to help the process. Much work on fundamental political values remains to be done. We recognised that in this field the Commonwealth has its particular vocation. We mandated the Secretary-General to give it a high priority.

In this context, the meeting considered Cameroon's application for Commonwealth membership. It agreed to welcome Cameroon to membership at our next meeting in 1995, on the condition that current efforts to establish a democratic system, consistent with the Harare Commonwealth declaration, were by then completed.

The meeting discussed a wide range of international political matters, including Bosnia and the Cyprus problem, and agreed that the Commonwealth action group on Cyprus should continue to monitor developments.

Commonwealth Heads accepted with pleasure the Canadian invitation extended to all governments to participate in the Commonwealth Games in Victoria, British Columbia during 18 to 28 August 1994. Commonwealth Heads also accepted with pleasure New Zealand's invitation to them to hold the next meeting of Commonwealth Heads of Government in 1995.

Lockerbie Bombing

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will obtain for the library of No. 10 Downing street a copy of the book, the details of which have been supplied to him, relating to the loss of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 19 October 1993]: No. A copy is already available in the Treasury library.

Mr. Patrick Doyle

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish a list of all meetings held and correspondence exchanged in the past 10 years between his Office and Mr. Patrick Doyle, now of AST Training; what was the nature of such meetings or correspondence; what plans he has to meet Mr. Patrick Doyle; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 October 1993]: I am unaware of any such contacts and have no plans to meet Mr. Doyle.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the sum in maintenance which should be paid by absent parents as a result of Child Support Agency assessments (a) in the agency's first year of operation and (b) in a full year on the assumption that the assessments are in operation at current levels.

Mr. Burt: It is estimated that the sum in maintenance paid by absent parents as a result of Child Support Agency assessments will be some £530 million in the agency's first year and £900 million in the long run.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the sum in maintenance payments resulting from Child Support Agency assessments which will go to the Treasury or which will benefit the Treasury by reducing income support payments in the agency's first year of operation; and what percentage this is of the total of maintenance payments assessed by the agency.

Mr. Burt: It is estimated that the savings to the taxpayer from reductions in income support payments in 1993-94 will be approximately £450 million. This represents 85 per cent. of the estimated total of the maintenance payments which will be made as a result of assessments.

Mr. Milligan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to trace absent parents who are now living elsewhere in the European Community and are not paying maintenance for their children.

Mr. Burt: The jurisdiction of the Child Support Agency does not extend beyond the United Kingdom. The Lord Chancellor's Department administers reciprocal enforcement agreements with many countries both inside and outside the European Community. These provisions allow for the enforcement of British court orders abroad and of foreign orders in the United Kingdom. The Government have no plans to change these arrangements.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review the operation of the Child Support Agency and in particular the financial formula for calculating the maintenance liabilities of absent parents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The new child support maintenance system is a major Government initiative and we are keeping its implementation under close scrutiny. We have no current plans for changes to the formula.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the sum that will be paid in maintenance as a result of Child Support Agency assessments in the agency's first year of operation which will be (a) retained by parents with care and (b) recovered through reduced benefit payments.

Mr. Burt: It is estimated that some £50 million of maintenance will be retained by parents with care and about £480 million will be recovered through reduced benefit payments.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the effect of the Child Support Agency calculations on the level of maintenance required from responsible fathers already paying maintenance.

Mr. Burt: It is estimated that average awards of maintenance by the Child Support Agency will be about £45 to £50 per week, compared with awards of £25 to £30 under the previous arrangements. This increase is in part due to the fact that many awards under the old system have run for years without review. Awards by the Child Support Agency will be reviewed annually.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to undertake a review of the Child Support Agency's workings.

Mr. Burt: The new child support maintenance system is a major Government initiative and we are keeping its implementation under close scrutiny. We have no current plans for change.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration he has given to the extent to which the new maintenance arrangements for child support (a) penalise second families in respect of absentee parents partners have their income taken into account and (b) undermine the clean break principle by disturbing previously agreed maintenance arrangements.

Mr. Burt: Assessment of child support maintenance is based on an absent parent's own income and essential expenditure. A partner's income is taken into account only to assess whether the partner can contribute towards the support of any child of the couple themselves; and whether the amount the absent parent has been assessed to pay under the maintenance formula should be reduced to avoid his second family's resources falling below a prescribed level.

The clean break principle is restricted to arrangements between couples who divorce and it has always been the case that there can be no clean break between parents and their children. The child support maintenance formula takes account of the practical consequences of a clean break settlement by allowing the absent parent's housing costs in his exempt income.

Independent Living Fund

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his Department will provide guidance to local authorities concerning the administration of the independent living fund, and the consequent responsibilities of local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The independent living (extension) fund and the independent living (1993) fund are independent and discretionary trust funds. I am informed by the director of the funds that detailed guidance on the operation of the independent living (1993) fund was issued to local authorities on 6 September 1993.

Lone Parents

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what percentage of the cases in which a maintenance assessment has been issued and the parent with care is in receipt of income support that parent no longer will be eligible for income support as the result of the payment of the assessed maintenance.

Mr. Burt: The cost of establishing the number of such cases would be disproportionately high.

However, it is estimated that in the long run about 30,000 lone parents will no longer be dependent on the taxpayer by requiring income support because they are receiving maintenance. This represents just under 10 per cent. of all lone parents expected to be receiving child support maintenance.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of his Department's current annual expenditure on single parents.

Mr. Burt: It is estimated that the total benefit expenditure on lone parents was £6·6 billion during 1992-93.

Maxwell Pensioners

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what measures his Department has taken to secure the return of Maxwell pension scheme funds from Credit Suisse to the Maxwell pensioners;

(2) what measures his Department has taken to secure the return of Maxwell pension scheme funds from Lehman Brothers to the Maxwell pensioners.

Mr. Hague: Responsibility for the recovery of missing Maxwell pension scheme assets rests with the trustees of the pension schemes and the joint liquidators of Bishopsgate Investment Management Ltd.

The trustees of the Maxwell Pensioners Trust have taken an initiative to promote an overall settlement to the many disputes relating to missing Maxwell pension scheme assets. The Government welcome this initiative, which is being taken forward on behalf of the trust by Sir Peter Webster, a retired High Court judge.

Maxwell pensions have been kept in payment while asset recovery work has continued, initially by means of Government emergency funding amounting to £2·5 million. Assistance is currently provided through loans to the pension schemes from the Maxwell Pensioners Trust.

Pensioners (Consumer Goods)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest available information on the level of ownership among pensioners of (a) motor cars, (b) central heating, (c) telephones, (d) televisions, (e) personal computers or word processors, (f) housing, (g) washing machines, (h) dishwashers and (i) refrigerators; what were the figures for 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The information requested is in the table.

Pensioner households—Ownership of goods

Item	1979 Per cent	1992 Per cent
Motor Cars	23	39
Central Heating	43	78
Telephones	50	90
Televisions	94	98
Personal Computers or word processors	n/a	1
Housing	43	57
Washing machines	56	75
Dishwashers	n/a	n/a
Refrigerators	84	99

Source: Family Expenditure Survey

Notes:

1. Ownership of dishwashers is not recorded in the Family Expenditure Survey.
2. Ownership of personal computers or word processors is not recorded for 1979.

Housing Benefit

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people received housing benefit in Tower Hamlets for the last three years, broken down into local authority tenants, housing association tenants and private tenants.

Mr. Burt: The latest available information is in the table.

Year	Local authority tenants	All private tenants (a+b)	Housing Association tenants (a)	Other private tenants (b)
1990	22,507	3,708	—	—
1991	23,581	4,410	—	—
1992	24,780	5,288	2,560	2,838

Notes:

1. The information covers benefit units, and not individuals, couples are counted as one unit.
2. Discrete information on the numbers of Housing Association Tenants is available only from 1992. Prior to that date, the data is included with that of all Private Tenants.
3. The source of the data is the Housing Benefit Management Information System quarterly caseload returns for February, May, August and November for 1990, 1991 and 1992.

VAT on Fuel

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the estimated cost of measures to relieve those in receipt of benefits from the effect of VAT on domestic fuel at (a) 17½ per cent., (b) 8 per cent. and (c) 5 per cent.

Mr. Burt: The costs of compensation will depend on the measures taken and the benefits covered. Extra help will be given to poorer pensioners and others on low incomes. An announcement will be made later in the autumn.

Among the points to be taken into account is the fact that domestic fuel prices, on average, have fallen by 17·5 per cent. in real terms since their peak in 1983.

Medical Reports

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will require medical reports, undertaken on behalf of his Department for the purposes of benefit claims, to be typewritten in the interests of clarity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The provision of medical reports for benefit purposes is a matter for Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 25 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions raised about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security, asking if he will require medical reports, undertaken on behalf of his Department for the purpose of benefit claims, to be typewritten in the interests of clarity.

I should explain that it is the responsibility of the Benefits Agency Medical Services (BAMS) to provide advice and written reports following medical examination to support the adjudication of benefit claims.

Whilst some reports are already typed, in response to the stated requirements of their customers, BAMS are now piloting various schemes in different parts of the country to determine the most cost-effective way of providing typed reports for all benefits. They are committed to implementing this improvement in the service they provide as soon as is practically possible.

Until the change can be implemented, all doctors working for BAMS continue to be reminded of the importance of writing clearly when they have to provide a handwritten report.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Disabilities Allowances

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for changes to the facilities available to right hon. and hon. Members in respect of the hotline service for the disability living allowance in Blackpool; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hague: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Andrew Miller, dated 25 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions raised about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security, asking if there are any plans for changes to the facilities available to honourable and right honourable Members in respect of the DLA hotline service.

The hotline continues to operate in Blackpool and achieve a 48 hour call back service. There are presently no plans to alter these facilities. However, as the performance for handling DLA claims is now being sustained at a high level, we will have to consider at some point whether there remains a need for the service in the same form to be maintained in the future. Members will be advised of any changes if, and when, we propose such changes.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

EMPLOYMENT

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The figures set out in the table show the Employment Department's costs for premises and personnel overseas in 1992-93 and in 1993-94 to date. Information for the financial years 1991-92, 1990-91 and 1989-90 is not readily available.

Year	Premises costs	Personnel costs
1992-93	—	£979,585
1993-94 (to end September)	—	£565,893

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what research has been undertaken by his Department on the job creation potential stemming from the development of energy efficiency programmes in the United Kingdom.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department has not undertaken any such research.

Jobs, Birmingham

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many new vacancies were notified to jobcentres in Birmingham in each of the last 12 months.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is given in the table and is also available from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Vacancies notified to Jobcentres covering Birmingham local authority district

Date	Number
October 1992	2,669
November 1992	3,134
December 1992	2,055
January 1993	1,556
February 1993	2,095
March 1993	2,041
April 1993	2,177
May 1993	2,433
June 1993	2,042
July 1993	2,309
August 1993	2,722
September 1993	2,390

Jobs, Lancashire

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many vacancies are currently available at jobcentres in Lancashire offering jobs at (a) £3·10 an hour or less and (b) £3·50 an hour or less.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M.E.G. Fogden to Mr. Gordon Prentice, dated 26 October 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to him about the number of vacancies currently available at Jobcentres in Lancashire offering jobs at (a) £3·10 an hour or less and (b) £3·50 an hour or less. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Unfortunately, I am unable to answer your question without disproportionate costs being incurred. There are 25 Jobcentres in Lancashire and it would be necessary for each to carry out a separate survey, as the information requested is not routinely collected. However, details have been obtained from a sample of four of the larger Jobcentres in the county namely Burnley, Blackpool North, Blackburn and Lancaster. On 22 October these offices held a total of 747 vacancies offering jobs at £3·50 an hour or less, including 511 offering £3·10 an hour or less. For each of the four offices some vacancies from adjacent offices have been included because of arrangements to circulate information within travel to work areas.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Farm Accidents

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the number of people killed in farm accidents in England and Wales in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Deaths occuring on farms cannot be separately identified. The fatal accidents in agriculture and horticulture reported to the enforcement authorities in England and Wales under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrencies Regulations 1985 are set out in the table.

Fatal Accidents in the Agriculture and Horticulture Industry[1] Reported to the Enforcement Authorities in England and Wales, 1987-88 to 1991-92

Year[2]	Employees[3]	Self employed	Members of Public[4]	Total
1987-88	18	24	7	49
1988-89	16	20	13	49
1989-90	14	21	11	46
1990-91	17	16	13	46
1991-92	12	24	2	38

[1] As defined by standard industrial classification 1980, class 01.
[2] Year commencing 1 April.
[3] Including trainees.
[4] Killed as a result of someone else's work activity.

Fireworks

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what standards are required of imported fireworks relative to those manufactured in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In deciding whether or not to grant an importation licence, the explosives inspectorate of the Health and Safety Executive applies the same standards to those required of domestically manufactured fireworks.

Sheltered Placements

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what considerations underlie the prohibition on local authorities which operate their own sheltered placement schemes from offering further placements where funding is available from Remploy Interwork.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Eric Illsley, dated 26 October 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to him about local authority Sheltered Placement Schemes (SPS). This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

There is nothing to prevent a local authority which acts both as a sponsor and a host organisation of SPS from also having Interwork placements within their organisation.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administrative Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the library of the House.

HEALTH

Health Service Reforms

12. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the latest report she has received from the Guy's and St. Thomas' national health service trust relating to health service reforms in London.

Dr. Mawhinney: Guy's and St. Thomas' hospital trust are currently exploring options for the siting of their services as required by "Making London Better". I expect to receive a report from the trust board by mid-November.

Hospital Treatment

13. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on progress on pacing of treatment in hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: Early evidence indicates that, overall, hospitals are managing their workload effectively over the year. Guidance was issued by the National Health Service Management Executive to ensure that monitoring systems are in place so that local managers can identify problems early and take action to maintain a balanced activity throughout the year.

GP Fund Holders

14. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will review the working of general practitioner fund holders; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The fund-holding scheme has been a remarkable success since its introduction in 1991. In England, one in four patients are benefiting from fund holders' services. From 1 April 1994, about one in three patients will benefit.

The purpose of the scheme is to deliver better care for patients, to achieve better value for money, and to give general practitioners more influence in the service provided to their patients. There is clear evidence to show that it succeeds on all three counts.

15. Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many smaller family doctor practices are planning to join the fund-holding scheme in April 1994 by joining together; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: More than 350 small practices have expressed an interest in joining the fund-holding scheme from April 1994 by joining together as groups to hold a fund. This is the largest cohort of small practices coming forward so far.

22. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners have expressed an interest in joining the fund-holding scheme in April 1994; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: More than 800 practices are preparing to join the scheme from April 1994. From that date about one in three of the population will be covered by a general practitioner fund holder.

26. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in extending the range of services which can be provided by general practitioner fund holders.

Dr. Mawhinney: From 1 April 1993 fund holders have been able to purchase community health services from their patients, and can receive payment from the fund for performing secondary care procedures at practice level. We keep the range of services for which fund holders can contract under constant review.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision exists (a) to assess whether a fund-holding general practitioner practice was over-funded in its initial year of operation and (b) to recover funds from a fund-holding practice that has been overfunded.

Dr. Mawhinney: Regional health authorities are responsible for setting fair budgets for general practitioner fundholders. If budgets are set incorrectly, for example because of data problems, regions agree with fund holders how to resolve the problem. Excessive surpluses can be returned at the end of the year and regions hold contingency reserves for cases where budgets are set too low.

Occupational Health

17. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients the national health service treated in 1990-91 and 1991-92 for (a) occupational health related diseases and (b) industrial accidents.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Barnet Health Authority

18. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the number of patients treated by the Barnet health authority in 1992-93 and 1982-83.

Mr. Sackville: Between 1982-83 and 1992-93 in-patient and out-patient activity both went up by approximately 5 per cent. to 42,906 and 226,317 respectively. Over the same period daycase activity trebled to 9,627.

Treatment in Barnet from April 1992 is provided by the Wellhouse Trust, comprising Barnet and Edgware hospitals. Previously the hospitals were managed by Barnet health authority.

Residential Care

19. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from representatives of residential care homes regarding assessments by local authorities.

Mr. Bowis: I have regular meetings with care home representatives at which we discuss various issues including local authority assessments.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to monitor the effect of the deregistration of residential care homes for vulnerable people upon service provision to their inhabitants.

Mr. Bowis: I am aware of a few homes in the drug and alcohol field which have been deregistered. These services have been and are continuing to be monitored by Goldsmith's college, whose first report was published on 28 July and a copy of which is available in the Library.

Domiciliary Care Agencies

20. Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will introduce legislation to require the registration and inspection of domiciliary care agencies.

Mr. Bowis: We have no plans to introduce such legislation.

National Health Service

21. Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to make the public aware of how they can help the national health service to provide a better service.

Dr. Mawhinney: Every opportunity is used to emphasise how important the public's help is to the national health service in providing a better service. When the patient's charter was launched two years ago it included a section on how patients could help the NHS. More recently the Department of Health has developed and issued throughout the NHS a "Help Us to Help You" information pack. This initiative will stimulate and encourage local campaigns.

23. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the gross domestic product was spent on the national health service in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what was the percentage in 1978.

Mr. Sackville: Total national health service expenditure in the United Kingdom was equivalent to 6·1 per cent. of gross domestic product in 1992-93, compared with 4·7 per cent. in 1978-79.

Harlow Wood Hospital

24. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the future plans for the Harlow Wood hospital, Nottinghamshire.

Mr. Sackville: No final decision has been made on the long-term future of the hospital. I understand that the North Nottinghamshire health authority is considering various options to secure orthopaedic services for local people.

Patients Charter

25. Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the patients charter.

Dr. Mawhinney: Since the patients charter came into effect in April 1992, patients throughout the national health service have seen the benefits in terms of better services. The patients charter has stimulated many innovative ideas and much good practice at local level and the efforts of the national health service should be applauded.

Health Information

27. Mr. Couchman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken to improve the provision of information on health matters for patients.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government are committed to improving the information available to patients and the public about the national health service and health matters. The patients charter emphasises that patients have a right to be given detailed information on local health services. The national freephone health information service was launched in January this year, providing a free and confidential service to patients on a wide range of health issues, including information on diseases, treatments, self-help groups and local services. The freephone number of HIS is 0800 66 55 44.

The Government provide £36 million per year for the funding of the Health Education Authority, which promotes a wide range of health education and advice, both directly to the public and through others. The Department also produces information on such areas as help with charges for prescriptions, optical and dental treatment and the costs of travel to hospital.

Care in the Community

28. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received about the role of voluntary groups in care in the community.

Mr. Bowis: We have received a variety of representations from different voluntary organisations. We meet regularly with many of them and we greatly value the contribution they make to the care of individuals whether in their own homes or in community-based residential establishments.

Mental Health Facilities

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in 1991-92 were retained in the hospital system under sections 2 or 3 of the Mental Health Act 1983 because (a) suitable accommodation outside the hospital was not available or (b) an alternative but less restrictive mental health facility was not available.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not collected centrally.

Child Care, Lambeth

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the delivery of child care services in the London borough of Lambeth; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: Following the social services inspectorate report of April 1992 into child protection services, Lambeth has been asked to provide regular reports on these services in the borough. The latest report covers the period up to 1 October 1993 and shows that, despite some work towards achieving improved standards in management and quality of services, there are continuing causes for concern, including an unacceptably high level of unallocated casework. Lambeth will be asked to send a further report by 1 March 1994. In addition, Lambeth is addressing recommendations in a recent social services inspectorate report on three of its children's homes.

Charitable Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she has offered or will offer district health authorities who now no longer manage patient services regarding the transfer of district charitable trust funds to hospitals for the benefit of patients.

Mr. Sackville: The administration of charitable funds is the responsibility of the trustees. We have given advice on the legal process required when trustees' responsibilities are transferred from health authorities to national health service trusts. The latest such advice (FDL(93)24) was issued in March 1993, and will be placed in the Library.

Offenders (Mental Disorders)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will reply to Dr. John Reed, principal medical officer at her Department to his recommendations made last November in respect of improvements to the treatment of offenders with mental disorders; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Member for Suffolk, South (Mr. Yeo) gave my hon. Friend the Member for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls) on 27 November 1992 at cols. 873-74.

We have endorsed the guiding principles of the joint Department of Health/Home Office review, which point in particular to services being provided, as far as is compatible with public safety, in more local and less institutional settings. In addition we have reaffirmed the policy that, wherever possible, mentally disordered offenders should be cared for and treated by health and social services rather than in the criminal justice system.

The implementation of these recommendations falls largely to the agencies concerned at local level. We have made services for mentally disordered offenders a first order priority for the national health service in 1994-95. This means that health authorities are required to work with personal social services and criminal justice agencies to develop strategic and purchasing plans for services for mentally disordered offenders, based on the recommendations of the interdepartmental review. Regional health authorities are currently carrying out an assessment of the need for these services which builds on an initial assessment last year.

We have increased central capital funding for medium secure psychiatric services from £3 million in 1991-92 to £17 million in 1992-93, and have made available a further £22 million in 1993-94. We have also made a total of £422,000 available in 1992-93 and 1993-94 for pump-priming of local multi-agency initiatives to help mentally disordered offenders. We have received many imaginative proposals and have so far allocated funds to 61 schemes. The Home Office has provided funds to assist the development of Court assessment and diversion schemes. At least 60 of these schemes are now operating in England, of which 26 are receiving central funding this year.

The committee which we set up to advise the Department of Health and the Home Office on action to follow up the review has been appointed and has held its first meeting. We fully recognise the importance of sustaining the development of these services and will take full account of the committee's advice in taking this forward.

Warner Report

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current situation in respect of the Warner report.

Mr. Bowis: Following publication of the report in December 1992, local authorities were asked to improve methods of recruitment and vetting of staff responsible for children in residential care. On 1 July this year, local authorities were asked to address other recommendations in the report and to submit progress returns to the Department. On 22 July I announced the membership and the terms of reference for the children's residential care support force in a reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Canterbury (Mr. Brazier) at columns 291-92.

Life Expectancy

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to institute standard and objective means to monitor healthy life expectancy among the population aged over 50 years.

Mr. Bowis: We have recently commissioned research to help us to measure healthy life expectancy more accurately and to identify the factors we need to target to increase healthy life expectancy among older people. The results will be available early next year.

Peripheral Nerve Damage

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will consider holding centrally information on the number of patients treated for peripheral nerve damage by (a) regional health authorities and (b) district health authorities; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Information is collected centrally in the hospital episode system on the number of episodes of in-patient treatment for peripheral nerve damage, as well as those where operations are carried out. The latest England and regional data are published in "Hospital Episode Statistics. Volume 1: Finished Consultant Episodes by diagnosis, operation and specialty, England: Financial year 1989-90", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Drug and Alcohol Services

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement outlining the outcome of her departmental review of drug and alcohol rehabilitation services.

Mr. Bowis: The report carried out for the Department by Goldsmith's college was published on 28 July. I issued a press statement at the time of publication and my hon. Friend the Minister for Health wrote to local authorities to draw their attention to matters raised in the report which required their further action. Copies of the press release (H93/896) and the report are available in the Library.

Tinnitus

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the current Government financial support to voluntary organisations dealing with tinnitus for the year 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: Under section 64 of the Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 the Government are providing £22,500 this year and for the next two financial years to the British Tinnitus Association.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list central Government's financial initiatives with regard to the treatment of tinnitus for the year 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: People suffering from tinnitus may receive treatment under normal service funding arrangements.

Child Immunisation

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she can provide a league table of childhood immunisation take-up rates in regional health authorities and local health authorities.

Mr. Sackville: The information can be found in table 7 of "Vaccination and immunisation 1991-92 Summary Information from Forms KC50, KC50A and KC51" produced by the Government Statistical Service. Copies of which are available in the Library.

Optometrists

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if an agreement has been reached with optometrists providing general ophthalmic services on their remuneration for the year beginning 1 April.

Dr. Mawhinney: Representatives of optometrists have been consulted about the national health service sight test fee and the fee for domiciliary visits. As yet no agreement has been reached about the level of fees for 1993-94.

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the relationship between the functions provided for optometrists and ophthalmic medical practitioners in respect of general ophthalmic services; and to what extent they are subject to the same terms of service.

Dr. Mawhinney: Optometrists and ophthalmic medical practitioners may be registered with a family health service authority to provide national health service sight tests under the general ophthalmic services. In this respect they are subject to the same terms of service.

Schizophrenics

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research her Department has undertaken into the number of schizophrenics killing (a) themselves and (b) others.

Mr. Bowis: In 1991 the Department established the confidential inquiry into homicides and suicides by mentally ill people being conducted by the Royal College of Psychiatrists. This aims to cover all homicides and suicides by people who are currently in contact with the mental health services or who have been in contact within the last 12 months. Information is collected in respect of the various diagnostic groups, including schizophrenia.

Long-term Medication

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the chronic medical disorders requiring long-term medication for which there is no exemption from the payment of prescription charges.

Dr. Mawhinney: Medical conditions which attract exemption from national health service prescription charges are listed in leaflet P11, copies of which are available in the Library. No other medical conditions confer this entitlement.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision has been made in the current financial year and each of the last four financial years for research into myalgic encephalomyelitis; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. The MRC has been funding a study at the Institute of Psychiatry for four years where researchers are attempting to find ways to help myalgic encephalomyelitis sufferers cope with their disease and regain their health. The estimated cost of this project is £91,000. The Department and the MRC are always willing to receive and consider soundly-based research proposals in competition with other applications. The Department also keeps in touch with research being funded by bodies such as the Linbury Trust.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current assessment of the number of people in England suffering from myalgic encephalomyelitis; and how that figure is obtained.

Mr. Sackville: We are currently awaiting an evaluation of data from existing studies which is being undertaken by the myalgic encephalomyelitis task force with funding from the Department. A draft report is being prepared for discussion in early 1994.

Diabetics

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are diabetics dependent on insulin injections; and in what form and at what level of disaggregation the information is held by her Department.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Syndrome

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has linking the incidence of Creutzfeldt-Jakob syndrome with transmission of a virus at dental surgeries.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Dentistry

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will investigate the consideration underlying the decision not to invite the General Dental Practitioners Association to attend the working group of the Dental Practice Board which prepared the publication, "Access to Information" held by the Dental Practice Board.

Dr. Mawhinney: Membership of the working group which considered access to information held by the Dental Practice Board was kept to a minimum to enable it to work effectively. The dental profession was represented by members from the General Dental Services Committee.

Child Supervision Orders

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many supervision orders with restriction requirements were made under provisions of the Children Act 1989 during each of the last two years for which figures are available.

Mr. Bowis: The Children Act 1989 came into force on 14 October 1991. Information is not yet available about the number of supervision orders with restriction requirements.

Ophthalmic Services

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria govern the settlement of the remuneration of contractors who provide general ophthalmic services; and what changes there have been in the criteria in 1993-94 relative to previous years.

Dr. Mawhinney: National health service sight test fees are determined by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, following consultation with the profession, in such a way as to ensure that there are adequate general ophthalmic services, of the right calibre. In doing this, regard is had to recruitment, retention and motivation factors, within the amount that can be afforded. These criteria have been used consistently for several years, including 1993-94.

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by what amount (a) optometrists and (b) ophthalmic medical practitioners providing general ophthalmic services are remunerated for their practice expenses.

Dr. Mawhinney: Optometrists are currently paid a fee of £12·75 for each national health service sight test they carry out, which covers both pay and expenses. These elements are not considered separately.

Ophthalmic medical practitioners are paid a fee of £10·15. This contains a pay element of £7·53 and an expenses element of £2·62.

NHS Management Executive

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the expenditure of the NHS Management Executive in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: Expenditure figures for the National Health Service Management Executive from 1990-91 onwards are as shown—figures are not available prior to 1990-91. Figures have not been adjusted for inflation and are not directly comparable from year to year because of organisational changes between the NHSME and the rest of the Department.

Year	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94 (Current allocation)
Running costs (£)	29,933,505	29,402,541	42,883,317	33,922,969
Capital (£)	339,000	483,712	511,745	6,415

Emergency Contraception Pill

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to investigate the deregulation and over-the-counter provision of the emergency contraception pill.

Mr. Sackville: The suggestion that emergency contraception should be available from pharmacies without a prescription was made in a recent article in the British Medical Journal on 18 September. The article and reactions to it are being studied in the Department.

Junior Doctors

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many junior doctors have been working over the new deal target of 83 hours after 1 April in each trust or directly managed unit and by region.

Dr. Mawhinney: The number of junior doctors and dentists in each region contracted for more than an average of 83 hours a week at 1 April 1993 is shown in the table:

	Number
Northern	0
Yorkshire	18
Trent	0
East Anglian	3
North West Thames	89
North East Thames	101
South East Thames	9
South West Thames	21
Wessex	4
Oxford	31
South Western	2
West Midlands	33
Mersey	0
North Western	59
Total	370

Information for trusts and directly managed units is not available centrally.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average number of hours being worked by junior hospital doctors in the week of 18 October 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

Prempak C

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if Prempak C hormone replacement therapy treatment will be treated as a single prescription for charging purposes in the future.

Dr. Mawhinney: A prescription charge is payable in respect of each quantity of a drug or appliance dispensed, unless the patient is entitled to charge exemption or remission. Prempak C contains two separate preparations differentiated by colour and two prescription charges are, therefore, due when these items are dispensed. The fact that for convenience and, as an aid to patient compliance, the two preparations are supplied in one pack does not alter the patient's liability for prescription charges. We have no plans to change these arrangements.

Medicines Evaluation Agency

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the results of the survey of key pharmaceutical companies regarding their preference for the siting of the European Medicines Evaluation Agency.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Thirty-nine major pharmaceutical companies from within and outside the EC were asked to rate the seven cities which are bidding for the European Medicines Evaluation Agency against 13 different aspects that were considered to be crucial to the success of the agency. Responses to this poll, commissioned from NOP Consumer Market Research, are still being received.

The interim results, based on responses from about half of the companies, reveal that for every aspect the total number of votes cast for the EMEA to be located in London was greater than for any other city. The degree to which London was the preferred location was, throughout, so overwhelming that the total number of votes cast for London exceeded the total of votes cast for all the other cities put together, by a factor of about four to one.

Out of 12 additional factors which the companies themselves suggested were relevant to the siting of the EMEA, London was preferred on 10 of these.

This shows clearly that the international pharmaceutical industry rates London the best place for the EMEA, by an overwhelming margin.

NHS Dental Services

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement about the future payment of fees for dental services within the national health service.

Mr. Sackville: We will announce proposals for the future system of remuneration in the general dental services in due course.

Royal Free Hospital

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations she has received regarding the proposed closure of the renal unit at the Royal Free hospital; and what proportion of them indicated that hardship would occur if it were implemented.

Mr. Sackville: We have received a large number of representations regarding the Royal Free hospital following publication of the renal specialty review group's report. This report identified University College/ Middlesex hospital as a preferred site for tertiary renal services in the north-central sector of London. The specialty review report's are independent advice to Ministers and not policy. Any major proposals to change services will be subject to full public consultation.

Organ Transplants

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what latest conveniently available statistics she has on the shortage of donor organs for transplant.

Mr. Sackville: Increasing the supply of donor organs is a Government priority. The table shows the numbers of organs transplanted in 1992 and the numbers of patients awaiting organ transplants at 31 August 1993.

	Number
Transplanted in 1992
Kidney	1,641
Heart	301
Heart and lung	53
Lung(s)	89
Liver	501
Awaiting at 31 August 1993
Kidney	4,610
Heart	244
Heart and lung	189
Lung(s)	116
Liver	100

Note:
Figures supplied by United Kingdom Transplant Support Service Authority.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on how she will advertise vacant chief executive and chairmen posts in regional health authorities before such authorities are reduced in number.

Dr. Mawhinney: The selection of chief executives is a matter for each individual authority, although it is our general expectation that most senior national health service managerial posts should be advertised. We do not consider it appropriate or necessary to advertise for candidates for appointment as chairman of a regional health authority, as there are many suitable ones already known to us both in other NHS bodies and from outside the NHS.

Nursery Education

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest available figure in England and Wales for the number of two to five-year-olds in the population; what percentage of them have pre-school day nursery places provided by (a) local authorities and the public sector and (b) the private sector; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: The information available is shown in the table. Information is collected on the number of places in registered, private and voluntary, day nurseries but not the number of children attending.

Day nursery provision and population data: England

	Amount
Number of children aged 2 and under 5 at 30 June 1991[1]	1,926,000
Number of children provided with a day nursery place[2] by a local authority at 31 March 1992 as a percentage of all children aged 2 and under 5	1·6 per cent.
Number of places[3] in registered day nurseries (private and voluntary) at 31 March 1992 as a percentage of all children aged 2 and under 5	4·8 per cent.

Notes:
[1] Estimated resident mid year population.
[2] All children under 5 on the register of local authority provision or placed by local authorities in registered provision.
[3] Includes places exempt from registration.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by wave and salary band the projected expenses of (a) trust chairs and (b) non-executive directors.

Dr. Mawhinney: Chairmen and non-executive directors of national health service trusts are eligible to claim allowances for travel and subsistence costs necessarily incurred on trust business. The payment of such expenses is a matter for the appropriate trust: details of such payments are not available centrally.

Wessex RHA Chairman

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the circumstances in which the chairman of Wessex regional health authority tendered his resignation; when it was accepted; and what were the details of the financial settlement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Sir Robin Buchanan tendered his resignation in order to concentrate on his role as chairman of the National Health Service Supplies Authority. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State accepted his resignation on 26 August 1993. The date of his departure has yet to be agreed. There has been no financial settlement.

SCOTLAND

Children's Hearings

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements he proposes for the organisation of children's hearings following the reorganisation of local government in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: The Government's proposals for the children's hearings system are set out in the White Paper on Local Government Reform (Cm 2267) and on Child Care Policy and Law (CM 2286).

The only organisational change proposed is the establishment of a children's reporter service for Scotland. This will be managed by a chief reporter responsible to a part-time board appointed by the Secretary of State. Against the background of the reform we see that step as the most advantageous way of ensuring consistency and the highest standards of professional practice among reporters across Scotland. Children's panels will continue to be appointed for local authority areas, thereby maintaining their links with the local communities which they serve. Children's panel advisory committees, which nominate panel members and monitor their performance, will continue on a similar basis.

Forestry

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Government expect to complete their forestry review; and when the findings of the review will be published.

Sir Hector Monro: My right hon. Friend and his fellow forestry Ministers expect to receive the advice of the forestry review group early next year. They will then require some time to consider it and come to a view on what the next stages in this work should be.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those persons and organisations that have submitted evidence to the interdepartmental working party on the future of the Forestry Commission.

Sir Hector Monro: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave him on 27 May at column 739.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy to initiate a programme of public and parliamentary consultation on the recommendations of the interdepartmental forestry review group.

Sir Hector Monro: Forestry Ministers will decide what the next stages in this work should be once the advice of the forestry review group has been received in the new year.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current reporting time scale of the interdepartmental forestry review group.

Sir Hector Monro: Forestry Ministers expect to receive the advice of the forestry review group early next year.

Winter Working Hours

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland to what extent farmers and building employers are subject to legal constraint on which hours to start work in winter.

Mr. Lang: There is no employment legislation governing the times when adult workers can be employed in the farming and building sectors. Environmental protection legislation concerning pollution and noise levels and health and safety at work legislation may, however, have a bearing on how early particular work can start.

Water Disconnections

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will consider collecting and holding centrally information on the number of industrial water disconnections made by water authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: I have no plans to collect and hold centrally such information.

Orthodontics

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the number of private practices in orthodontics; and how many practices are providing NHS treatment.

Mr. Stewart: No information is held on dental practices which provide private treatment only. According to health board information there are around 50 practices undertaking NHS treatment in which a specialist practitioner provides only orthodontic services to patients. In addition to these specialist orthodontic practitioners, other general dental practitioners may provide orthodontic as well as other treatment, but these practitioners cannot be identified separately. NHS orthodontic treatment may also be available through the community dental service and the hospital dental service.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the practices within each health board which have opted out of providing NHS orthodontic care.

Mr. Stewart: Since July 1992 no practices which offer a specialised orthodontic service have opted out of providing NHS orthodontic care. Eleven general dental practitioners have, however, withdrawn from providing NHS general dental services and these may have included dentists who undertook some orthodontic treatment.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many orthodontists are currently in NHS hospitals, and in the community, within each health board area; and how many orthodontists were recruited to the NHS within each health board during the last four years.

Mr. Stewart: The number of orthodontists employed in the NHS at 30 September 1992, the latest date for which information is available centrally, is shown in table A. Information on the number of orthodontists employed in the community is not available centrally.

The number of orthodontists recruited to hospitals in the NHS in the 2 years to 30 September 1992, the latest date for which information is available centrally, is shown in table B. Prior to September 1991, the specialties of orthodontics and paediatric dentistry were combined. Therefore, orthodontists can be identified separately only from that date.

Table A:
Orthodontists employed by health board, at 30 September 1992

Year ending 30 September 1992	7	1	3	2	—	—	1

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many patients are waiting for day care orthodontic treatment within each health board for (a) less than three months, (b) three to six months, (c) six to nine months, (d) nine to 12 months and (e) over one year;

(2) what is the average waiting time for orthodontic treatment within each health board;

(3) what was the number of patients waiting for orthodontic treatment for (a) less than three months, (b) three to six months, (c) six to nine months, (d) nine to 12 months and (e) over one year for each year since 1988.

Mr. Stewart: The numbers of patients awaiting in-patient or day case treatment in orthodontics and paediatric dentistry are relatively small. At 30 June 1993, the latest date for which information is centrally available, the in-patient waiting list for Scotland totalled 14 and there were no patients on the day case list. The majority of orthodontic and paediatric dentistry patients treated outwith the general dental service are seen at consultant out-patient clinics and the average waiting time for new out-patient referrals is set out in the table.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department is taking to monitor the performance of health boards, NHS trusts and individual hospitals in meeting the waiting time targets set for patients, in accordance with the patients charter for Scotland; and what action he proposes to take against any of these bodies failing to achieve the targets set for them.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The monitoring of the performance of health boards in relation to their responsibility to secure treatment for residents within such waiting time targets and guarantees as may apply is an ongoing function of the management executive of the NHS in Scotland. It is for individual boards to ensure delivery of such targets and guarantees through their contracting arrangements with NHS trusts and other hospitals. The success of boards in tackling such matters is addressed at the annual accountability review meeting which the management executive holds with every board.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the waiting time targets set for Tayside health board, in accordance with the patients charter for Scotland, in each of the (a) general surgery, (b) orthopaedic surgery, (c) ophthalmology, (d) ear, nose and throat, (e) urology and (f) gynaecology specialties.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The waiting time targets for in-patient or day case treatment currently applying to residents of Tayside health board are as follows:

(a) General surgery—90 per cent. within six months.
(b) Orthopaedic surgery—90 per cent. within nine months.
(c) Ophthalmology—90 per cent. within six months.
(d) Ear, nose and throat—90 per cent. within nine months.
(e) Urology—90 per cent. within 12 months.
(f) Gynaecology—90 per cent. within three months.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guarantees of treatment within a set time has been given by Tayside health board in accordance with the patients charter for Scotland for (a) hip replacement, (b) knee replacement, (c) cataracts and (d) for any other treatments.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The following are the current treatment guarantees applying to residents of Tayside health board:

Hip replacement—within 12 months.
Knee replacement—within 12 months.
Cataract removal—within six months.
Hysterectomy—within six months.
Pelvic floor—within six months.
Hernia—within six months.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets have been set by Tayside health board for informing patients of how long they will have to wait for an appointment at an out-patient clinic.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 October 1993]: As an added reassurance to patients about the length of time they may expect to have to wait for an out-patient appointment following referral by their GP all health boards introduced out-patient waiting time guarantees from 1 April 1993. The guarantees which apply to residents of Tayside health board are as follows:

General surgery—within 12 weeks.
Orthopaedic surgery—within 20 weeks.
Ear, nose and throat—within 16 weeks.
Ophthalmology—within nine weeks.
Urology[1]—within 12 weeks.
Gynaecology[2]—within nine weeks.

[1] Guarantee does not apply to referrals for infertility or impotence.
[2] Guarantee does not apply to referrals for infertility.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the longest length of waiting time for national health service patients at any trust hospital and for what operation or treatment.

Mr. Stewart: Information on current waiting times for specific operations or treatments (other than those selected on a national basis to which guarantees apply) is not centrally available.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will instruct health boards to make accessible fast-track monthly waiting lists, similar to those made available by regional health authorities in England.

Mr. Stewart: No. Officials of the management executive of the national health service in Scotland, with officials of the information and statistics division of the Common Services Agency, are working with health boards and national health service trusts to ensure that the quarterly waiting times information is as up to date as possible.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the average waiting time for (A) private and (b) NHS (i) day-patient and (ii) in-patient (a) treatment and (B) operations at (1) Vale of Leven district general, (2) Falkirk and District royal infirmary, (3) Southern General, (4) Victoria infirmary, (5) Raigmore hospital, (6) Perth royal infirmary and (7) Stirling royal infirmary;

(2) what is the longest length of waiting time for private patients at any trust hospital; for what operation or treatment; and for how many weeks.

Mr. Stewart: Information on waiting times for patients currently waiting for in-patient or day case treatment in NHS hospitals does not differentiate between NHS and private patients.

Roads

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the volume of local traffic between East Lothian and Berwickshire on the A1 trunk road; and what proportion of the traffic on the road at Dunglass bridge is attributable to such local journeys.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The average annual daily traffic on the A1 between the Lothian/Borders boundary and the A1107 junction at Tower Farm in 1992 was 6,300 vehicles per day. The volume of local traffic with an origin or destination in Borders region is estimated from junction counts and other surveys to be around 1,200 vehicles per day. It is not possible from the information available to identify the proportion of that traffic which is undertaking local journeys between east Lothian and Berwickshire.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of his plans to upgrade the A1 trunk road to dual carriageway standard, giving the timetable for dualling each section and the target date for completion of dualling in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Proposals have been published for the dualling of the A1 between Tranent and Haddington, and for local dualling schemes south of Dunbar and between Lemington and Howburn. Subject to the completion of statutory procedures, these three schemes which are valued at approximately £40 million could commence next year. The preparation of a further five dualling schemes valued at a total of £45 million is currently being progressed to take forward the Government's desire to dual fully the A1 between Edinburgh and Newcastle. Further progress will depend on the overall availability of resources, the relative claims of schemes elsewhere and the other normal criteria for bringing schemes forward.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the volume of local traffic making journeys of 25 miles or less on (a) the A1 trunk road at Meadowmill, (b) the former A1 road west of Tranent and (c) the A198 at Meadowmill; and what proportion of the total traffic at these points is represented by such local traffic.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The traffic studies carried out as part of the Tranent to Haddington dualling proposals do not readily identify the volume of local traffic making journeys of 25 miles or less, nor did the studies include those roads west of Tranent.

The average daily traffic flow is of the order of 21,600 vehicles on the A1 west of Bankton roundabout and 14,800 vehicles on the A198. On the A1 at Meadowmill some 10,600 vehicles per day (49 per cent.) is traffic travelling from or to the surrounding area between Musselburgh and Haddington. On the A198 at Meadowmill, about 99 per cent. is local traffic.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the numbers of minor, serious and fatal accidents on the A1 road in Scotland for the last five years; and if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of high-profile policing, speed cameras and enhanced road markings and signs in reducing serious and fatal accidents on the A1 over the last two years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The numbers of personal injury accidents on the A1 between Bankton roundabout and the National Borders for the past five years are as follows:

	Fatal	Serious	Slight	Total
1988	9	18	35	62
1989	6	24	40	70
1990	7	22	47	76
1991	3	13	39	55
1992	8	6	29	43

It is expected that the route action measures taken on the A1 will make an important and significant contribution to improving road safety on the A1. The reduction in the total number of personal injury accidents in 1991 and 1992 indicate an encouraging trend. The speed cameras on the route came into operation on 30 August this year. It is already clear from our monitoring that there has been a substantial reduction in vehicle speeds with the greatest reductions in speed recorded for the fastest 25 per cent. of drivers. This can be expected to result in further improvements in road safety.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many days the B6355 road between Gifford and Duns has been closed due to severe weather during the last 10 years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The B6355 is a local road and not one for which the Secretary of State has responsibility. Matters relating to the B6355, including winter maintenance, are the responsibility of Borders regional council, which is the local roads authority.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his policy for low-flow grade separation in planning for the dualling of trunk roads; and what is the relative accident rate at junctions with and without such grade separation on the A1 and elsewhere.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The choice of junction type for new dual carriageways and where existing dual carriageways are to be upgraded will depend on traffic flows on the main and side roads and other local conditions.

The only low-flow grade separation constructed to date is on the A1 at Lamberton. This junction was opened to traffic in August this year and it is therefore not yet possible to compare its performance in terms of road safety with other junctions on the route.

Gay Men (Health Services)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a list of the services provided by each health board targeted to gay men.

Mr. Stewart: Health board services generally are available to all, including gay men. Comprehensive information about particular services provided specifically for gay men is not held centrally.

Heart Surgery

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the waiting times for each health board for coronary artery bypass grafting and angioplasty.

Mr. Stewart: Information on waiting times for coronary bypass grafts at 30 June 1993 is shown in the table. Information on patients currently waiting for coronary angioplasty is not available centrally.

Average waiting times for coronary bypass grafts for patients on waiting lists at 30 June 1993

Environmental Protection Agency

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of the responses he has received to the consultation paper on the proposed Scottish Environmental Protection Agency advocate that the agency should be given responsibility for the management of water catchments.

Sir Hector Monro: The responses advocated that the Scottish Environment Protection Agency should be given responsibilities relating to the management of water catchments in addition to those it will inherit from river purification authorities.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what duties the proposed Scottish Environmental Protection agency will have (a) in the conservation and enhancement of the natural heritage and (b) in aspects of water resource management other than pollution control.

Sir Hector Monro: Scottish Natural Heritage is the statutory body with primary responsibility for the conservation and enhancement of the natural heritage. Last year's consultation paper "Improving Scotland's Environment—The Way Forward", made it clear that the Government also intends the Scottish Environment Protection Agency (SEPA) to have a statutory duty in relation to conservation of the natural heritage.

SEPA will inherit all the responsibilities of River Purification Aurthorities. In the light of views expressed in response to the consultation paper my right hon. Friend indicated in his reply to the hon. Member for Kincardine and Deeside (Mr. Kynoch) on 25 February at column 722 that we intend to give the agency enhanced powers of control over water abstraction. The responses to the consequent consultation paper "Abstraction Controls: A system for Scotland' are currently being considered.

Breast Cancer

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for (a) breast cancer care and treatment and (b) research into the genetics of breast cancer; and how much will be spent on each this year and is planned in succeeding years.

Mr. Stewart: The Scottish figures for morbidity and mortality associated with cancer in general and breast cancer in particular are a matter of concern to the Government. It was with that specific concern in mind that we established the Scottish breast cancer screening programme in 1988. The primary target of the programme is to reduce mortality in the screened population in Scotland by 30 per cent. overall. By next year all Scottish women between the ages of 50 and 64 will have been invited for screening.

This is only one strategy in the fight against breast cancer. The work of the Scottish Cancer Therapy Network established by the Chief Scientist Office of the Scottish Office Home and Health Department is geared to the delivery to patients of the most effective and up-to-date treatment. The network will be setting up a working party to look specifically at breast cancer. Both the network and the Scottish cancer co-ordinating and advisory committee are looking at service provision in relation to all types of cancer. The committee has established a clinical and molecular genetics sub-committee to look at the possibility of identifying a gene responsible for the commonest forms of cancer, including breast cancer. The breast screening programme is organising a consensus conference in April next year on the treatment of small tumours. This will encourage dissemination of best practice in relation to breast and other types of cancer.

Total funding of the breast cancer screening programme is £3·8 million in 1993-94. A total figure for expenditure on all aspects of breast cancer care and treatment is not held centrally.

The Chief Scientist Office is funding a number of research projects concerned with the genetic aspects of breast cancer. Funding in the current financial year amounts to some £72,000 and in 1994-95 will total £95,000. A number of other projects are under consideration for future years, but no firm figure for funding is available at this stage.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what investigations have been carried out regarding the validity of creating breast cancer treatment teams operating in hospitals.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 22 October 1993]: The treatment of any condition is a matter for the judgement of the clinicians involved. The team approach has evolved in all of the specialist breast clinics in Scotland as that which provides the optimum care of patients. I am not aware of any independent investigation of the validity of this approach. Both the Scottish cancer co-ordinating and advisory committee and the Scottish cancer therapy network are, however, considering service provision and can therefore be expected to examine this approach to treatment. A further opportunity will be provided by a consensus conference in April next year on the treatment of small tumours.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funding is available for breast cancer research in Scotland; and if he will give details of each project and details of the funding of each since 1980.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 22 October 1993]: The Government are committed to encouraging research into breast cancer. The main Government agency for medical and related research is the Medical Research Council (MRC), which receives its grant-in-aid from the Office of Science and Technology under my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. I understand that MRC expenditure into breast cancer was £2·7 million in 1990-91 and £1·6 million in 1991-92, the latest years for which figures are available.

The Chief Scientist Office (CSO) of the Scottish Office has identified cancer services as one of its priority areas and has, since 1980, funded a wide range of research and development projects dealing with breast cancer at a total cost of £0·729 million. The projects funded by CSO are shown in the table.

Infertility Treatment

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many couples received assisted conception treatment in 1991 at each of the Aberdeen, Dundee, Glasgow and Edinburgh units.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

Public Transport

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many seats are available for bus passengers between East Lothian and Berwickshire on scheduled weekday services, and how many passengers are actually carried;

(2) how many seats are available for bus and train passengers between Musselburgh, Prestonpans and Wallyford and the rest of East Lothian on scheduled weekday services; and how many passengers are actually carried.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not available centrally.

Tourism

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of business members (a) of the East Lothian tourist board and (b) from Berwickshire on the Scottish Borders tourist board.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of business members of (a) the East Lothian tourist board and (b) from the Berwickshire area of the Scottish Borders tourist board is 310 and 150 respectively.

Cystic Fibrosis

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on cystic fibrosis patients (a) being refused repeat prescriptions, (b) being refused drugs by doctors on grounds of cost, (c) being refused appointments or home visits by general practitioners and (d) experiencing difficulties in obtaining community physiotherapy.

Mr. Stewart: I have no information about patients experiencing these difficulties. Any patient who has a complaint about their treatment should raise the matter in the first instance with their health board.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which hospitals offer levels I, II, II, and IV services for cystic fibrosis patients.

Mr. Stewart: There are two major specialist centres (Level I/II) in Scotland: at the Western Infirmary, Glasgow and the Western General, Edinburgh. A local specialist service (Level III) is provided by Grampian Healthcare NHS Trust in Aberdeen. General localised services (Level IV) are provided across Scotland by district general hospitals and clinics but specific information on these services is not held centrally.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on Scottish Nuclear's application for consent to construct a dry store for waste nuclear fuel at Torness following the public inquiry in December 1992.

Mr. Stewart: The Secretary of State has received the Report of the Public Inquiry into Scottish Nuclear's application to construct a dry store for spent nuclear fuel at Torness. My right hon. Friend will announce his decision in due course.

"A Partnership for Good"

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many telephone calls were received by the Scottish Office new central inquiry unit in the first three weeks of operation in connection with the Government's policy paper, "A Partnership for Good"; and what costs have been incurred by his Department in operating this scheme.

Mr. Lang: Since the launch of the Scottish inquiry line on Thursday 30 September the central inquiry unit has received 585 calls. Set-up operational costs amount to £26,871 and the annual costs of operating the scheme have been estimated at around £28,500. These figures exclude initial publicity costs of £150,000 necessarily incurred to make the new arrangements known to the public.

Mortality Statistics

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total number of deaths each year since 1990 for (a) tuberculosis, (b) malignant neoplasm of the cervix, (c) Hodgkin's disease, (d) chronic rheumatic heart disease, (e) all respiratory diseases, (f) asthma, (g) appendicitis, (h) abdominal hernia, (i) cholelithiases and cholecistitis and (j) maternal deaths for each health board area.

Mr. Stewart: The figures requested are given in the tables:

Special Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will consider collecting and holding centrally information on the categories of special waste arisings; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: Detailed information concerning consignments of special waste is held on registers kept by waste regulation authorities which, in Scotland, are district and islands councils. At present I do not have a need to collate this information centrally.

Ethnic Health Unit

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will create an ethnic health unit along the lines of that established by the Department of Health.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so, but a working group has been set up to produce guidance on meeting the particular health needs of ethnic minority communities.

Brain Injuries

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many patients have been treated since the start of the Scottish Office national programme for the rehabilitation of the brain-injured at each of the three nationally designated brain injury units at Mondarstown castle, the Astley Ainslie hospital and the Royal Edinburgh hospital; what is the breakdown of patients from each referring health board for each unit; if he will list for each health board the total number of patients who have used the service since it started; and if he will express these numbers as a ratio per 100,000 of the population in the health board area.

Mr. Stewart: The information is not available in the form requested. The following table, based on 1992 figures, shows the number of patient weeks for which a central subsidy was paid to each individual health board. This is also shown as a percentage of overall occupancy at the unit concerned. The final column shows the proportion of patients originating in each health board area as a percentage of total patients in the three units.

Paralytic Shellfish Poisoning

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of sampling points and the frequency of sampling in each islands and district council area where samples have been taken to test for the incidence of paralytic shellfish poisoning between 1 January and 30 September.

Mr. Lang: The information from commencement of the annual sampling programme in April 1993 is set out in the table. The frequencies are normally weekly or fortnightly as indicated. However, when test results indicate that PSP toxins are present at a significant level the frequency of sampling is increased in the areas concerned.

NHS Trusts

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimate of the number of (a) day-patient and (b) in-patient private patients that will receive (i) operations and (ii) treatment this year in each trust hospital; and what proportion that will be of the total number of patients treated in each case.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not available centrally. It is expected that, as in the previous year, a record number of NHS patients will be treated.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the state of the sea discharge pipeline for liquid radioactive waste from AEA Technology's nuclear facilities at Dounreay.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Discharges to sea from AEA Technology's facilities at Dounreay are regulated by means of an authorisation issued under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960. Under the authorisation, discharges have to be within authorised limits and are required to be made through the main effluent pipeline. The authority is also required to maintain and keep in god repair the system by which the waste is discharged. Her Majesty's industrial pollution inspectorate carries out regular inspections at the site and I am satisfied that these requirements are being met.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made by his Department in rectifying the environmental hazards posed by the Dounreay waste shaft, identified in the report commissioned by his Department from R. M. Consultants of Abingdon.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The Dounreay waste shaft, as presently managed, does not present an environmental hazard. As regards the longer-term options for the shaft, R. M. Consultants were asked to examine a number of possible management options. However, an unequivocal best option has not been identified and studies are being continued by AEA Technology.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he commissioned the radiologocal research survey of the Solway coastal area from the Scottish Universities Research and Reactor Centre; how many copies of the report of the survey have been printed; to whom or to which organisations it has been distributed; and if he will publish a summary of the main finding of the survey.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The survey was commissioned in December 1992. The final report from the contractors is expected in December 1993 and will be pubished in accordance with normal Scottish Office practice. The report will contain a summary of the main findings and a copy of the report will be placed in the Library of the House.

Water Services

Mrs. Ray Michie To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the letter of the hon. Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) referred to in his answer of 27 July, Official Report, columns 963-64, regarding water disconnections, if he will list the six respondents to the consultation paper on local government reform who stated that they were in favour of allowing water service providers the power to disconnect supplies.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 22 October 1993]: Further examination of the responses has shown that two were wrongly classified. Of the others only two were unreservedly in favour of disconnection of domestic customers for non-payment. Of these responses one was almost certainly ironical and the writer of the other requested confidentiality. Copies of the relevant responses which are not confidential are available through the Library of the House.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the letter of the hon. Member for Dumfries (Sir H. Monro) referred to in his answer of 27 July, Official Report, columns 963-64, regarding meetings with foreign-owned water supply companies, if he will give details of when the two meetings took place, which Scottish Office Ministers were present and which water companies were represented; and if he will make a statement regarding the involvement of foreign-owned water companies in the new water boards.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 22 October 1993]: Scottish Office officials met representatives of the companies concerned, at the request of the companies, on 17 March 1993 and 27 April 1993 respectively. The meetings took place under terms of commercial confidentiality. No Ministers were present.

The proposed new water authorities will be wholly public bodies. The private sector will have a role, as now, in providing goods and services under contract. The negotiation of these contracts will be a matter for the new water authorities.

Environmental Consultation

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on progress following the consultation on the document "Improving Scotland's Environment—The Way Forward".

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Kincardine and Deeside (Mr. Kynoch) on 25 February at column 722.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those organisations who have submitted comments on the proposals contained in the document "Improving Scotland's Environment—The Way Forward"; if he will place the representations in the Library; and how many of the comments received have been favourable and how many have been adverse.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Altogether 159 organisations responded. Copies of the responses which we were not asked to treat as confidential have been placed in the Library. While local authorities and river purification boards did not, in general, support our proposals, most other respondents, particularly those from industry, were broadly in favour.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will set aside the proposals contained in the document "Improving Scotland's Environment—The Way Forward" until after the proposed reform of local government in Scotland has been completed; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: No. Our proposals for the agency are fully consistent with the forthcoming reorganisation of local government.

Sheep

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement providing details of the operation of the allocation of sheep quota from the national reserve; and when he expects to be in a position to accept applications from sheep producers for allocation of quota from the reserve.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Details of the operation of the national reserve of sheep annual premium quota are currently being finalised. The statutory instrument authorising Agriculture Departments to invite applications to, and make allocations from, the national reserve will be laid before Parliament as soon as these arrangements have been settled.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what meetings took place about the proposed linkage of Berwickshire and East Lothian in advance of publication of the White Paper which involved local district councillors;

(2) what meetings took place about the proposed linkage of Berwickshire and East Lothian in advance of publication of the White Paper which involved special or political advisers to the Secretary of State for Scotland and local representatives for either Berwickshire or East Lothian;

(3) if he will place in the Library a list of those who made representations on the proposal to link Berwickshire and East Lothian in the context of local government reform in Scotland;

(4) if he will make a statement on the reasons for the White Paper suggesting that Berwickshire should be joined to East Lothian; and who made the suggestion.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 October 1993]: In reaching their decisions on the proposed boundaries for the new single-tier authorities that were included in the White paper "Shaping the Future—The New Councils", the Government took account of the responses to the consultation paper "Shaping The New Councils", and to a wide range of other factors including costs, the efficient delivery of services, accountability, economic development considerations, population and geography. No meetings were held with local authorities or other interest groups to discuss specific boundaries relating to Berwickshire and East Lothian prior to the publication of the White Paper. Since publication, however, I and my colleagues have met with a number of individuals and organisations from Berwickshire, East Lothian and other parts of Scotland. A total of 417 individual letters have also been received about the proposed Berwickshire and East Lothian council. I have placed in the Library a list of those who have made representations. In addition, local campaigns about the Berwickshire and East Lothian proposals have generated postcards, pro forma letters and petition signatures.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the transitional costs of the restructuring of local government; and if he intends those costs to be met from local or national resources.

Mr. Stewart: The Government's White Paper, "Shaping the Future—The New Council" estimated that transitional costs in the range of £120 million to £196 million would be incurred over a 15-year period. The Scottish Office has invited local authorities to submit estimates of the genuinely additional costs they expect to incur in the financial year 1994-95 and my right hon. Friend will be taking account of these in determining the level of the local government finance settlement for that year. Similarly the funding of costs in future years will be the subject of consultation with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities in the normal way.

Farm Statistics (Miscalculation)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the reasons for the miscalculation in the statistics showing the amount of cereal production in Scotland for the years between 1989 and 1991.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: There has been no miscalculation in the amount of cereal production in Scotland between 1989 and 1991. The European Commission recently agreed that the original base areas, provided on 16 September 1992, for the arable area payments scheme introduced this year should be adjusted in the light of information from claims submitted under the new scheme. This technical adjustment, between the less favoured area and the non-less favoured area base areas, did not alter the total base area originally provided.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what are the estimated losses per hectare that will result from miscalculation of statistics from farmers in the non-less favoured areas for cereals, oilseed rape, peas and beans and set-aside land;

(2) if he will make a statement on the increase in the amount of land to be set aside next year; and whether compensation is to be paid on the additional areas set aside.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Officials are working with the EC Commission to determine the revised rates of payment under the arable area payments scheme. These revised rates result from the adjustment in the distribution of land between the less favoured area (LFA) and the non-less favoured area (non-LFA) and from the overshoot in cropping in the non-less favoured area.

An announcement on the revised rates and on next year's additional set-aside requirement will be made as soon as possible.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to ensure that the European Commission is aware of the effects of the changes as a result of the miscalculation of statistics for cereal production in Scotland; and what assurances he has had that the EC will not seek to exact penalties by way of further areas of set-aside in the coming year.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: As soon as it became apparent from the claims submitted this year under the arable area payments scheme that an adjustment to the base area figures orginally submitted to the EC Commission was necessary, my right hon. Friend personally pressed the Commission to agree to a technical adjustment of the Scottish base areas. The Commission has now agreed to the necessary technical adjustment of the LFA and non-LFA elements within Scotland's total base area; and my right hon. Friend and I are most grateful to the Commission for agreeing to that re adjustment.

There remains an overshoot in the non-LFA area which reflects an increase in cropping in that area. The EC regulations governing the arable area payments scheme stipulate that the effect of this overshoot is to reduce arable aid payments within the non-LFA area proportionately in the current year and to increase the set-aside requirement in the coming year by the percentage by which the regional base has been exceeded, that increase being uncompensated.

My right hon. Friend and I fully recognise that any penalty will be unwelcome to arable farmers. We cannot, however, vary the total Scottish base area, which reflects data already formally submitted to the Commission; nor can we adjust the area base control regime in mid-stream. The Scheme is designed to penalise areas in excess of base areas on which aid is claimed; and we cannot simply wish away the problem of over-cropping and the resultant additional one-year set-aside requirement.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) when he expects to meet representatives on the Scottish National Farmers Union to discuss proposals to mitigate financial losses that may result from the increased amount of land set aside;

(2) what proposals he has to compensate farmers who can prove they have suffered loss as a result of changes to the rules on set-aside.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: My right hon. Friend and I fully recognise that any special set-aside requirement will be unwelcome to arable farmers. The EC regulations governing the arable area payments scheme, however, stipulate such an additional one-year requirement where an overshoot over base area has occurred; and they make it clear that this additional requirement is uncompensated. As I explained to representatives of the National Farmers Union of Scotland when I met them on 13 October, we cannot vary the total Scottish base area, which reflects statistics already lodged with the EC Commission and to which each member state is committed. Nor can we adjust in mid-course the area base control regime to which the Government are committed. The scheme is specifically designed to penalise areas which are in excess of base areas on which arable aid is claimed.

The additional set-aside requirement resulting from the overshoot should be seen in the context of the very significant continuing benefits to Scottish arable farmers and to the rural economy generally of the arable area payments scheme under the common agricultural policy. Notwithstanding the penalty, farmers in the non-LFA area alone will receive some £80 million in arable area payments in 1993, with a further £12·5 million in payments in the LFA area. Moreover, the reduction in arable area payments to non-LFA farmers resulting from the overshoot in fact broadly equates with the global return generated from the additional land, over base area, brought into cropping this year.

Mental Illness

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to continue the mental illness specific grant in 1993, 1994 and 1995; whether the funding of service developments in the treatment of those suffering from traumatic brain injury will continue as an eligible category; what will be the sums of money provided for mental illness specific grant in the afore-mentioned financial years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Following an internal review of the scheme, it has recently been decided to continue the grant for at least another three years until 1997. Projects to assist people with acquired brain injury will continue to be eligible for grant.

In 1993-94, grant of £7 million supports projects worth £10 million. The level of grant for future years will be announced as part of the local government finance settlement for those years.

The scheme will be subject to a further review in 1996, based on a full study expected to report towards the end of 1995.

Pollution Appeals

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to announce the decisions in respect of the two appeals brought by the Inverclyde district council against H. L. Friel and Son Ltd. and Stephen Friel under the terms of the Control of Pollution (Amendment) Act 1989 and the Controlled Waste (Registration of Carriers and Seizure of Vehicles) Regulations 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: I expect that the decisions in respect of the appeals by H. L. Friel and Son Limited and Stephen Friel against Inverclyde district council's refusal to register them as carriers of controlled waste will be issued soon.

Arable Area Payments Scheme

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the amounts in hectares of the take-up under the arable area payments scheme in 1993 in Scotland for (a) cereals, (b) oilseeds, (c) protein crops excluding vining peas and (d) set-aside and the simplified scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The areas claimed under the arable area payments scheme in 1993 in Scotland by commodity, and for set-aside, are as follows:

	Hectares
Cereals	317,621
Oilseeds	61,781
Proteins (excluding vining peas)	4,150
Set-aside	70,637
Simplified scheme	56,428

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of applications in each region in Scotland under the (a) main arable area payments scheme and (b) the simplified scheme in 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The number of applications in each region in Scotland under the arable area payments scheme in 1993 is as follows:

	Less-favoured area (LFA)	Non-less-favoured area (NON-LFA)	Combined claims (LFA and NON-LFA)
Main scheme	651	3,205	478
Simplified scheme	3,306	1,687	125

Combined claims are those which include both LFA and non-LFA land.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Courts (Administration)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to speed up the process of administration in the courts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Taylor: Several steps are presently being taken to improve the process of administration in the courts.

In the Crown court, the recommendations of two major reports are being implemented or considered. The first is the inter-agency report of the pre-trial issues (PTI) working group issued in 1990 and which was presented to Parliament in February 1991. The second is the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice published in July this year.

In the magistrates courts a number of initiatives are being taken to reduce delays and waiting times. They include legislative amendments and the promotion of good practice in concert with all the criminal justice agencies. A standard computer system is being developed, as are changes to the management structure of courts, both of which will bring operational benefits.

In the county courts, centralised computer systems are being developed. These include a project to centralise the handling of payments under county court attachment of earnings orders.

Judges

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will introduce requirements for all judges to undergo comprehensive medical and psychological examinations on reaching the age of 65 years.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor has no such plans.

Legal Aid

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the latest estimated cost of legal aid.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The 1993-94 Supply Estimate provision for legal aid is £1,284 million, net of receipts. Based on figures for expenditure to the end of August, we now forecast that net expenditure for legal aid in the current year is likely to be £1,254 million. At this stage in the year, however, there is inevitably still uncertainty about the eventual outturn. The reduction in the forecast is largely related to criminal legal aid. The changes in eligibility introduced in April, the effect of which was almost entirely in relation to civil legal aid and advice and assistance appear to be having broadly the effect anticipated.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor's Department incurs only minor expenditure overseas. The table shows the expenditure on premises and personnel for 1993-94 and the previous four years. Expenditure prior to 1993-94 relates solely to the Office of the Judge Advocate General in Germany. Since 1991-92 the bulk of expenditure on the Judge Advocate's premises there has been paid by the Ministry of Defence. For 1993-94 the personnel cost includes the secondment of one officer to the Government of Australia.

Cost of overseas premises and personnel

Year	(a) Premises £	(b) Personnel £
1989-90	81,361	266,235
1990-91	76,178	244,143
1991-92	5,624	261,526
1992-93	2,457	273,769
1993-94	—	342,159

NATIONAL HERITAGE

BBC Governor for Wales

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proposals he has to review the appointment of the BBC national governor for Wales in the light of the report on the Welsh Development Agency presented to Parliament on 19 October.

Mr. Brooke: None.

TRANSPORT

Taxis

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now publish the Green Paper on taxi and private hire services in England and Wales.

Mr. Norris: The Green Paper was published today. It is a consultation document addressing fundamental issues relating to taxi and private hire services throughout England and Wales, including London, and I hope it will generate a stimulating debate on the way forward. I have asked for responses by 1 March 1994. I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what period of consultation he intends to allow for those residents of Islington living to the west of Liverpool road in relation to Union Railways' proposal, announced on 22 September, for a grade-separated junction leading into St. Pancras station for the high-speed channel tunnel link.

Mr. Freeman: Local authorities and action groups have been briefed by Union Railways on the rail link options, which are to be reported to the Government at the end of October. These bodies have been invited to submit formal comments directly to my Department by 12 November. Union Railways has, moreover, set up visiting public information centres for all parts of the route to explain the options. Comments from members of the public may either be made to Union Railways at the information centres or they can be sent to my Department. All comments received will be taken into account in our decisions.

A1/M1 Link

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the A1/M1 link road works in Yorkshire (a) to commence and (b) to finish.

Mr. Key: The public inquiry into this scheme was held in January and February of this year. After considering the inspector's recommendations, the Secretaries of State for Transport and for the Environment will decide on the way forward. If a decision were taken to proceed with the proposals, construction would start after the completion of detailed design, subject to the availability of funds. Typically, schemes of this size take about three years to build.

A1, Northumberland

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will review the traffic volume criteria for grade separation at crossings in the design of further dual carriageway projects on the A1 road in Northumberland, to correspond with the standards which are being observed on the neighbouring section of the A1 in Scotland.

Mr. Key: The Department is already working closely with the Scottish Office and, indeed, also with the Welsh Office and DOE Northern Ireland on the development of common design criteria for grade separation of road junctions. The intention is to produce a United Kingdom-wide standard.

Vocational Drivers

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many medical appeals have been made to the DVLA since April 1992 by LGV/LPV vocational drivers; how many notified appeals were proceeded with; how many were resolved medically by the DVLA; how many (a) LGV cases and (b) LPV cases went to magistrates courts for appeal; how many appeals in each of the two categories were refused on grounds of drug abuse, alcohol abuse, diabetes, epilepsy, cardiac problems, history of strokes, non-epileptic fits and other conditions; and how many appeals were allowed in each of the categories in respect of diabetes, corrected vision, monocular vision, deafness, history of suicidal tendencies, psychotic illness, hydrocephalus and other conditions.

Mr. Key: In the period April 1992 to September 1993, DVLA received 257 notices of appeal from LGV/PCV drivers. Of these 242 were resolved at DVLA and did not proceed to court. Fifteen summonses were issued against the Department, of which, two were later withdrawn. The results of the remaining 13 appeals, by medical condition, are as follows:—

Two LGV appeals allowed. These consisted of:
Heart 1.
Epilepsy 1.

Eight LGV appeals refused. These consisted of:
Alcohol abuse 2.
Epilepsy 2.
Heart 1.
Blackout 3.

One PCV appeal allowed.
Cancer.

Two PCV appeals refused.
Epilepsy 1.
Head injury 1.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations he has given to establishing medical appeal tribunals analogous to those operated by the Department of Social Security for appeals against DVLA decisions on the issue of LGV/LPV licences.

Mr. Key: We are currently looking at the use of independent medical referees rather than the more expensive medical tribunal system.

Hold Baggage

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he will take to ensure that hold baggage in passenger airplanes is accompanied by its owners on flights from London Heathrow and other British international airports.

Mr. Norris: At present, the aircraft operator is required by law to ensure that all originating passengers, operating crew, transit passengers and any transfer passengers whose hold baggage has been loaded into an aircraft, have boarded and will travel on that aircraft. The baggage of passengers who check in but do not board the aircraft is required to be removed and subjected to security controls. Unaccompanied baggage is not carried unless it is screened and if necessary hand-searched.

The United Kingdom has always complied with international requirements on passenger baggage. We are going further and introducing a requirement for airlines to account for and authorise for carriage every item of hold baggage that they carry. Trials are under way at several airports, and we are pressing suppliers of equipment to clear up the remaining technical difficulties.

MFV Pescado

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make public the marine accident investigation branch report and the video evidence of the damage to the MFV Pescado.

Mr. Norris [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Inquiries into the loss of the Pescado are being carried out with a view to prosecution. Consequently, all evidence collected by the marine accident investigation branch in the course of its investigation must be considered sub judice. For the same reason, publication of the detailed marine accident investigation branch report must await the outcome of those inquiries.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effect of the award of Jubilee line tunnelling contracts to foreign companies on the ability of British firms to compete for other large-scale civil projects.

Mr. Norris: The award of contracts for the Jubilee line extension (JLE) is entirely a matter for London Underground Limited. No major contracts for the JLE have yet been awarded; I understand that although some of the tunnelling contracts are likely to be awarded to foreign companies, the larger part of the tunnelling work will go to the United Kingdom.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the amount of the costs awarded by the Law Lords on 28 July against his predecessor the right hon. Member for Mole Valley (Mr. Baker) in respect of the Home Department being ruled guilty of contempt of court in relation to a court order banning deportation of the Zairean asylum seeker 'M'; how much of the costs his Department paid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The consequence of the ruling by the Judicial Committee in the House of Lords on 28 July is that the Home Office is liable for the applicant's costs in the proceedings in the Divisional Court, Court of Appeal and the House of Lords. The applicant's solicitors costs for the Divisional Court and the Court of Appeal have been taxed and are:

Divisional Court–£51,195·92
Court of Appeal–£41,110·30

The applicant's solicitors have submitted a bill for their costs in the House of Lords. When this has been taxed, all the applicant's outstanding costs will be paid.

Animal Experimentation

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider establishing a list of registered interests for members of the Animal Procedures Committee similar to those registers available for other independent Government advisory committees.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I shall arrange for such a list to be included in future reports of the Animal Procedures Committee.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of (a) procedures and (b) animals used for research on (i) tobacco, (ii) cosmetics and toiletries, (iii) food additives and (iv) alcohol in 1990, 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Categories (i) to (iv) are not separately recorded for medical or applied research purposes but are for procedures for safety evaluation. The number of procedures were as follows:

Year	Tobacco	Cosmetics and toiletries	Food additives	Alcohol
1990	659	4,365	10,822	1,429
1991	512	3,082	10,855	1,294
1992	197	2,164	6,134	1,087

The number of animals used in each procedure could be extracted from the recorded information only at disproportionate cost.

Crime Clear-up Rates

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the police authorities that recorded the five highest crime clear-up rates in each of the past seven years.

Mr. Maclean: The police forces with the highest clear-up rates, in order, were as follows:

1986
Dyfed-Powys, Gwent, Derbyshire, Hertfordshire, Lancashire.
1987
Gwent, Dyfed-Powys, Lancashire, Cumbria, Suffolk.
1988
Gwent, Dyfed-Powys, Cumbria, Lancashire, Cheshire.
1989
Gwent, Dyfed-Powys, Cheshire, Cumbria, Wiltshire.
1990
Gwent, Dyfed-Powys, Cheshire, West Mercia, South Yorkshire.
1991
Dyfed-Powys, Gwent, Lincolnshire, Merseyside, Dorset.
1992
Dyfed-Powys, Gwent, Merseyside, Suffolk, Lincolnshire.

Violent Crime

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the prison population had been convicted of crimes involving violence for the last date for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. A. Butler to Mr. David Alton, dated 26 October 1993:

CONVICTION FOR CRIMES INVOLVING VIOLENCE

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking what percentage of the prison population had been convicted of crimes involving violence for the latest date that figures are available.

Excluding those committed in default of payment of a fine some 49 per cent. of the total sentenced male and female prison population, for whom an offence was recorded, were serving sentences for violence against the person, robbery or for a sexual offence on 30 June 1993.

WALES

Local Government Finance

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing the capital allocation to each of the county authorities in Wales for each of the last three financial years; what percentage of each allocation was actually expended; and what is his calculation of what expenditure should have been incurred in respect of each of the main service areas.

Mr. Redwood: The available information is given in the following tables. The Government's new planning totals for the external financing of capital expenditure and the assumed gross expenditure by broad service group are available only for Wales as a whole.

Basic credit approvals (BCA) form the capital allocations which are not directed towards specific services or programmes. Other external capital financing is provided through supplementary credit approvals, capital grants and other contributions from central Government and their agencies. These latter sources are generally directed towards specific services or programmes. The total amount of external capital finance for local authorities is announced annually as the new planning total but, other than BCA, the amounts involved are not necessarily allocated to local authorities before the beginning of the financial year. In addition to the spending financed externally, local authorities can fund capital expenditure from revenue accounts and reserves and from capital receipts. This self-financed expenditure does not form part of the capital allocations or new planning totals. The amount the Government estimates authorities will have available for capital expenditure on each service, the assumed gross expenditure, is derived by summing the relevant capital allocations and forecasts of self-financed expenditure.

Rural Housing

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will respond to the third report of the Welsh Affairs Committee Session 1992-93 on rural housing.

Mr. Redwood: I am pleased to announce that the response has been published today.

Working Groups

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a list of all Welsh Office working groups together with the membership of each and a note of other public bodies to which any member also belongs.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information required is not held centrally.

Public Appointments

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the register held by the Welsh Office of candidates suitable for public appointment.

Mr. Redwood: No—this information is confidential.

Peat Bogs

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the raised peat bogs within Wales.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is as follows:

Fenns and Whixall Mosses, Clwyd
Nug and Merddwr complex, Clwyd
Cors Caron, Dyfed
Cors Fochno, Dyfed
Esgyrn Bottom, Dyfed
Gorslas, Dyfed
Cors Goch, Llanllwch, Dyfed

Arthog Bog, Gwynedd
Cors Goch, Trawsfynydd, Gwynedd
Rhosgoch Common, Powys
Craig-y-Ciliau, Powys
Nelson Bog, Mid Glamorgan

There may be some additional small mires which would fall into this category but these will require further investigation.

Traffic Calming

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement outlining the main findings to the formal consultation arranged by his Department on traffic calming measures.

Sir Wyn Roberts: On 23 February, in conjunction with the Department of Transport, we wrote to interested parties, including Welsh local authority associations and county surveyors, inviting comments on draft traffic calming regulations. The few comments received were of a technical nature and the proposals were generally welcomed. The Highways (Traffic Calming) Regulations 1993 came into force on 27 August.

Youth Training

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to include references to evaluation targets for youth training within his Department's annual expenditure plans.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Department's annual expenditure plans are currently being prepared. It is my intention that these will include reference to agreed targets for youth training.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Konver Programme

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will re-examine the instruction currently being given by regional offices of his Department that funds under the EC Konver programme are only available to small and medium-sized enterprises.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Commission's list of the types of measures which Konver may part-finance includes "diversification of the region's economic structure, particularly through aid for the development of small and medium-sized firms".

Assistance from European structural funds community initiatives, such as Konver, is allocated in each member state in accordance with a national "programme" which may stipulate narrower priorities.

The United Kingdom is one of those member states in which Konver grants to companies will be limited to small and medium sized enterprises. This accords with the Government's priorities for the use of the sums of grant available from the funds generally.

Post Office Pension Schemes

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what directions the Government propose to give to the trustees of the Post Office superannuation and Post Office pension schemes about division of their funds and assets in the event of the privatisation of Post Office Counters Ltd., Royal Mail Ltd., and Parcelforce Ltd.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government are continuing their review into the future structure and organisation of the Post Office. Once the Government have decided on the future of the Post Office and its constituent businesses, it will be able to consider any implications for pensions in detail. Until then, this question is hypothetical.

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what changes in the Post Office superannuation and Post Office pension schemes he expects to make in the light of the recommendations of the Goode report.

Mr. McLoughlin: Operational responsibility for the Post Office pension schemes rests not with Ministers but with the trustees of the schemes, together with the Post Office. The Goode report is being considered by Government, and the trustees of the Post Office schemes will no doubt wish to consider any implications which may arise in due course.

Wave Power

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress has been made, in conjunction with the European Communities, in establishing an offshore wave power generator project.

Mr. Eggar: Two United Kingdom proposals, from the Queen's university Belfast, and from Applied Research and Technology Ltd. (ART), of Inverness, for wave energy pilot plants with a power rating between 0·4MW and 2·0MW have been offered support from the Commission of the European Communities' JOULE programme. Both received assistance from the energy technology support unit (ETSU), acting on behalf of DTI, in preparing their proposals.

Nuclear Reactor, Sizewell

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response he has made to the recent application by Nuclear Electric plc to build a third nuclear plant at Sizewell.

Mr. Eggar: My Department directed Nuclear Electric plc to advertise its application pursuant to the terms of the Electricity (Applications for Consent) Regulations 1990 and the Electricity and Pipe-line Works (Assessment of Environmental Effects) Regulations 1990.

Telephone System

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from Oftel to be given overall responsibility for the change in telephone codes due to take place in 1995; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: We have not received any such representations. Oftel is already working to ensure that, wherever possible, telecoms operators and the manufacturers and maintainers of telephony equipment discharge their responsibilities to their customers in relation to the national code change in a timely and co-ordinated way so as to minimise any costs and disruption to the end-user.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to enable Oftel to take over control and allocation of telephone numbers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The 1991 White Paper, "Competition and Choice: Telecommunications Policy for the 1990s" (Cm 1461) made it clear that Oftel would be taking action to enable it to administer a national numbering plan. Operators' licences were subsequently amended to provide Oftel with the necessary powers once numbering conventions had been published and a specified numbering scheme determined. Oftel intends to take over responsibility for the allocation of numbers during the first half of 1994.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the current telephone network operators; and what is his estimate of the likely number of telephone network operators in April 1995.

Mr. McLoughlin: Since the publication of the 1991 White Paper, "Competition and Choice: Telecommunications Policy for the 1990s" (Cm 1461), licences have been granted, in addition to those already granted to BT and Mercury Communications Ltd, to the following companies to run fixed-link public telecommunications systems throughout the United Kingdom: Ionica L3 Ltd; Energis Communications Ltd; Scottish Hydro-Electric plc; ScottishPower Telecommunications Ltd; Torch Communications Ltd; and MFS Communications Ltd. Applications for similar licences are also under consideration.

The number of licensed operators is expected to have increased by April 1995, but my Department does not produce estimates of the likely number of operators in future years. This will depend on the number of future applications and whether these meet the considerations which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has to take into account under the Telecommunications Act 1984 before granting a licence.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the costs, both private and public, of reprogramming of telephone equipment due to the proposed code changes in 1995.

Mr. McLoughlin: This is a matter for Oftel. In July 1992 it published a study carried out by Ovum which estimated that the direct costs of modifications to customer premises equipment as a result of the national code change were likely to be in the order of £200 million.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received about the competence of insolvency service staff.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: No recent representations have been received.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff are employed in the insolvency service disqualification unit; and what was the average number employed in the unit for each year since 1987.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The insolvency service's disqualification unit currently employs 49·5 persons. The number averaged 47 in each year from 1987 to 1990, 49 in 1991 and 49·5 in 1992.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many insolvencies, identifying companies and bankruptcies were dealt with by the insolvency service together with the average number of staff, identifying permanent and casual, in post for each year from 1987.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The insolvency service dealt with the following number of cases:

	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
Company winding-up orders	3,952	3,554	4,431	6,777	8,911	9,540
Bankruptcy orders	7,365	7,607	8,679	14,359	26,186	33,152
TOTAL	11,317	11,161	13,110	21,136	35,097	42,692

The average number of staff were:

	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
Permanent	1,516	1,443	1,395	1,431	1,500	1,531
Casuals	[1]n/a	[1]n/a	10	24	85	158
TOTAL	1,516	1,443	1,405	1,455	1,585	1,689

[1] Note: No separate record of casuals, numbers insignificant.

Energy Review Panel

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he will appoint members of the energy review panel which he announced in the coal White Paper.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to his reply, 26 October 1993]: I announced to the House on 20 October that Dr. Martin Holdgate had agreed to chair the new energy advisory panel and that I had invited a number of independent experts in the energy field to serve as members. I am pleased to be able now to announce the full membership of the panel and look forward to the input which they will make to the energy report next year. I am sure that the report will be an invaluable document to all those with an interest in energy.

With the arrival of the panel, I have decided to dissolve the Department's former advisory council on research and development. ACORD has provided valuable technical advice to a succession of Ministers and Departments since it was first set up 45 years ago but major changes to the energy scene in recent years—particularly the privatisation of the nationalised energy industries—have meant that ACORD's main original function—a detailed technical overview of those industries research plans—is no longer necessary.

The council had itself recently suggested to me that its ambit might usefully be extended to issues of energy policy —an area where it would have overlapped directly with the panel.

I have written to ACORD members thanking them for their service.

The full membership of the energy advisory panel is as follows:

CHAIRMAN

Martin Holdgate
Currently Director General, International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources; formerly Chief Environment Scientist, Department of the Environment. Recent chairman of the Renewable Energy Advisory Group (REAG).

MEMBERS

Lady (Mary) Archer
Chairman of the National Energy Foundation, formerly a member of REAG.

Ron Campbell
Former Managing Director of Babcock Energy and Director of the Nuclear Power Group, now a consultant. Member of the Department's former Advisory council on Energy Research and Development (ACORD) and of the NII's Advisory Council on the Safety of Nuclear Installations (ACSNI).

Tony Cooper
General Secretary, Engineers' and Managers' Association.

Nigel Evans
Managing Director, Caminus Energy Ltd. former member of ACORD.

David Green, MBE
Director, Combined Heat and Power Association.

Dieter Helm
Oxford Economic Research Associates.

Peter Ibbotson
Director of Construction, Sainsbury plc.

Professor Alexander Kemp
University of Aberdeen Department of Economics.

Sam Laidlaw
Managing Director Amerada Hess (UK) Ltd., former president of the UK Offshore Operators' Association.

Mike Parker
Consultant, former Director of Economics, British Coal.

Paul Rich
Managing Director, Allied Steel and Wire.

Lynda Rouse
Director, Public Sector Unit, Barclays de Zoete Wedd Ltd.

Ann Scully
Vice-Chairman, National Consumers Council and Chairman, Domestic Coal Consumers' Council.

Anthony White
National Grid Company (NGC).

Professor Alan Williams
Leeds University Department of Fuel and Energy.

ENVIRONMENT

Accommodation Agencies Act 1953

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what conclusions he has reached as a result of the consultation carried out by his Department on whether there is a case for abolishing the Accommodation Agencies Act 1953.

Sir George Young: Following consultation, we have decided that the Accommodation Agencies Act 1953 should be retained. It is clear that the need to protect those seeking accommodation from unscrupulous or bogus agencies outweight the benefit which might come from allowing agencies to adopt new patterns of business by charging fees in advance to those seeking accommodation.

Sea Mammals

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of recorded fatalities of (a) dolphins and (b) whales and other cetaceans in United Kingdom waters in each of the last five years.

Mr. Yeo: The available figures on cetacean deaths come from a DOE-sponsored scheme for co-ordinated reports of stranded cetaceans around Great Britain. The scheme does not extend to Northern Ireland. The figures are:

Year	Dolphins	Whales and other cetaceans
1988	44	63
1989	43	95
1990	52	98
1992	256	159

The 1992 figures appear to reflect an unusual series of strandings of common dolphins off the south-west coast of England in spring 1992 and additional information for Scottish waters following the appointment of a co-ordinator for Scottish reports.

Drinking Water Inspectorate

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he proposes to make to provide a more independent role for the drinking water inspectorate.

Mr. Yeo: We propose to transfer to the chief drinking water inspector certain statutory responsibilities of the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales. These include the power to prosecute if water were to be supplied that was unfit for human consumption. We believe that the chief inspector should exercise these responsibilities independently. Legislation will be needed to make the change.

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Gummer: DOE (central) has one member of staff stationed in Germany. Personnel and premises costs are covered by payments received for the work carried out; hence, DOE (central) incurs no net expenditure.

In addition, the international arm of PSA Services had premises and personnel overseas in the past four years and the costs incurred were as follows:

	(a) Premises £'000	(b) Personnel £'000
1993-94	17	2,891
1992-93	167	17,648
1991-92	183	14,431
1990-91	594	64,680

These costs were fully met by receipts from the Ministry of Defence and other customers. PSA International closed on 30 September 1993, and no further costs will be incurred. Residual tasks are being completed by units in PSA Services.

Orimulsion

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what factors were taken into account in his decision to grant licences to Ince and Richborough power stations to burn orimulsion; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The recent authorisation by HMIP is a registration of the existing process under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, rather than approval to a new use of orimulsion. Richborough and Ince power stations are now under integrated pollution control as applied to other large power stations earlier this year.

At Richborough and Ince, the limits on the release of sulphur dioxide have been set to ensure that emissions will be no higher than if heavy fuel oil was being burnt.

All power station authorisations include limits on the release of the main pollutants, including sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxides emitted to air. These limits for releases to air vary from station to station depending on its environmental circumstances and are based on the consideration of the national plan, which aims progressively to reduce such emissions over a number of years, critical load, and local air quality.

The authorisations also contain controls on releases to water which accommodate the requirements of the National Rivers Authority.

Plants are required to use BATNEEC—best available techniques not entailing excessive cost—in controlling releases, and authorisations require operators to provide an improvement plan to bring the station up to new plant standards. Unless PowerGen can demonstrate adequate reasons to the contrary, they will be expected to employ appropriate sulphur abatement techniques at Richborough and Ince by 1 April 1998. This is three years earlier than the normal objective for coal fired stations because of the economics of burning orimulsion.

HMIP is satisfied that there are no environmental grounds for refusing authorisation for full scale burning of orimulsion.

Conservative Party Conference

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what costs were incurred by his Department for arrangements associated with the 1933 Conservative party conference in Blackpool.

Mr. Gummer: The only identifiable costs incurred by my Department were those in arranging for urgent Government papers to be sent to Ministers attending the Conservative party conference.

Sulphur

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made to date on reviewing the United Nations Economic Commission on Europe protocol on sulphur; and if he will make it his policy to sign the revised protocol.

Mr. Yeo: Negotiations are still in progress.

Peat

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to support the awarding of a European eco-label to peat-free soil conditioners and growing media based on organic waste materials only.

Mr. Yeo: The United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board has been established to administer and promote the European Community ecolabelling scheme nationally and has responsibility for dealing with the operational aspects of the scheme.

I understand, however, that the UKEB has submitted to the Commission proposals for soil improvers based on the use of composted waste products. Proposals for growing media are still under consideration.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those sites of special scientific interest which are being damaged by existing peat extraction work and those which have planning permission but are not yet being extracted.

Mr. Yeo: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, under the terms of the agreement reached with Fisons peat extraction is continuing over previously cut areas at Thorne, Goole and Crowle moors, Hatfield moor, Wedholm Flow, Westhay moor and Shapwick heath. I am informed that some peat extraction is taking place at Fenns, Whixall and Bettesfield Mosses, Catcott, Chilton and Edington moors, Tealham and Tadham moors, Bolton Fell Moss, Chat Moss and Danes Moss under planning permissions give prior to SSSI notification.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward proposals to introduce a levy upon peat extraction.

Mr. Baldry: The Government have no plans at present to introduce a levy on peat extraction.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement outlining the outcome of his Department's review on the rehabilitation of bogs.

Mr. Baldry: The Department's review on the rehabilitation of lowland peat bogs is ongoing and results will be made available next year when the study is complete.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to establish a development agency to secure partnership between central Government and those with a commercial interest in developing and marketing peat-free growing media and soil conditioners.

Mr. Baldry: The Government have no plans at the present time to establish such an agency.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to change current sludge and land regulations to allow the immediate use of composted sewage sludge in amenity planting.

Mr. Yeo: Such use of composted sludge is already permitted. The restrictions in the Sludge (Use in Agriculture) Regulations 1989 govern the application of sludge only to agricultural land. There is also an exemption from the requirement to hold a waste disposal licence (in Schedule 6, paragraph 13 of the Collection and Disposal of Waste Regulations 1988) for the deposit of sewage sludge, whether composted or not, directly on to land for the purpose of fertilising or beneficially conditioning that land.

Minerals

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to change the compensation requirements payable for revocation or variation for mineral contents to enable money to be paid in proportion to any losses actually suffered.

Mr. Baldry: The existing legislation already provides for compensation to be calculated in relation to loss or damage suffered, although the amount of compensation can be abated in certain circumstances. However, the Government are reviewing the operation of that legislation as part of their wider review of old mineral permissions and I hope to be able to issue a consultation paper outlining reforms later this year.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to offer compensatory payments to any mineral planning authority minded to revoke an extant planning permission on a site of national or international conservation importance.

Mr. Baldry: Compensation payable for revoking or modifying minerals permissions on any site is governed by the 1981 Minerals Act. It will be reviewed as part of a wider review of old mineral permissions on which the Department hopes to issue a consultation paper early next year.

City Challenge

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce his plans for the third round of city challenge.

Mr. Baldry: We are keeping the position on a third round under review in the light of urban policy developments.

Horse Fairs

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the present status of the royal charter granted between 1123 and 1135 which stipulates that land at Lee Gap, Woodkirk, Morley, will be available for the holding of horse fairs; and which Department or agency of Government has responsibility for the maintenance of rights confirmed by royal charter.

Mr. Baldry: Information on royal charters is a matter for the Lord President of the Council, but the maintenance of such rights is a matter for the owner.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment has been made by his Department of the possible impact of energy efficiency programme development on levels of fuel bill charges in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Yeo: I understand that the Energy Saving Trust is aiming to develop schemes which will by 2000 lead to energy savings by consumers equivalent to at least 2·5 million tonnes of carbon emissions a year. To achieve this the trust will need to offer incentives to investment in energy efficiency measures which may need to build up to about £400 million a year. Achievement of the trust's target will lead to substantial net financial savings to consumers by 2000, even if the gas and electricity regulators were to allow the entire cost of these incentives to be charged in gas and electricity tariffs. Before 2000, there will be times when consumers' savings have not yet fully offset the cost, and the peak level of increase in bills arising from this would be between 1 per cent. and 2 per cent.

Waste Incineration

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement outlining his Department's response to the recommendations on clinical waste incineration outlined in the report by the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution.

Mr. Yeo: The Government have welcomed the report by the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution on the incineration of waste as a comprehensive and clear analysis of the role of incineration as a waste management option. The Government will be making a full response to the commission's report in due course.

My Department is currently reviewing the advice given in waste management paper No. 25 on the arisings, treatment and disposal of clinical waste. A consultation paper was issued in August this year and it is hoped that the revised paper will be published in December.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to publish information on the chemical composition of incinerated waste in the United Kingdom

Mr. Yeo: Wastes incinerated in the United Kingdom include household waste, sewage sludge and organic chemical wastes. This wide range of incinerated wastes means it is not practicable for my right hon. Friend to publish information on their chemical composition.

Where such wastes are special wastes, details of their chemical composition will be available to the public from the register of consignment notes held by the waste regulation authority.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to adopt the four-stage waste management procedure outlined in the report on the incineration of waste by the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution.

Mr. Yeo: The Government's waste policies are based upon a hierarchy of waste management options; the reduction of waste, its re-use wherever possible, recycling and energy recovery, and final disposal.

The Government have welcomed the report by the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution on the incineration of waste as a clear and comprehensive analysis of the role of incineration as a waste management option. A full response by the Government to the report will be made in due course.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to publish and implement the new waste management licensing laws under part 2 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Yeo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Ribble Valley (Mr. Evans) on 29 April 1993 at column 470, and the reply to the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) on 18 May 1993 at columns 101-2. It remains the Government's intention to bring the waste mangement licensing provisons of part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 into force as soon as possible.

Used Tyres

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to develop a United Kingdom-wide strategy for the safe handling and disposal of used tyres.

Mr. Yeo: Used tyres are controlled waste as defined by the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and as such they are subject to stringent controls. Section 34 of the Act—the duty of care—places a duty on everyone who has a responsibility for waste to ensure that it is properly managed from production to disposal. Producers of waste must, under the duty of care, satisfy themselves that they are passing on waste to people who will handle it properly and ensure its safe disposal. Facilities which accept used tyres for disposal require a waste disposal licence under the Control of Pollution Act 1974, soon to be superseded by the waste management licensing provisions of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Such licences include conditions designed to prevent pollution of the environment and harm to human health.

The Government are participating in a European Community priority waste stream group to develop by the end of the year a strategy for reducing the environmental impact of used tyres, and are encouraging a number of initiatives to increase their recycling.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what monitoring has been undertaken by his Department to date on compliance with the duty of care rules established under the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Yeo: The duty of care, in section 34 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, requires all holders of waste—except private households—to take reasonable steps to prevent the illegal disposal of their waste. Under the duty, waste may be handed only to an authorised person and transfers of waste must be documented. It is in the nature of this duty that compliance is ensured mainly by each holder of waste in turn checking on the person to whom they consign waste, in order themselves to avoid committing an offence.

The Government therefore do not undertake nor require local authorities to undertake any monitoring or inspection of firms' compliance with the duty. However, there is some early evidence of a decline in fly-tipping incidents since the duty of care came into force on 1 April 1992.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from the Institution of Environmental Health Officers concerning sustainable development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The Institution of Environmental Health Officers wrote to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment in May on the subject of sustainable development and the environmental health profession, and contributed a specific response in September to my Department's consultation paper on the United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development. These are among more than 600 representations which my Department has received during the Government's consultation process on the strategy, which we are currently preparing. Copies of this document will be laid before the House in the normal way.

Radioactive Substances

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the companies found guilty of breaking the terms of the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 in the United Kingdom since 1989; and if he will set out the company name, level of fine and the offence in each case.

Mr. Yeo: Details are set out in the table.

HMIP–RSA 1960 prosecutions (1989 to date)

Division/ Region	Name	Act	Offence	Date of hearing	Verdict	Fine	Cost
East	Grunwick Processing Laboratories, Hertfordshire	RSA 1960	Failure to notify the loss of a registered source and failure to keep the source within a suitable store.	1989-90	Guilty	£1,000	—
East	UK Atomic Energy Authority	RSA 1960	Incidents relating to the release of radioactive tritium gas to the atmosphere.	5 June 1991	Guilty	£3,000	£1,395

Division/ Region	Name	Act	Offence	Date of hearing	Verdict	Fine	Cost
North	BNFL, Springfield	RSA 1960	Unauthorised disposal of low level solid radioactive waste.	17 September 1991	Guilty	£7,500	£6,140
East	Leicester Royal Infirmary	RSA 1960	Failure to dispose of its solid radioactive waste properly.	20 February 1992	Guilty	£6,000	£5,000

Departmental Offices

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many civil servants are working in the Environment Department offices in Marsham street, London.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The Department currently has 2,218 employees working in Marsham street, of which 1,656 are located at No. 2, with 562 in Romney house and 43 Marsham street.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

The Attorney-General: The cost of personnel for the current financial year is expected to be approximately £20,000, £10,069·71 as at 30 September 1993. Comparable figures for previous financial years were (a) 1992-93 £19,830·49, (b) 1991-92 £18,874·49, (c) 1990-91 nil, and (d) 1989-90 nil. There are and have been no costs for premises.

Dropped Cases

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases for the last available quarter the Crown prosecution service decided to drop; what proportion were dropped on public interest grounds; and how many on evidential grounds.

The Attorney-General: During the quarter ending June 1993, the CPS discontinued proceedings in respect of 43,997 defendants in magistrates' courts. This total comprises all cases discontinued by the 13 CPS areas, but does not include the specialised casework undertaken by the headquarters of the service.

Reasons for discontinuance are recorded on the files relating to individual defendants, but the information is not collected or collated centrally. The information requested could therefore be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However, the Home Office has undertaken a research study which provides information about the circumstances in which the CPS terminates cases. An interim report shows that about half the cases terminated were discontinued on evidential grounds (54 per cent.), and just under one third were discontinued on public interest grounds (32 per cent.). The remaining cases could not proceed for various reasons: for example, where the defendant had died or could not be traced.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Open Government

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make it his policy to seek action at the appropriate European Council to remove the current statutory restrictions on information disclosure, to which reference is made at paragraph 6.12 of Cm 2290 on open government.

Mr. Waldegrave: Restrictions on disclosure of information which arise from EC legislation generally exist for good reasons, principally to protect commercial confidentiality and enable national regulatory authorities to exchange information in confidence. Nevertheless, if the process of preparing legislation to implement the proposed right of access to health and safety information reveals that particular EC-derived restrictions are unduly extensive, we will raise our concerns with our Community partners and the Commission.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will set out details of initiatives and meetings his Department has sponsored, or participated in, to promote public discussion of the proposals contained in his White Paper on open government, Cm 2290.

Mr. Waldegrave: The White Paper itself invited comments on the proposals it contains. My office has received nearly 100 letters from members of the public and representative organisations putting their views on various aspects of the proposals.

On 21 October I addressed a public seminar on the White Paper organised by the Campaign for Freedom of Information and the First Division Association.

Public Services

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he intends to announce the results of the survey of public perceptions of public services undertaken for his Department in March.

Mr. Waldegrave: I wrote to the hon. Member on 24 August 1993.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Forestry Commission

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what area of land in England has been sold by the Forestry Commission; what area she expects to be sold during the next five years; and what area she expects to remain in the ownership of the Commission by 2000.

Mr. Jack: The Forestry Commission has sold 33,500 hectares of land in England since the disposals programme was introduced in 1981. As announced in Cm 2214, "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1993-94 to 1995-96 for the Department of the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Forestry Commission", table 13.10, the commission plans to sell 15,000 hectares of forest land in Britain in each of the next three years. The proportion of this that will be sold in England will depend on the state of the market, particularly the demand for forest land in different parts of the country. The sales programme for 1996-97 and beyond is under consideration and it is not possible at this stage to estimate precisely what area of land will remain in the commission's ownership by the year 2000.

Set-aside

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the predicted effect on wild birds of the move to non-rotational set-aside.

Mr. Jack: Non-rotational set-aside if properly managed can deliver considerable benefits to wild birds. We have issued specific guidance on how to manage set-aside land (either non-rotational or rotational) for ground-nesting birds and for wildfowl. In addition, one of the specific management options open to farmers is for wild bird cover, which can be used to provide winter feeding grounds for birds as well as cover during the rest of the year. However, it should not be forgotten that rotational set-aside land can also provide valuable feeding grounds for wild birds.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the present acreage of land that is now in set aside; and what money is being paid in grants to farmers whose land is now in set aside.

Mr. Jack: Around 90,000 hectares—218,000 acres—of land are currently entered into the five-year set-aside scheme. There is no land currently in set-aside under the arable area payments scheme, since the set-aside period for 1992-93 ended earlier this summer. Provisional United Kingdom figures for the amount of land set-aside under the scheme for 1992-93 are 555,632 hectares (1,372,411 acres).

Payment rates under the five-year set-aside scheme vary, depending on which scheme option the applicant has chosen, how much land has been entered into the scheme and when the applicant joined the scheme. The maximum current payment rate for the permanent fallow option is £222 per hectare (approximately £90 per acre).

Payment rates under the arable area payments scheme are calculated on the basis of regional yields and therefore vary in the different countries of the United Kingdom. The payment rate for set-aside in England for 1992-93 is expected to be £253 per hectare (approximately £102 per acre).

Animal Welfare

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many investigations have been conducted by each local authority into potential breaches of the Welfare of Animals During Transport Order 1992; how many were successful prosecutions; and what was the average level of fine within each local authority area.

Mr. Soames: We have no information on how many individual investigations are carried out, but we have records of six successful prosecutions by local authorities under the order resulting in fines totalling £3,540. Local authorities have also issued more than 40 written cautions and regularly carry out random checks on livestock vehicles.

Fishing Nets

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what proposals are being considered to allow the continued use by EC fishing vessels of drift nets over 2·5 km in length after 31 December; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what measures currently exist to minimise the by-catch of striped and common dolphin by drift nets and other fishing methods.

Mr. Jack: Following international concern about the impact of large-scale pelagic drift netting on marine resources, including dolphins, the EC prohibited, from 1 June 1992, any EC fishing vessel from using drift nets more than 2·5 km long. However, a derogation allows vessels that fished for long-finned albacore tuna with drift nets in the north east Atlantic for at least two years before the regulation came into force, to use drift nets up to 5 km long until 31 December 1993. The headline of these nets must be submerged at a minimum depth of 2m to minimise risk of by-catches of small cetaceans. No United Kingdom vessels qualify for this derogation—which automatically expires unless the Council of Ministers decides to extend it in the light of scientific evidence showing the absence of any ecological risk. No proposal for a continuation of the derogation has been received. As a further measure to minimise dolphin by-catches, in October 1992 the EC prohibited any EC fishing vessel from encircling schools or groups of marine mammals with purse seine nets.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make it her policy to make representations to the representatives of the Russian Federation attending the convention of contracting parties of the sea disposal of wastes, being held in London on 8 to 12 November, on the dumping of Russian liquid radioactive wastes in the sea of Japan on 17 October.

Mr. Jack: The consultative meeting of the London Convention 1972 will receive a report on the recent sea disposal of radioactive waste by Russia. This should permit a more informed view of what has taken place and will allow us to determine the terms of any necessary representations on this matter to the Russians. The United Kingdom expressed its concern about the past illegal Russian disposal of radioactive waste in the economic declaration following the G7 summit in Tokyo in July.

Sellafield

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the experiment in monitoring the sea discharge of radioactive technetium 99 from Sellafield.

Mr. Jack: This Ministry's fisheries laboratory at Lowestoft is carrying out measurements of technetium-99 in the Irish sea both as part of regular monitoring work, and in support of continuing research into the mechanisms of the distribution and uptake of this radionuclide within the marine environment. Reports on this work will be published in the normal way.

Official Hospitality

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was spent on official hospitality in her Department in the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Jack [holding answer 20 October 1993]: During the 1992-93 financial year, £80,314·80 was spent on official hospitality, including £20,336 for ministerial hospitality.

The principal items included hospitality:

to overseas officials and other visitors, including, for example visitors from EC organisations and from other member states;

to industry representatives, trade associations and professional bodies;

in the course of work being undertaken for the Department by individuals or groups of individuals in an advisory capacity; and at agricultural and trade shows.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Eastern Europe

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the oral answer of the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to the hon. Member for Wallasey (Ms Eagle) of 18 October, Official Report, column 16, if he will cite further examples of the popular policies in central and eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union to which he referred.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: There has been widespread adoption by Governments of the region of policies designed to promote individual enterprise and the development of a market economy, promote respect for private property, foster civic rights and encourage the development of small businesses and the banking services to support them. These policies enjoy general support. Differences are more concerned with the speed of transition than its general direction.

Kenya

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what help has been given by Her Majesty's Government to the Kenya Government to help in the rehabilitation of street children in Nairobi, Kenya.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have provided £9,600 as a contribution towards the cost of a health care centre.

Population Control, China

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) on what occasions his officials have visited the Chinese Family Planning Association, or the Chinese State Family Planning Commission, to observe and inspect their work; and if he will make a statement;

(2) on what occasions his officials have visited China with the purpose of inspecting the effects of Chinese population control policies at district and factory level; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answers 25 October 1993]: As previously explained, the main source of information about the Chinese Family Planning Association is the International Planned Parenthood Federation. Additional information on Chinese family planning policies is obtained from officials of the British embassy in Peking.

Population Control

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what sums have been budgeted as the Overseas Development Administration's contribution to the International Planned Parenthood Federation and the United Nations Fund for Population Activities for the next three years.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The level of the United Kingdom contributions we provide to each of these organisations in 1994-95 is under consideration. We provide funds one year at a time.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what information has been supplied to him by the International Planned Parenthood Federation and the United Nations Fund for Population Activities regarding the detailed budgets and activities funded by the IPPF and UNFPA annual donations in support of the Chinese population control policy; and if such information is confidential;

(2) when the Overseas Development Administration became a participant at the International Planned Parenthood Federation annual doners meeting;

(3) on what date the Overseas Development Administration became a member of the United Nations Fund for Population Activities.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answers 25 October 1993]: We have participated regularly in IPPF annual donors meetings since these started in 1971, and have funded UNFPA's global activities since 1968. UNFPA and IPPF provide donors with full details of their budgets and programmes in China.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent meeting between Dr. Halfdan Mahler and officials of his Department following the former's visit to China in February.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 25 October 1993]: Officials discussed with Dr. Mahler a range of issues, including the question of coercion in China's family planning programmes, the quality of reproductive health care in China, and the role of IPPF and the Chinese Family Planning Association.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what information he has regarding the physical damage to Chinese who attempt to remove intra-uterine devices inserted by law; and what information he has on the levels of fines levied on women who are found to have illegally removed IUDs or illegally avoided their insertion;

(2) what information the International Planned Parenthood Federation and the United Nations Fund for Population Activities provided to his Department regarding regional laws and district-regional governing of Chinese population control.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 25 October 1993]: We have received a number of reports on family planning legislation in China and are aware that family planning regulations in some provinces stipulate the imposition of fines if IUDs are removed without prior approval.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the factors taken into account by his Department in providing aid to organisations working in the field of population control.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The Overseas Development Administration aims to promote the ability of women and men to exercise free choice about when to have children, and to improve reproductive health. Funds are provided to a number of non-government and international agencies which share these goals and which are categorically opposed to all forms of coercion in family planning programmes.

Tibet

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what information he has regarding the activities of the Chinese Family Planning Association in Tibet;

(2) what response he is making to the Campaign Free Tibet publication, "Children of Despair", a copy of which has been sent to him.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 25 October 1993]: We maintain a regular dialogue with the International Planned Parenthood Federation about the role and activities of the Chinese Family Planning Association. We will continue to raise with the Chinese authorities our concern about reports of human rights abuses in Tibet and elsewhere in China.

Infanticide, China and Tibet

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding his investigation into the practice of infanticide, in China and Tibet, of babies born without state permission.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 25 October 1993]: We are aware of allegations of infanticide in China, but have obtained no further information which enables us to relate these allegations to Chinese Government policy.

PRIME MINISTER

Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations he has from the north west assembly of the Pensioners Liaison Forum about retirement pensions; what reply he is sending; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have received a petition. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security will be arranging for a reply to be sent on my behalf.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Eurolunacies

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide a full list of the developments referred to as Eurolunacies in page 3 of his booklet, "The European Community: Facts and Fairytales".

Mr. Goodlad: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has said in the foreward to the booklet, everyone has their own favourite story about the European Community. We all have our own ideas of things that we think the Community should not be doing. We have set out in the booklet some genuine examples of apparently unnecessary or even ridiculous Community rules, which we describe as "Eurolunacies".

Sudan

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what the British Government are doing to ensure that human rights are respected in Sudan and that the current violation of human rights is stopped;

(2) what the British Government are doing to further the peace process in Sudan and to bring the fighting to an end.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on 18 October at column 79 to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Small Heath (Mr. Godsiff).

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications of the presentation on regional nuclear non-proliferation in south and east Asia made by the United States Secretary of State to the annual meeting of Foreign Ministers of the Association of South-East Asian Nations and their dialogue partners in Singapore on 26 July for the security of Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United States Secretary of State devoted part of his statement at the Association of South East Asian Nations post-ministerial conference in July to regional security issues. He stressed the United States commitment to nuclear non-proliferation and said that the United States would continue to work with the nations of the region to maintain a peaceful and secure Asia. The achievement of their objective is in the interests of the whole region, including Hong Kong.

Embassies

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the savings made to his budget by establishing United Kingdom diplomatic representation to the former Soviet republics in the embassies of Germany instead of establishing completely independent representation.

Mr. Goodlad: British diplomatic representation is collocated with the German embassies in Kazakhstan, Almaty, and Belarus, Minsk. The fact of being collocated with another embassy does not circumscribe the independence of our missions.

In Almaty, the United Kingdom pays £35,000 per annum rent and our share of refurbishment costs will be around £55,000. If we had occupied separate accommodation, rental costs would have been up to £80,000 per annum excluding refurbishment costs, which would have been considerable.

In Minsk, our collocation in the existing accommodation is on a temporary basis as both embassies require additional space. A FCO estate surveyor is currently in Minsk and will assess the options. Savings cannot yet be estimated.

In addition to savings on rent, there should be further savings arising from collocation from the sharing of support staff and maintenance costs.

Subsidiarity

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the EC directives that the Government believe should be (a) amended or (b) repealed as a result of the application of subsidiarity.

Mr. Goodlad: It is not our intention to publish such a list. We have, however, fed ideas into the Commission at several stages as a contribution to the report that it is preparing on subsidiarity for the Brussels European Council in December. The Commission report will, of course, be published.

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many missions to Iraq have now been conducted by the United Nations Special Commission, pursuant to United Nations Security Council resolution; if he will place in the Library copies of the published reports of the UNSCOM visits; and if he will make a statement on progress made during the most recent visit to Iraq.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Nations Special Commission on Iraq has completed 62 missions to Iraq. The 63rd is at present in Iraq. Detailed reports of individual UNSCOM missions are not published. However, general accounts of progress on the location and elimination of Iraqi weapons of mass destruction are published by the United Nations every six months. The last of these (S/25977) was issued on 27 June. In addition, ad hoc reports are issued throughout the year covering significant developments, for example S/26571 on Ambassador Ekeus' recent trip to Baghdad. The same applied to reports of the IAEA, eg S/26584 on Iraqi obligations in the nuclear field. All these documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

The present mission to Iraq, UNSCOM 63, is proceeding so far without hindrance. Iraq however has still to satisfy the Security Council that it has provided

"full, final and complete disclosure of all aspects of its programme to develop weapons of mass destruction"

as required by United Nations resolutions.

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he has taken in the light of reports of recent chemical attacks by the Government of Iraq on its own population.

Mr. Hurd: We are trying to establish whether reports of the use of chemical weapons in Iraq are true.

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise in the United Nations Security Council the question of recent chemical attacks by the Government of Iraq on its own population.

Mr. Hurd: We are investigating reports that Iraq has used chemical weapons. We would raise in the Security Council any evidence of actions in contravention of Security Council resolution 687.

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has received in respect of recent chemical attacks by the Government of Iraq on its own population.

Mr. Hurd: An Iraqi opposition group, the Supreme Council for Islamic Revolution in Iraq (SCIRI) has told us that the Iraqi army has attacked villages in southern Iraq using chemical weapons. We as yet have no firm evidence of such attacks.

EDUCATION

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has carried out of the educational implications in London of reductions in section 11 funding.

Mr. Robin Squire: Provision for the education of pupils from ethnic groups in London is primarily a matter for schools and local education authorities. Section 11 funding supports existing projects in the 1993-94 financial year at the grant rate of 75 per cent. of salary costs. For the subsequent two years, section 11 grant is available to support existing projects and posts at the reduced rates of 57 per cent. and 50 per cent. respectively. The Department is aware of the valuable contribution which section 11 grant makes to meeting the particular needs of ethnic minority pupils in London and will monitor the effects of the reduction in the rate of support for future years using the services of Ofsted.

Training

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has had from the chairman of the Manchester training and enterprise council in regard to the future of work-based training for 16 to 19-year-olds; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: The chairman of the Manchester TEC wrote about these matters on 4 October and I have already replied to him. The Government are committed to increasing the participation and attainment of young people in both education and training. That will be achieved through a combination of GCE/GCSE qualifications, national vocational qualifications and general NVQs, including the new vocational A-level. The Government want school, college or work-based routes to be available to young people so that individuals can choose the best route for them.

Dearing Report

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will give details of the representations he has had from teachers' unions regarding the Dearing report; and if he will list the unions which have declared a refusal to carry out the revised tests.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend has recently met representatives of the teachers' unions to discuss the Dearing report. While the declared policy of the National Union of Teachers, the National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Women Teachers and the Association of Teachers and Lecturers is that a boycott is still in place, the unions have indicated that they wish to consider their position in the light of the sample tests and other guidance that have been sent to schools by the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority this month.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many grant-maintained schools he expects to be operating by April 1994.

Mr. Robin Squire: We have never set targets for numbers of grant-maintained schools, nor do we intend to. Seeking self-governing status is a matter for parents at individual schools, and statutory proposals to my right hon. Friend are decided on their merits.

There are currently 693 self-governing schools, and an additional 63 have been approved for incorporation by April 1994. A further 221 schools have applications in the pipeline, and a significant number of others may be expected to arrange ballots between now and April.

Further Education Colleges

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) to what extent the 1993-94 budget of each of the further education colleges with in excess of 4,000 full-time equivalent students, has been adversely affected by changes in local education authority policy on the level of funds devoted to discretionary awards;

(2) to what extent Sheffield college's 1993-94 gross budget has been affected by Sheffield city council's decision to cease paying the course fees of adult disadvantaged students; and if he will take steps to ensure that the college's 1993-94 gross budget is protected against the consequences of Sheffield city council's decision.

Mr. Boswell: The allocation of funding to colleges in the FE sector is a matter for the Further Education Funding Council (FEFC). The council's aim in its allocations for 1993-94 is to secure stability of funding for colleges by comparison with their 1992-93 net budgets and to provide the opportunity for growth in student numbers in line with my right hon. Friend's initiative to encourage 25 per cent. growth in the further education sector over the three year period to 1995-96. The FEFC's allocations to individual colleges will not be affected one way or the other by local education authorities' decisions on discretionary awards.

Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what was the proportion of students in receipt of discretionary local education authority funded fee remission at each of the further education colleges with in excess of 4,000 full-time equivalent students, for the academic year 1992-93; and whether discretionary awards were included in the college's delegated budget or treated as income in each case;

(2) how he intends to ensure that students enrolled on further education courses are not adversely affected by local education authorities' decisions to reduce their expenditure on discretionary awards.

Mr. Boswell: The information requested for 1992-93 is not collected centrally. Tuition fees paid by LEAs as part of discretionary awards would normally have been treated as college income. The provision of discretionary awards is a matter for local education authorities. The early results of a national survey of LEA discretionary awards—supported by the Department, and yet to be completed—show total numbers of awards continuing to rise: both numbers and total spending are above the levels of three years ago. Within that overall picture, some LEAs may be reducing their provision or altering their priorities: that is a matter for them.

Funding Agency for Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement on the procedure adopted in the appointment of the head of the Funding Agency for Schools and the timetable for further appointments to the agency.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Education Act 1993 provides for the chairman of the Funding Agency for Schools (FAS) to be appointed by the Secretary of State. My right hon. Friend appointed Sir Christopher Benson, chairman-designate of the FAS on 14 October.

The post of chief executive was widely advertised nationally and a formal interview panel has met to consider short-listed candidates. My right hon. Friend expects to announce an appointment soon. He also expects to announce the full membership of the agency in the new year.

EMPLOYMENT

Commissioner for the Rights of Trade Union Members

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was (a) the total cost of the office of the Commissioner for the Rights of Trade Union Members, (b) the numbers of staff employed, (c) the number of cases investigated during the past 12 months and (d) the cost per case investigated.

Miss Widdecombe: In the 12 months to 31 March 1993, the total net cost of all the commissioner's activities was £433,142. She employed five staff, whose costs are included within that figure. The commissioner has no powers to investigate cases, but deals with applications for financial assistance with certain court proceedings. During the 1992-93 year, the commissioner's office dealt with nearly 500 inquiries, and 50 formal applications for her assistance.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Parliamentary Works

Mr. Steen: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission what has been the change in members of staff in the Parliamentary Works Directorate since January.

Mr. Beith: Since January there has been no net change in the number of staff in post in the Parliamentary Works Directorate, although a temporary chartered building surveyor has been brought in to cover for a member of staff on long-term sick leave.

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Commission if he will list the works started or completed during the summer recess in (a) the Palace of Westminster and (b) the parliamentary outbuildings together with the cost, or estimated cost of each item; and if he will list the programme of works for the next six months.

Mr. Ray Powell: This is a matter for the Director of Works and I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

Asbestos

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission if he will make a statement on the discovery and programme of removal of asbestos in the main Library during the summer recess; on how many occasions asbestos contamination has been identified in the Palace of Westminster; and what risks to the health of the people working in the Palace are posed by asbestos.

Mr. Beith: Like most older buildings, the Palace of Westminster contains asbestos, which was used for insulation purposes. Since it became known that exposure to asbestos dust can be dangerous the Parliamentary Works Directorate, and its predecessors, have sought to follow strictly the guidelines and procedures laid down by the Health and Safety Executive. An asbestos register is maintained recording the locations both where asbestos is known to remain—usually because it is inaccessible—and from which it has been removed; only firms on the approved list are used for asbestos removal work and the work is carried out in the approved manner.

It is the practice, whenever possible, to remove asbestos found when undertaking maintenance and other works services. As a result, the ceiling voids and floor spaces used for cables and other services are now clear of asbestos. The work carried out this summer, in connection with POLIS 3, was in areas which had not been cabled previously to any significant extent. Hence the discovery of a considerable amount of asbestos. The professional assessment is that the asbestos had not been disturbed for some considerable time, but should not therefore have presented any risks in the past or present any for the future. However, a full record has been made of the discoveries and will be kept on the register.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Blyth Valley were receiving invalidity benefit in (a) 1991, (b) 1992 and (c) 1993; and if he will break down the figures by sex and standard age range.

Mr. Scott: The administration of invalidity benefit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available, a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. Michael Bichard to Mr. Ronnie Campbell, dated 26 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions raised about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security, asking how many people in Blyth Valley were receiving Invalidity Benefit (IVB) in (a) 1991, (b) 1992 and (c) 1993; and if he will break down the figures by sex and standard age range.

The information you require is not available in the format requested. This is because statistics are not maintained by District/Benefit Offices for recipients of IVB broken down by sex and age range.

However, it is possible to state the number of claimants to IVB at the last working day of April 1991, April 1992 and April 1993 in the Blyth Benefit Office, which deals with Blyth Valley.

You should note that although I have provided statistics for the Blyth Valley Benefit Office, that office's boundaries do not correspond with county or borough boundaries and the figures provided include some customers living in areas other than Blyth Valley.

(a) At the last working day of April 1991, there were a total of 4,106 people claiming IVB.

(b) At the last working day of April 1992, there were a total of 4,194 people claiming IVB.

(c) At the last working day of April 1993, there were a total of 4,740 people claiming IVB.

I should explain that these figures include a small minority of customers who have claimed but are not receiving IVB. For instance, where customers have an underlying entitlement to IVB which has been extinguished by the payment of a higher overlapping benefit.

These figures were obtained from a 100 per cent. clerical count of cases in the Benefit office.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mrs. S. E. Green

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the case of Mrs. S. E. Green, national insurance No. TW 44 81 53 C; and for what reasons she was not informed in time of the possibility of making additional contributions.

Mr. Hague: The administration of retirement pension is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. Michael Bichard to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 26 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions raised about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security, asking for what reasons Mrs. S. E. Green, National Insurance No. TW 44 81 53 C, was not informed in time of the possibility of making additional contributions.

I can confirm that Mrs. Green did not meet the minimum qualification for Retirement Pension. On 21 May 1951 she exercised here right as a married woman to pay reduced rate National Insurance contributions and she reaffirmed this choice on 22 August 1960 and 12 April 1962. Each time Mrs. Green notified the Department of her choice she would have completed form CF9 and signed the declaration that she had read leaflet NI1 or had had the contents explained to her. This leaflet sets out the position of married women with regard to National Insurance and explains the effect non payment of contributions has on title to benefit.

I should explain that whilst an election not to pay contributions is in force the woman has no right to pay any Class 3 contributions to improve her pension entitlement.

It is, of course, open to a woman to cancel her choice at any time, although having done so, she cannot later return to paying reduced rate contributions. An application to cancel a choice must be made in writing in advance of the date the change is to take place.

As Mrs. Green attained age 60 on 12 September 1987/the last date for which contributions would count for pension purposes in her case was 5 April 1987. She would therefore have had to cancel her contribution choice before that date to allow any subsequent voluntary contributions to count towards her pension. However, the Department's records show that Mrs. Green did not make an enquiry until August 1987 at which time it was too late to change her choice of contribution.

The Department does all it can to ensure that contributors are aware of their responsibilities and pension rights through its leaflets, public notices, local radio, the press and the freephone advice line. However, the onus is on the individual to make sure that they have the information they need about the scheme to maintain their contribution records, protect their benefit rights and claim benefit at the proper time.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Benefits

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Blyth Valley are receiving income support, family credit and housing benefit; and what percentage of the Blyth Valley population this represents.

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. Michael Bichard to Mr. Ronnie Campbell, dated 26 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many people in Blyth Valley are receiving Income Support, Family Credit and Housing Benefit; and what percentage of the population this represents.

The information you require is not available in the format requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. This is because statistics relating to Family Credit and Income Support are collected by Benefits Agency Branch Office and for Housing Benefit by Local Authority, whose boundaries do not correspond exactly with those of parliamentary constituencies, as requested. To obtain all the relevant information it would be necessary to examine all records in the offices covering the Blyth Valley constituency.

However, I can tell you that, as at 31 August 1993, there were 10,309 recipients of income support and, as at 1 October 1993, 1,246 recipients of Family Credit in the area covered by the Benefits Agency's Blyth Branch Office.

The Blyth Valley constituency is served by Blyth Valley and Wansbeck Local Authorities. For 1992 the average number of Housing Benefits recipients for Blyth Valley was 7,177 and for Wansbeck 6,302. The figures quoted are averages of the quarterly counts of Housing Benefits cases. It is not possible however to state what percentage of the Blyth Valley population this represents as the Office of Population and Censuses have advised that population estimates are not made by parliamentary constituency. The official census of 1991 showed that there were 79,584 people living in the county district of Blyth Valley.

The information has been obtained from the Family Credit Unit, the Analytical Services Division and the Income Support Management Information Statistics.

I hope this information is helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Close Companies

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of cost to the Exchequer in terms of national insurance not paid because of the establishment of close companies following the abolition of the investment income surcharge in 1984 and in each year since 1984.

Mr. Dorrell: No such estimates have been made.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many close companies paid advance corporation tax in (a) 1985 and (b) 1992.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that close companies cannot be identified separately in payment records of advance corporation tax.

Tax Avoidance

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken, or proposes to take, to withhold Government business and contracts from financial, legal and accounting bodies involved in advising or creating offshore vehicles for the avoidance of United Kingdom taxation.

Sir John Cope: The grounds on which Departments decide to do business with any firm will depend upon the individual circumstances of each appointment.

In general, Departments seek to ensure that there are no matters which could reduce a firm's effectiveness in performing the services for which it is to be appointed and that there are no matters which make it inappropriate for Government to have business dealings with the firm.

Jet Engine Fuel

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research has been undertaken by his Department on the treatment of jet engine fuel for taxation purposes within other EC countries; and what information he has on the revenue accrued from this form of taxation.

Sir John Cope: The treatment of jet engine fuel for taxation purposes within the EC is set out in relevant EC directives, particularly in article 8(1) of EC directive 92/81/EEC which provides for the exemption from excise duty of such fuel for the purposes of air navigation other than private pleasure flying.

Under article 8(4), which permits further exemptions or reductions, Belgium, Denmark, France, Ireland, Italy and Portugal are authorised to apply air navigation concessions.

The EC sixth VAT directive restricts VAT relief for the supply of aviation fuel to commercial aircraft operating on international routes.

No revenue accrues in the United Kingdom from excise duty on jet fuel. We have no information on such revenue accrued in other member states.

Tobacco and Alcohol Imports

Mr. Mills: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he is taking with Her Majesty's Customs to monitor vehicles making frequent trips to France to import tobacco products and alcohol for personal use.

Sir John Cope: With the advent of the single market, Customs no longer carry out routine fiscal checks at intra-EC borders and do not routinely monitor the movement of private vehicles between the United Kingdom and France. Customs are, however, taking measures to combat the importation of goods ostensibly for personal consumption but intended for sale without payment of United Kingdom duty. They are gathering intelligence information which can be rapidly disseminated to support their efforts to seek out and prosecute those who sell excisable goods here without paying United Kingdom duty.

Personal Taxation

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 27 May, Official Report, column 666, what is his estimate for the number of people taxed on (a) PAYE, (b) schedule D and (c) schedule E basis and of the tax yield for each category in 1993-94.

Mr. Dorrell: Available estimates for 1993-94 are as follows:

Source of income	Number of individual taxpayers[1] (million)	Tax yield[2] (£ billion)
PAYE and other Schedule E	23·1	51·4
Schedule D[3]	3·4	9·1

[1] A taxpayer with both a Schedule E and Schedule D source of income is included in both rows of the table.
[2] The tax yield represents the tax liability on each type of income where that income is regarded as the top slice of a person's income.
[3] Excluding interest taxed at source.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what would be the effect on the number of higher rate taxpayers in the financial year 1994-95 of (a) indexation, (b) freezing the main personal allowances, (c) freezing personal allowances and the higher rate threshold, (d) raising personal allowances by 5 per cent. more than indexation and (e) raising personal allowances by 10 per cent. more than indexation, giving figures separately for each main allowance and a total for main allowances;

(2) what would be the effect on the number of taxpayers in the financial year 1994-95 of (a) indexation of the main personal allowances, (b) freezing the main personal allowances, (c) increasing allowances by 5 per cent. more than indexation and (d) increasing allowances by 10 per cent. more than indexation, giving figures separately for each main personal allowance and a total for all main allowances.

Mr. Dorrell: Latest estimates for 1994-95 are shown in the table.

Millions

		Taxpayers Number	Of which liable at higher rate
(i)	Indexation	25·0	2·3
(ii)	Freezing the personal allowance	25·2	2·3
(iii)	Freezing the married couple's allowance[1]	25·1	2·3
(iv)	Freezing all main allowances	25·2	2·3
(v)	Freezing all main allowances and the basic rate limit	25·2	2·4
(vi)	Raising the personal allowance by 5 per cent. more than indexation	24·6	2·2
(vii)	Raising the married couple's allowance by 5 per cent. more than indexation	25·0	2·3
(viii)	Raising all allowances by 5 per cent. more than indexation	24·5	2·2
(ix)	Raising the personal allowance by 10 per cent. more than indexation	24·2	2·2
(x)	Raising the married couple's allowance by 10 per cent. more than indexation	24·9	2·3
(xi)	Raising all allowances by 10 per cent. more than indexation	24·1	2·2

[1] References to the married couple's allowance include the effect of changing the additional personal allowance and the widow's bereavement allowance.

Self-employment

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate for 1992-93 the number of self-employed who will pay no income tax, giving figures separately for those with gross incomes (a) under £5,000 a year, (b) between £5,000 and £10,000 a year, (c) between £10,000 and £15,000 a year, (d) between £15,000 and £20,000 a year and (e) over £20,000 a year.

Mr. Dorrell: There are about 870,000 self employed with no income tax liability in 1992-93. Of these, 720,000 have gross income of under £5,000, 150,000 have gross income between £5,000 and £10,000 and 3,000 have gross income of over £10,000.

The estimates are based on the projection of the latest annual survey of personal incomes and are provisional. The number with gross income above £10,000 is too small to allow any further breakdown.

Taxpayers

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) pursuant to his answers of 2 April, Official Report, column 477, what is his most recent estimate of the number of taxpayers paying tax at the 20 per cent. rate;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 475, what is his most recent estimate of the number of taxpayers.

Mr. Dorrell: Latest estimates for 1993-94 based on projection from the 1991-92 survey of personal incomes are given in the table. All taxpayers pay some tax at the 20 per cent. rate.

1993-94 Taxpayers

All taxpayers	5,300	490	7,900	990	3,800	980	4,800	490	24,800

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 477, what is his most recent estimate of the number of taxpayers and non-taxpayers, including a breakdown for (a) lone parent families and (b) (i) working and (ii) non-working people.

Mr. Dorrell: The latest estimates of the numbers of taxpayers and non-taxpayers for 1993-94 are as follows:

	Taxpayers (millions)	Non-taxpayers (millions)
Working[1]	21·6	3·9
Non-working	3·2	17·4
Total	24·8	21·3
Of which lone parents	0·6	0·7

[1] Employees and self-employed.

Actors

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to restore schedule D status for actors working in theatres.

Mr. Dorrell: Employment status for tax purposes of all individuals, including actors, is determined by general law and the facts of their individual circumstances. We have no plans to change this.

Residual Holdings and Debt

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what new expenditure has been incurred recently in order to finance the disposal of residual holdings and debt; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: New expenditure has been incurred to cover:

(i) the costs of advisers, estimated at £5,000, in connection with the placing of Her Majesty's Treasury's Rights Issue Shares in the Mersey Docks and Harbour Company plc (MDHC);

(ii) minor residual expenditure, estimated at £14,000, in connection with the Treasury's 1992 sale of privatised companies' debt.

Parliamentary approval of this new expenditure will be sought in a winter supplementary estimate for Her Majesty's Treasury's sale of shares in British Telecommunications plc vote (class XVII, vote 17).

Pending that approval, repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund were sought to meet urgent expenditure estimated at £19,000.

Child Benefit

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the net saving which would be made by the abolition of child benefit after taking account of the extent to which those families in real need would have their income support increased by the same amount.

Mr. Burt: I have been asked to reply.

It is estimated that the saving arising from the abolition of child benefit net of income support, housing and council tax benefit offsets would be £4·25 billion in 1993-94.

VAT

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the yield from VAT on domestic fuel at (a) 17½ per cent., (b) 8 per cent. and (c) 5 per cent.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 26 October 1993]: The Financial Statement and Budget Report gives an estimate of £930 million for the yield of 8 per cent. VAT on domestic fuel and power applied in 1994-95. The first full year of revenue at 17½ per cent. is 1996-97 when the revenue is estimated to be £2,850 million. Table 9 of the publication, "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs", implies that the revenue from 5 per cent. VAT on domestic fuel and power in 1993-94 would be £700 million though this estimate makes no allowance for behavioural changes.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely revenue income from imposition of VAT on books, newspapers and other publications; what calculation he has made of the possible effect upon employment in the printing, publishing and allied industries as a result of imposition of VAT on those items; and what estimate he has made of the cost to the Exchequer of such job losses in terms of benefits payable, loss of pay-as-you-earn and national insurance contributions and Government contributions to redundancy payments.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 26 October 1993]: Table 9 of the Treasury's "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" provides an estimate of £1,100 million as the cost of zero-rating books, newspapers and magazines in 1993-94. This estimate makes no allowance for the likely behavioural response to applying the standard rate of VAT to these items. The consquences for employment and second order effects are difficult to estimate with accuracy.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Moated Sites

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action his Department is currently taking to record and preserve moated sites of archaeological interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: There are no confirmed moated sites in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) the surveys and (b) excavations that are currently being carried out of moated sites of archaeological interest.

Mr. Atkins: No surveys or excavations of moated sites are in progress.

Sour Gas

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the power stations which have been authorised to use sour gas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: No power station in Northern Ireland has been authorised to use sour gas.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 14 July, Official Report, column 579, when he hopes to make a report in respect of the result of the review being carried out by the Royal Ulster Constabulary into its guidelines concerning informants and agents; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Consideration of the relevant issues is still continuing.

Nurses

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what surveys he has carried out to determine the number of nurses working in Northern Ireland who were born in the Irish Republic; and what percentage this represents of the total.

Mr. Ancram: No such surveys have been carried out.

Potatoes

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is now his estimate of the tonnage of (a) seed potatoes of each variety and (b) ware potatoes by market description, grown in Northern Ireland in 1992; what tonnages of each were sold for the home and foreign seed and for human consumption by category; and what are the differences between the present estimates and 1992's forecasts made at various dates by his Department.

Mr. Ancram: The final estimate of marketable potatoes produced in Northern Ireland in 1992 is 282,000 tonnes. As regards the production of seed potatoes by variety I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given him on 2 April at column 447. The estimated use of ware potatoes produced in Northern Ireland in 1992 is given in the following table:

	Tonnes ('000)
Human consumption	111
Internal processing	24
Sales outside Northern Ireland	31
Used for planting	15

Note: The information cannot be disaggregated further as requested.

Utilisation of the 1992 crop of seed potatoes is as follows:

	Tonnes ('000s)
Certified seed for planting in Northern Ireland	20
Certified seed sold to Great Britain	8
Certified seed sold outside the United Kingdom	20

Disaggregation by variety of sales (in tonnes) to Great Britain and outside the United Kingdom is provided in the following table:

Variety	Great Britain	Outside the United Kingdom
Arran Banner	—	3,514
Desiree	380	7,318
Home Guard	553	786
Kerr's Pink	—	1,508
King Edward	152	1,942
Pentland Dell	1,363	681
Record	33	447
Others, including protected varieties	5,493	3,396
TOTAL	7,974	19,592

The final estimates differ from earlier estimates in two respects—namely the total marketable yield and the area planted were adjusted downwards. The initial estimate of total marketable yield of 343,000 tonnes was reduced to 304,000 tonnes to take account of estimated harvesting losses. The total area was reduced from 11,500 to 10,800 hectares as a result of revised census methodology. The latter change resulted in the estimated total marketable yield being further reduced to 282,000 tonnes.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farmers received sums under the potato aid scheme for 1992's crop; what tonnage was (a) accepted and (b) had aid paid on them under that scheme; and what was the total sum expended.

Mr. Ancram: Payments were made to 523 growers; 41,793 tonnes were provisionally accepted under the scheme and 39,476 tonnes were purchased. Expenditure totalled £1,660,968.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the tonnage of (a) seed and (b) ware potatoes grown in Northern Ireland in the current year.

Mr. Ancram: This information will not be available until mid-December.

Overseas Students

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of students from Northern Ireland who are presently attending courses of third-level education in Great Britain.

Mr. Ancram: The figure is 11,500.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of students from Northern Ireland who are presently attending courses of third-level education in each EC country; and what was the cost of such students to his Department and to education and library boards in each of the last three years.

Mr. Ancram: Information on the numbers of Northern Ireland students attending courses of third level education in each EC country is available only in respect of those students who are in receipt of publicly funded awards. The following tables show the number of such students and an estimate of associated costs.

Number of students

	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94
Belgium (postgraduate)	1	1	1
Italy (postgraduate)	1	1	1
Republic of Ireland (postgraduate)	10	13	15
Republic of Ireland (undergraduate)	424	686	887

Costs (£'000)

	1991-92	1992-93	1993-94
Department of Education (postgraduate)	77	100	119
Education and Library Boards (undergraduate)	1,630	2,714	3,541

Labour Statistics

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of persons from each EC country presently employed in Northern Ireland; and what statistics as to such numbers are collected by his Department or are available from the records of the Fair Employment Agency.

Mr. Atkins: Comprehensive information on the number of persons from each EC country presently employed in Northern Ireland is not available. The latest available information is that obtained from the Northern Ireland 1991 census of population. This relates to the country of birth of those in employment usually resident in Northern Ireland on 21 April 1991 and is as follows:

Country of birth	[1]Persons in employment
Belgium	34
Denmark	21
France	161
Germany	864
Greece	12
Italy	76
Luxembourg	2
Netherlands	96
Portugal	23
Republic of Ireland	12,007
Spain	42

[1] These figures include persons on government training and employment schemes.

Catering College, Portrush

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students from (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Great Britain and (c) each other EC country are presently attending the hotel and catering college at Portrush.

Mr. Ancram: The information is as follows:

Country of domicile	Number enrolled
Northern Ireland	276
Great Britain	3
Republic of Ireland	146
Other EC countries	0

Education

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will give the names of those who advise the Department of Education about the national curriculum and associated matters and in each case the body which they represent;

(2) how many people drawn from the primary school sector of education are on the Department's advisory team.

Mr. Ancram: The Northern Ireland Curriculum Council, whose function is to advise the Department on all matters connected with the Northern Ireland curriculum, consists of a chairman and 17 members. Their names, and the bodies and companies to which they belong (if any) are listed below. The members do not serve in a representative capacity—rather, all are selected for their individual knowledge and experience in the educational field. Members marked with an asterisk were chosen for their expertise in the primary school sector.

Professor D. McCloy (Chairman)
Director, Belfast Institute, Further and Higher Education

Mr. D. F. Adair
Head of Group Personnel, Ulster Bank Ltd.

Mr. A. Bremner
Controller of Programming, Ulster Television plc

Mrs. M. Breslin
Partner, Total Engineering, Londonderry

Mr. S. Costello
Manager, Marks and Spencer plc, Sprucefield

Mrs. D. A. Frazer
Vice-Principal, Fermanagh College of Education, Enniskillen

Professor J. S. Fulton
Director, School of Education, Queen's University, Belfast

Mr. E. Gamble
Principal, Beechlawn Special School, Hillsborough

Sr. Genevieve O'Farrell
Retired Principal, St. Louise's Comprehensive College, Belfast

Miss A. Graham
Principal, Cambridge House Girls', Ballymena

*Mr. D. E. McElroy
Governor Training Officer, Southern Education and Library Board

*Mr. N. McLaughlin
Principal, St. Anne's Primary School, Londonderry

Mrs. F. McMahon
Principal, St. Mary's High School, Newry

Mr. T. Nolan
Chief Executive, South-Eastern Education and Library Board

Dr. R. J. Rodgers
Retired Principal, Stranmillis College, Belfast

Mrs. J. E. Ruddock
Managing Director, Education Company Ltd., Belfast

Mr. J. Thompson
Governor Training Officer, Western Education and Library Board

Mr. J. Young
Principal, Sullivan Upper Grammar School, Holywood.

Inspectors

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many inspectors are currently employed by the Department of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Northern Ireland and how many were employed five years ago.

Mr. Ancram: There were 682 inspectors employed in 1988 and 490 in 1993. This includes a small number of officers who would not be regarded as wholly carrying out inspection duties.

Terrorist Suspects

Mr. Jim Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the statutory codes of practice in respect of terrorist suspects to come into operation.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have today laid before Parliament the draft codes of practice for the detention, treatment, questioning and identification of terrorist suspects in Northern Ireland, as I am required to do by section 61(3) of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991. I intend to make an order which will bring the codes into opertion from midnight on 31 December 1993. This short delay is to enable the RUC to ensure that all officers are fully conversant with the new codes of practice before they come into operation.

The codes, which will replace part IV of the non-statutory "Guides to the Emergency Powers", have been based heavily on the Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 (PACE) codes of practice which apply to non-terrorist suspects. Adjustments have been made where necessary to reflect the relevant emergency legislation.

The purpose of the codes is to enhance still further the already extensive safeguards available to those detained under the terrorism provisions and to provide clear and workable guidelines for the police.

SCOTLAND

Local Government

8. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has had regarding the proposed local government boundaries published in his White Paper.

31. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received following publication of proposals for changes in local government boundaries.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many letters he has received from the general public about his proposals for the reform of local government.

Mr. Lang: Since the publication of the White Paper, "Shaping the Future—The New Councils" in July, about 1,300 individual letters commenting on the reorganisation proposals have been received. In addition, about 25,000 post cards, pro forma letters and petition signatures have been submitted.

14. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to improve the quality of local government in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The creation of single-tier local government, changes to the internal management arrangements of authorities, the extension of compulsory competitive tendering and a range of other Government intiatives are all expected to improve the quality of local government in Scotland.

Edinburgh Royal Infirmary

15. Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the proposed new Edinburgh royal infirmary.

Mr. Stewart: I understand that Lothian health board has almost completed consideration of its strategy for the provision of acute services and will submit its proposals to public consultation shortly. My right hon. Friend looks forward to seeing the proposals but cannot comment on them in detail until public consultation is complete and the board's proposals are formally submitted to him for approval.

Scottish Enterprise

16. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met Scottish Enterprise to discuss its training budget.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend and I met regularly with the chairman and chief executive of Scottish Enterprise, where training budgets is one of a number of issues discussed.

"A Partnership for Good"

17. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to assess public opinion on the White Paper, "Scotland in the Union: A Partnership for Good"; and what action he intends to take.

Mr. Lang: Responses to the White Paper, "Scotland in the Union: A Partnership for Good" have been generally very favourable. Many of the proposals in the White Paper have already been implemented and most will come into operation within the next few months.

Super-quarries

18. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the environmental impact of super-quarries being sited in the highlands and islands.

Sir Hector Monro: Under the EC directive on the environment it is likely that all super-quarry proposals will require a formal environmental assessment. This must be carried out and considered by the planning authority before it reaches a view on any application.

Western General Hospital

19. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the public response to the consultation exercise on the proposal that the Western general hospital become a trust.

Mr. Stewart: The majority of individuals and organisations who responded to the public consultation on the trust proposals for Lothian did so on a general rather than hospital specific basis. These responses, totalling 121, were carefully considered by my right hon. Friend before reaching his decisions on the applications.

Greenwich Mean Time

21. Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the total extra numbers of children and adults who have been injured or killed as a consequence of the use of Greenwich mean time for part of the year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is estimated that total road casualties in Scotland might be reduced by just over 1 per cent. by the adoption of central European time, though the benefits would not be evenly spread with a possible increase in fatal and serious casualties in the northern half of the country.

Forestry

22. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to make an announcement about the future management of forestry woodlands.

Sir Hector Monro: Any announcement about the future management of Forestry Commission woodland would follow the conclusion of the work of the forestry review group, which is expected early next year. After receiving the group's advice, Ministers will need some time to consider it and decide what action, if any, should be taken.

27. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to conclude his inquiry into the Forestry Commission.

Sir Hector Monro: The forestry review group is still continuing its work, and expects to present its advice in the new year. Thereafter, Ministers will need some time to consider the advice, and decide what action, if any, should be taken.

New Towns

23. Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will next meet the new towns development corporation boards to discuss the future of new towns.

Mr. Stewart: In the period between 1 June and 14 September this year I met with each corporation board. My right hon. Friend and I are due to meet the chairmen and senior officials of the five new town development corporations before the end of the year.

26. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made with the wind-up of the Scottish new town development corporations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Since the orders providing for their wind-up were made on 24 February 1992, East Kilbride and Glenrothes development corporations have made significant progress in winding-up their affairs. Full details of progress to 31 March 1993 are contained in reports on wind-up which were published by the corporations in July along with their annual reports for that year. Significant further progress has been made since 1 April and will be published in the reports to 31 March 1994.

The three other new towns are also progressing successfully towards maturity, as a direct result of the major investments by the public and private sectors in commercial and industrial development, infrastructure and housing; and investment will continue.

Scottish Enterprise and the local enterprise companies have matured rapidly since their establishment in 1991, and are now ready to undertake the leading economic development role for all areas within their boundaries, including the New Towns.

Indeed, the process of transferring from New Towns to Scottish Enterprise strategic sites and premises for inward investment is already under way. Development corporations, in consultation with Locate in Scotland and the local enterprise companies, are taking active steps to ensure the continuity of provision of inward investment services and the retention, in either the public or private sector, of the expertise of new towns personnel in these areas.

In order to maintain continuity and an orderly transition of responsibility, as well as maintaining Scotland's ability to compete for inward investment, Locate in Scotland will assume, with effect from 1 April 1994, overall responsibility for the marketing, publicity and promotion of the new town areas as locations for inward investment. SEN and LIS will be responsible for ensuring the continuing provision of a supply of suitable property for inward investors in the new town areas. The Government's objective remains that the private sector should play a much more active part than hitherto in the process of property development for industrial and commercial purposes, and SEN with LIS will therefore liaise closely with the private sector to ensure a balanced, complementary and rational approach to industrial property provision across Scotland. In the interim, SEN will adopt the practice of the new towns to undertake a limited and controlled programme of building modern, high quality advance factory premises in order to meet the needs of inward investors.

I shall shortly be bringing forward a Bill to create a new structure for local government in Scotland from 1 April 1996. I believe it is desirable that the new unitary authorities should have, so far as possible, the full range of their responsibilities from the outset of their existence. The responsibilities which Cumbernauld, Livingston and Irvine currently hold for planning and owning and maintaining certain community and environmental assets will be transferred, along with appropriate resources, to the new unitary authorities from 1 April 1996.

The corporations are actively pursuing the Government's policy of housing tenure diversification and this will continue until wind-up. I remain committed to giving tenants the right to choose their successor landlord and ballots will take place in each of the towns during 1996 with transfers to the new landlords completed by 31 December 1996.

It is now quite clear that preparations for wind-up in the new towns are well advanced—much more so than could have been envisaged four years ago, even on the most ambitious timetable. As a result, I am today initiating formal consultation on my proposal that the wind-up periods for Cumbernauld, Livingston and Irvine should be 1 January 1994 to 31 December 1966. The proposed wind-up timetable for Cumbernauld is as set out in the 1989 White Paper, 'The Scottish New Towns—The Way Ahead' (CM 711); while my proposal accelerates by two and three years respectively the provisional timetable for Livingston and Irvine set out in the White Paper. A further period of three months to March 1997 is envisaged for final dissolution of the three corporations as legal entities.

As well as making good sense in practical terms, the accelerated timetable will preclude the need to spend significant additional resources on maintaining the original wind-up timetable. Agreed plans for infrastructure and other developments will be resourced. The rationalisation of inward investment-related activities, outlined above, also allows some scope for efficiency savings.

The new town development corporations have an impressive track record achieved by the commitment of their corporation boards, and the skill, energy and dedication of their staff. I believe that by their wind-up dates all of the corporations will have provided successful and mature towns, capable of further growth and development within the broader framework for local government and economic development. I look to the corporations and their staff to adapt their customary commitment and skills to ensure that the wind-up process is completed smoothly and on time.

In order to ensure the widest possible understanding of what the wind-up will mean in practical terms, a leaflet will be distributed to every household and business in each of the new towns.

Sunday Trading

24. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received about the Sunday trading law.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since November 1992 my right hon. Friend has received nine representations, including two letters from one individual, supporting the recent Shops (Amendment) Bill; one letter against and one seeking assurance that the Government's Sunday trading proposals for England and Wales will not affect Scotland.

Environmental Objectives

25. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his environmental objectives for Scotland during the coming year.

Sir Hector Monro: The environmental objectives for the Scottish Office are set out in the Scottish Office publication, "Serving Scotland's Needs", published in February 1993. They cover action to protect and enhance the environment of Scotland for current and future generations.

Drug Education

28. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he plans to improve drug education in Scottish schools following the latest report on this subject from the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We are studying the Council's report and the Government will be responding to it in due course. Meanwhile we have arranged for a copy of the report to be sent to every school in Scotland.

The drugs task force, established under the chairmanship of my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State will also be reviewing drug prevention and education activities in Scotland. As part of that review, the task force will be examining the current arrangements for drug education in schools and considering what further practical measures might be taken.

Home Insulation Grants

29. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy on home insulation grants.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The home energy efficiency scheme provides grants for loft, tank and pipe insulation, draughtproofing and energy advice to low income households in receipt of certain social security benefits. Housing authorities have powers to give improvement and repairs grants to householders, which can include works for energy efficiency measures. Scottish Homes can also provide grants in certain designated areas.

Open Government

30. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made to date under the terms of the open government initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My Department is taking steps to implement the proposals set out in the Government's recent White Paper, "Open Government" (Cm 2290). In particular, consideration is being given to the arrangements which will be needed to comply with the principles of the code of practice on access to Government information which comes into effect on 4 April 1994.

Meanwhile, thought is being given to the possible early release of blocks of records less than 30 years old; and a review of previously withheld material over 30 years old is being undertaken.

Regional Development Fund

32. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total value of grants that Scotland has received from the European regional development fund since its inception.

Mr. Stewart: Since the inception of the European regional development fund in 1975, Scotland has benefited from awards totalling almost £1·2 billion.

A77

33. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will report progress on upgrading the A77 between Kilmarnock and the M8.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office and Strathclyde regional council are examining whether the planned new section of motorway from the existing link to the M8 in Glasgow to the south of Newton Mearns can be undertaken as a single joint contract. If this proves feasible and funds are available, tenders for this scheme could then be sought.

South of this, preparation work is underway for extending the motorway between Newton Mearns and Kilmarnock and it is hoped that draft statutory procedures will be published early next year.

House Condition Survey

34. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities relating to the recent publication of the Scottish house condition survey.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: COSLA was represented on the survey steering group.

Services Provision

35. Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to meet representatives of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss the provision of services.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend and I will be meeting representatives of COSLA on Friday of this week as part of the normal consultation on local government finance matters.

Economy, Lanarkshire

36. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the Lanarkshire economy.

Mr. Stewart: My right hon. Friend has received no recent representations regarding the Lanarkshire economy.

Trust Hospitals

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current situation as regards NHS trust hospitals in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: Seventeen NHS trusts are currently operational in Scotland. Most of these have been in existence for only six months but evidence is already emerging to confirm the experience of Aberdeen Royal hospitals and South Ayrshire trusts who in their first year treated more patients then ever before, improved facilities, and provided services more suited to patient needs.

European Transport Links

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the Government's response to the main conclusions and recommendations contained in the Scottish Affairs Committee's first report of 1992-93, on the future of Scotland's transport links with Europe.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has today published "The Future of Scotland's Transport Links with Europe: Government Response" (Cm 2335). The Government have welcomed the consideration given by the Committee to this important subject. The Government's response reflects the very careful attention which has been paid to the Committee's recommendations. We have assured the Committee that its views will be taken fully into account by the Government in addressing future transport priorities.

Workplace Nurseries

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many workplace nursery facilities have been financially assisted from Government resources; and if he will list where each is located.

Mr. Stewart: The provision of welfare benefits at the workplace is a matter for the employer concerned. However, in the 1990 Budget we introduced tax relief under the normal business tax rules for an employer's day-to-day expenditure on child care provision for employees' children. This was a carefully targeted measure, aimed at encouraging employers to increase the supply of good quality nursery care and to help them meet expected changes in workforce patterns over the 1990s.

In Glasgow, Scottish Enterprise has provided £440,000 for the Glasgow development agency to establish The Partnership Nurseries Company which aims to provide additional nursery places in and around the city centre. Sixty-four such places will be provided initially when the company starts operations.

Private Rented Accommodation

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of (a) young single people, (b) other single people, (c) couples and (d) couples with children who are looking for privately rented accommodation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not available.

NHS Trusts

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will place in the Library copies of the comments received on each application for NHS trust status;

(2) if he will list all those who have responded to each trust application, and give the number of responses in favour and against in each case.

Mr. Stewart: Copies of all comments received in response to the public consultations on the third wave NHS trust applications have been retained by the relevant health board and are available for inspection. In due course copies will also be available for inspection in the library of the Scottish Office at New St. Andrew's house, Edinburgh. Three hundred and eighty responses were made to the trust applications covered by the announcement by my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State on 15 October. The numbers expressing explicit support or opposition or offering comments are shown in the table.

Third wave NHS trust applicants (batch 1)—Public consultation responses

Trust applicant	For	Against	Comments
Dumfries and Galloway Acute and Maternity Services	9	7	8
Dundee Healthcare	6	7	10
East and Midlothian Edinburgh Child Health Edinburgh Priority Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh Western General	[1]17	[1]47	[1]57
Falkirk Royal Infirmary	8	5	41
Forth Valley Healthcare	6	5	18
Fife Healthcare	2	6	9
Greater Glasgow Community and Mental Health	6	9	29
Hairmyres and Stonehouse	3	10	7
Law	3	7	9
Perth and Kinross	7	7	9

[1] Responses cover all five Lothian applications.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he received (a) supporting and (b) opposing the applications for the establishment of an NHS trust for Mid and East Lothian.

Mr. Stewart: The public consultation covering the five Lothian trust applications attracted 121 responses. Most were general rather than hospital specific but 54 referred to the East and Mid Lothian application. Ten expressed explicit support, 26 opposition and 18 offered comments.

Farming

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the reason for, and consequences of, the discrepancy between the arable base area declared by his Department to the European Commission, and the actual area revealed through the integrated administration and control system on non-less favoured area farms in Scotland;

(2) what representations he has made to the European Commission about the impact of penalties to be imposed on arable farming businesses in the non-less favoured area of Scotland as a consequence of the failure of his Department to give accurate information about arable areas before 1993; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of such representations.

Sir Hector Monro: The original base areas provided on 16 September 1992 for the arable area payments scheme (AAPS) introduced this year were based on agricultural census data. In the light of information subsequently available from claims submitted under the AAPS as part of the integrated administration and control system it became apparent that these data understated the amount of land on which non-less favoured area rates of subsidy were payable.

As soon as it became apparent that an adjustment to the base area figures originally submitted to the Commission was necessary, my right hon. Friend personally pressed the Commission to agree to a technical adjustment of the Scottish base areas. The Commission has now agreed to the necessary technical adjustment of the less favoured area and the non-less favoured area elements within Scotland's total base area; this adjustment has not altered the total base area originally provided. My right hon. Friend and I are most grateful to the Commission for agreeing to that readjustment.

There remains an overshoot in the non-LFA area which reflects an increase in cropping in that area. The EC regulations governing the arable area payments scheme stipulate that the effect of this overshoot is to reduce arable aid payments within the non-LFA area proportionately in the current year and to increase the set-aside requirement in the coming year by the percentage by which the regional base has been exceeded, that increase being uncompensated.

My right hon. Friend and I fully recognise that any penalty will be unwelcome to arable farmers. We cannot however vary the total Scottish base area, which reflects data already formally submitted to the Commission; nor can we adjust the area base control regime in mid-stream. The scheme is designed to penalise areas in excess of base areas on which aid is claimed; and we cannot simply ignore the problem of over-cropping and the resultant penalty and additional one-year set-aside requirement.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the basis for the non-less favoured area arable acreage declared by his Department to the European Commission; what was the difference between that figure and the actual figure in 1993; and what assessment he has made of his Department's analysis of figures provided by farmers in agricultural returns before 1993.

Sir Hector Monro: The non-less favoured area arable areas declared to the Commission for the purposes of the arable area payments scheme were based on those declared in the annual agricultural census averaged over the three years 1989 to 1991, adjusted to take account of the difference between the statistical basis of the census and the subsidy basis of the arable area payments scheme. The difference between the area claimed in 1993 and the area declared is 23,247 hectares. The arable area payments scheme regulations specify the basis on which declared areas had to be determined.

Lead Pipes

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects lead piping to have been removed from all domestic premises.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Private owners must decide for themselves if and when to replace lead plumbing within their homes. Grant assistance, at a preferential rate, may be available from the local authorities for such work. Availability is dependent on the priority the local authorities attach and the resources available to them and is also subject to the applicant's means. Local authorities determine their own priorities for their stock and the rate of removal depends on the priority they attach and the resources available to them.

Accommodation Agencies

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make it his policy to license accommodation agencies.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No.

Balerno Corridor

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had from people in West Lothian, Midlothian, Prestonpans and Musselburgh about the Balerno corridor.

Mr. Stewart: We have received about 60 individual letters and around 400 postcards and petition signatures from these areas specifically about the proposed Lothians authority.

Learning Disabilities

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people with learning disabilities who need residential care are living at home with carers over 60 years old in each health board area.

Mr. Stewart: This information is not held centrally.

Scottish Enterprise Network

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women have (a) entered newly-created jobs and (b) entered training for non-traditional jobs in the past year as a result of Scottish Enterprise Network's activities.

Mr. Stewart: The information requested is not available.

Inward Investment

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is taking to encourage further inward investment into Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: The Scottish Office Industry Department is continually, through the work of Locate in Scotland, promoting Scotland as a location for inward investment. Also, earlier this month my right hon. Friend visited the far east and I myself visited the United States where discussions were held with existing and potential investors.

Smoke Alarms

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish statistics relating to the number of injuries or deaths resulting from fires in the home in each of the last five years; what estimate he has made of the number of such instances in which injury or death might have been avoided had a smoke alarm been installed; what information is available regarding the number of hearing impaired people involved in such incidents; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The annual Home Office publication "Fire Statistics United Kingdom", copies of which are held in the Library, includes numbers of fatalities and non-fatal casualties in Scotland arising from fires in occupied buildings including dwellings. No information is available on the number of hearing impaired people involved in such incidents.

In his annual report for 1992, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Fire Services for Scotland recorded the view of fire brigade officers that in 63 of the 92 dwelling fires involving fatalities which occurred in Scotland in 1992 the installation of a properly maintained smoke alarm system could have given an early warning of the outbreak of fire to which the occupants could have responded.

In the same report Her Majesty's chief inspector estimated that some 60 per cent. of Scottish dwellings are fitted with smoke alarms. The Scottish Building Regulations require the installation of a hard wire smoke alarm system in the construction of all new houses. The Government, recognising that the cost of a smoke alarm is small compared with the benefits offered in providing early warning of the outbreak of fire, continue to promote and encourage the installtion and maintenance of smoke alarms in homes throughout Scotland.

HEALTH

Private Hospitals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under which provision of the NHS Acts the removal of patients from London to private hospitals in Northumbria and York is permitted.

Mr. Bowis: Decisions on where a patient should be treated are the responsibility of the purchasing authority. The transfer of detained patients from one hospital to another is authorised by section 19 of the Mental Health Act 1983.

Older Patients

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what efforts are currently undertaken by her Department to monitor the effect of NHS purchasing agreements upon older patients.

Mr. Sackville: The responsibility for assessing the health care needs of local populations, including those of older patients, and for placing and monitoring contracts which secure good quality, value for money services to meet those needs, lies with purchasers locally.

Weil's Disease

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recommendations she is issuing to stop people drinking direct from bottles of (a) beer, (b) lager, (c) mineral water and (d) milk in case they become infected with Weil's disease; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Mouthwashes

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to require manufacturers of mouthwashes which contain ethanol to provide warnings on product labels to the effect that the liquid could be carcinogenic;

(2) if she will make it a requirement on mouthwash manufacturers to specify clearly on the product label the percentage volume of the liquid comprising ethanol;

(3) if she will initiate a publicity campaign on the link between mouthwashes containing ethanol and the incidence of oral cancer.

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Health considers that there is insufficient and conflicting evidence in relation to a link between ethanol and oral cancer and therefore does not intend to initiate a publicity campaign on this matter or introduce warnings on licensed products containing ethanol.

Ethanol is an excipient in a number of mouthwashes licensed as medicines in the United Kingdom. Regulations taking effect from 1 January 1994 will require all excipients in medicines to be declared in any package leaflet and the presence of ethanol will also have to be shown on the packaging.

Dental Handpieces (Sterilisation)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made as to the effectiveness of the sterilisation of dental handpieces by autoclaving according to manufacturer's instructions.

Dr. Mawhinney: The effectiveness of sterilisation was referred to the Microbiology Advisory Committee which advises the Department on sterilisation practice applicable to the health service. In May 1993 the committee recommended that dental handpieces should be cleaned in accordance with the manufacturers' instructions and then subjected to steam sterilisation.

Diabetics

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made as to the suitability of insulin pens for delivering animal insulin to diabetics; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Cartridges containing animal insulins for use with insulin pens are not available. No assessments have therefore been made as to the suitability of insulin pens for delivering animal insulin to diabetics.

NHS Contractors

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the increases in remuneration of all contractors within the national health service for the year 1993-94, indicating any increases in pay and expenses in money and percentage terms.

Dr. Mawhinney: The increases in remuneration of national health service contractors in 1993-94 are as follows:

General Medical Practitioners: The intended average net income of general practitioners increased by £600 or 1·5 per cent. In addition, the level of practice expenses incorporated into fees and allowances increased by £2,190 or 11 per cent. Fees and allowances payable to GPs increased by an average of 3·3 per cent. as a result of these changes.

General Dental Practitioners: The target net income of general dental practitioners increased by £537 or 1·5 per cent. In addition the practice expense of GDPs increased by £1,481 or 3·0 per cent. The average increase in pay and allowances payable to GDPs was 2·42 per cent.

Pharmacists: Pharmacists' remuneration is contained within a global sum out of which all fees and allowances are paid. There is no separate element for expenses. In 1993-94, the global sum for England was increased by 1·5 per cent. to £596 million.

Ophthalmic Medical Practitioners: The NHS sight test fee paid to OMPs increased to £10·15. This included an increase of 11 pence or 1·5 per cent. in the pay element and 7 pence or 2·75 per cent. in the expenses element of the fee.

Optometrists: No agreement has yet been reached with representatives of the optometric profession about the level of sight test fee for 1993-94.

Bed-and-breakfast Accommodation

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish tables 3 and 5 from the 1991 census local base statistics 100 per cent., showing group 15.1 which includes bed-and-breakfast accommodation for homeless families separately by (a) parliamentary constituencies in Britain and (b) local authority districts in Britain.

Mr. Sackville: Tables 3 and 5 in the 1991 census English county and Scottish region reports give figures for each local authority district for group 15, "Other miscellaneous establishments". To produce separate figures for the two constituent sub-groups (15.1 "Miscellaneous family establishments" and 15.2 "Others") for local areas at this stage would incur disproportionate costs and delay other census output. Even if the statistics were to be produced, the numbers would be very small for some areas, and some of the statistics might need to be withheld or combined to preserve confidentiality. Copies of the reports are available in the Library.

Smoking

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the percentage of regular smokers among 11 to 15-year-olds in boys and girls in 1990 and 1992; and what is the target for this age group in "The Health of the Nation".

Mr. Sackville: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys reports of smoking among secondary schoolchildren in 1990 and 1992 provide the following information about smoking prevalence among 11 to 15-year-olds. Copies of both reports are available in the Library.

Regular smokers among boys and girls aged 11 to 15 years: England, 1990 to 1992

Per cent.

	Boys	Girls	Total
1990	9	11	10
1992	9	10	10

Source: OPCS.

The "Health of the Nation" target for 11 to 15-year-olds is to reduce smoking by at least 33 per cent. by 1994 (from about 8 per cent. in 1988 to less than 6 per cent.).

Pharmaceutical Prices

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she plans to announce a new pharmaceutical price regulation scheme agreement.

Mr. Sackville: After several months of negotiation, the Department of Health and the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Society agreed the terms of a draft agreement on 10 August 1993. The draft agreement was then circulated for consultation to all companies selling branded prescription medicines to the national health service, and, with their consent, the Association of British Pharmaceutical Industries endorsed the agreement on 26 August.

The agreement came into force on 1 October 1993 and is intended to run for five years. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Details of the draft agreement and of its endorsement were announced in press releases from the Department on 10 August and 26 August. Copies of these press releases, H93/909 and H93/933, are available in the Library.

Primary Care Workers

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to attract primary care workers to inner London.

Dr. Mawhinney: In 1993-94, £40 million extra has been made available for investment in primary care within the London initiative zone. It is for national health service management to decide how best to use these resources, in accordance with local needs, including, where it is considered appropriate, for primary care staff.

GP Fund Holders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has on the extent to which fund-holding patients are being seen ahead of non-fund-holding patients who have greater clinical need.

Dr. Mawhinney: Departmental guidance EL(91)84 is clear. There are common waiting lists for all urgent cases. It is clinicians who decide clinical priority. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

General Practitioners

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average net remuneration for general practitioners in inner London family health service authority areas; and what is the national average.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 22 July at column 290. More recent data suggest that payments for achieving higher levels of coverage for childhood immunisations and cervical cytology screening and for administering Hib meningitis vaccine added an estimated £2,790 to the average general practitioner's net remuneration in 1992-93.

Rubella Vaccination

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to include rubella vaccinations in the targets for general practitioners.

Mr. Sackville: Rubella vaccination has been part of general practitioners' targets for childhood immunisations since April 1990 when the target payments scheme started.

Consultants' Merit Awards

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of the consultants merit award system in each of the last five years; and what plans she has to change the system.

Dr. Mawhinney: In 1990-91, financial returns showed a total of £41,370,322 paid in distinction awards to consultants in the national health service in England. The further information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The arrangements for distinction awards are regularly kept under review.

National Health Service Management Executive

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to review the costs of the NHS management executive headquarters in Leeds.

Dr. Mawhinney: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's statement on 21 October about the management of the health service in England, explained the intention to streamline the central management of the national health service, including the headquarters of the NHS management executive in Leeds. The functions carried out by the NHS management executive headquarters will be reviewed and management cost targets set in the light of this process. Further information about the proposed changes is provided in a background document "Managing the new NHS", copies of which are available in the Library.

Services (Purchasing)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions on which a clinician's choice of provider has been judged as unwarranted in 1991-92 by the purchasing authority; and what that figure represents as a percentage of all extra-contractual referees.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. The grounds on which an extra-contractual referral can be refused are clearly laid out in "Guidance on Extra Contractual Referrals" (EL(92)60), copies of which are available in the Library.

MHS Policy Board

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria she will use to select the eight additional non-executive members on the NHS Policy Board drawn from the new regions.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is proposed that these non-executive members of the policy board will be appointed as chairmen of the eight interim regional health authorities, and they will need the same qualities as their forerunners. There are many suitable candidates known to us both in national health service bodies and from outside the NHS who will be considered for these posts.

Cervical Cancer

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what progress her Department is making in arrangements for a final clinical trial of the HDA test for cervical cancer;

(2) which regional health authority was requested by her Department to fund the final clinical trials into the HDA test for cervical cancer.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is not involved in making arrangements for a clinical trial into the HDA test, and has not requested any regional health authority to fund the trial.

Any evaluation of the test would be between Quest and the medical scientific community to arrange. Decisions on the use of regional research and development resources is for local determination.

Statistics

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys' policy on the release of statistics.

Mr. Sackville: Subject to the overriding requirement of confidentiality, the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys' (OPCS) policy on the release of statistics is based on the principles of availability, openness, quality, timeliness, pre-announced timetable, simultaneity, and independence. A full statement of its policy is available from OPCS, and I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library. The key points are as follows:

OPCS is committed to maintaining the confidentiality of the data which it collects about individual people and groups of people such as families, households, and organisations.

OPCS makes information available from all the statistical data which it collects on its own behalf, in as convenient a form as possible.

OPCS is open about its sources and methods.

OPCS is committed to the provision of good quality statistics.

Statistics are made available as early as practicable.

Statistics are released to a pre-announced timetable.

OPCS's statistics are made available to all users from the same time, with limited specified exceptions on a strict need-to-know basis.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease arising as a result of medical intervention.

Mr. Sackville: There is no evidence that Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease (CJD) has been transmitted in the United Kingdom through any human organs or tissues other than pituitary gland extracts or dura mater.

There has been one reported case, in the United States of America in 1974, in which a patient who had previously received a corneal transplant subsequently developed CJD, and another possible case related to the transplantation of heart membrane tissue.

Cases of CJD in the United Kingdom continue to be monitored, and particular attention paid to factors in the patient's medical history that could possibly have caused CJD.

We are satisfied that existing controls protect the public from transmission of CJD through medical interventions. However, the Department will urgently assess any new evidence which suggests a need to review these controls, and will provide further guidance as necessary.

A document summarising the situation has been placed in the Library.

Dentistry

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists, who have not given notice to leave the dental list, have given written notice to each family health service authority to terminate or de-register some or all of their capitation arrangements for child patients each month since July 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 21 October 1993]: Tables will be placed in the Library showing, for each month, the number of dentists in contract with each family health services authority who have de-registered child patients since July 1992. Where dentists hold contracts with more than one FHSA, the number of dentists quoted could include duplications. The information provided by FHSAs weekly since July 1992 shows that in the period up to 15 October 1993, 239 dentists gave written notification to de-register some child patients. This represents 1·37 per cent. of the number of dentists, 17,400, in contract with FHSAs at 30 June 1992.

The number of children de-registered was 1,734. At 31 August 1993 child registrations were 8 per cent. higher than at 1 July 1992.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists who have not given notice to leave the dental list have given written notice to each family health service authority to de-register some or all of their continuing care arrangements for adult patients in each month since July 1992; how many dentists have de-registered patients; and how many patients have been de-registered.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 21 October 1993]: Tables will be placed in the Library showing for each month, the number of dentists in contract with each family health services authority who have de-registered adult patients and the total number of adult patients de-registered since July 1992. Where dentists hold contracts with more than one family health service authority, the numbers of dentists quoted could include duplications. The information provided weekly by family health service authorities since July 1992 shows that in the period up to 15 October 1993, 2,222 dentists gave written notification to de-register 556,204 adult patients.

Despite these notified de-registrations, the total number of adult patients registered with a dentist in England increased by over 0·884 million (4·3 per cent.) from 20·580 million to 21·465 million over the period 1 July 1992 to 31 August 1993.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what response was given by the officer commanding Royal Air Force unit Goose bay to the letter from the commander of No. 5 wing, Canadian forces, dated 11 June, requesting assurances that Royal Air Force units visiting Goose bay are notified of the importance of complying with Canadian national and local flying orders.

Mr. Hanley: Following the letter from the commander of No. 5 wing, Canadian forces, officer commanding RAF Goose bay wrote to officers commanding of all Tornado GR1 squadrons which deploy to Goose bay on a regular basis stressing the importance of adhering to the Canadian national and Goose bay local flying orders during deployments to Goose bay. Moreover, commanding officers were reminded that these procedures would be covered as part of the brief given on arrival at Goose bay. Similar advice will be given to any other squadrons planning to deploy to Goose bay in the future.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on future plans for Royal Air Force training at Canadian forces base Goose bay beyond the expiry of the current multinational memorandum of understanding.

Mr. Hanley: The current multinational memorandum of understanding on the use of Canadian forces base Goose bay expires on 31 March 1996. The Canadian authorities are carrying out an environmental review of the effect of military activity in the area. Continued use of Goose bay by the Royal Air Force will depend on decisions taken by the Canadian Government in the light of this review, and on any subsequent negotiations with the Canadian Government.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if RAF aircrew planning low-level training flights over Germany are required to supply details of their intended route to the authorities responsible for the German low-flying management system.

Mr. Hanley: Royal Air Force aircrew planning to fly at low level over Germany during daylight hours are not required to supply details of their intended route to the authorities responsible for the German low-flying management system. The German night low-flying system is one of fixed routes and RAF aircrew planning to fly at low level at night are required to notify which route they intend to fly.

Corporal Haymand (Spectacle Repairs)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of flying Corporal Martin Haymand serving with the Royal Regiment of Wales in the Falkland Islands, the round trip to Bristol to have his spectacles repaired; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Corporal Hayman required spectacles for carrying out his normal duties. While an optician visits the Falkland Islands each year the next visit is scheduled for July 1994. On medical advice, corporal Hayman was advised to return to the United Kingdom to obtain replacement spectacles after his own were broken. He occupied a spare seat on a regular RAF flight, returning to the Falkland Islands four days later taking the next available free seat. These seats would have been unoccupied if corporal Hayman had not used them and therefore there was no extra cost to the taxpayer.

Nuclear Testing

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by year since 1965 the number of nuclear bomb tests that have been carried out by his Department.

Mr. Aitken: The United Kingdom has conducted the following numbers of nuclear tests since 1965:

	Number
1965	1
1966	0
1967	0
1968	0
1969	0

Mine Counter-Measures

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by year for the last four years, the number of new mine counter-measures vehicles his Department has purchased; what is the estimate for the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: There have been no purchases of mine counter-measures vessels in the last four years. The last batch ordered was for four single role minehunters (SRMH) in 1987. The first of this batch, HMS Inverness, was accepted from the shipyard, Vosper Thornycroft Ltd, in February 1991 and the last of the batch, HMS Bridport, was accepted in June 1993. We hope to make an announcement on single role minehunters before the end of the year.

International Atomic Energy Agency (Inspectors)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to allow the International Atomic Energy Agency to conduct special inspections at undeclared sites in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Aitken: The powers of the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) to make special inspections at declared sites in the United Kingdom are defined in article 73 of the United Kingdom/Euratom/IAEA agreement on the application of safeguards in the United Kingdom (Cmnd. 6730). Because the United Kingdom is a nuclear weapon state under the terms of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, the question of special inspections at undeclared sites does not arise.

Defence Diversification

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the Government's policy on defence diversification.

Mr. Aitken: The Government's policy is that decisions on how to adapt to changing market circumstances, and what products to make, are for the commercial judgment of companies.

The Department of Trade and Industry provides advice and assistance to companies who may be considering diversification, including a recently published handbook called "Changing Tack". That Department, together with the Department of Employment, also administers the United Kingdom participation in the EC KONVER programme, which is designed to assist regions affected by the decline in the armaments industry and the closure of military bases.

Housing

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters in the United Kingdom have been transferred to local housing authorities; and what is their total value for the last 10 years.

Mr. Hanley: Over the last 10 years at least, 1,918 surplus married quarters have been sold to housing associations or local authorities at a value of over £55 million. Because records for the earlier years are not maintained in a way which allows such sales to be easily identified, these figures may underestimate the true position. In addition a substantial programme of leasing has been carried on throughout the period and we currently have 1,057 properties on lease to these organisations and others.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the names of those estate agents and other specialists called in to advise the Defence Land Agent on the disposal of MOD property.

Mr. Hanley: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member once such a list has been compiled.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total value of sales of MOD land and buildings sold by the Defence Land Agent over the last 10 years.

Mr. Hanley: The value of land and buildings sold by my Department in each of the last 10 years expressed in millions of pounds is as follows:

	£ million
1983-84	42·0
1984-85	27·7
1985-86	60·2
1986-87	75·6
1987-88	77·8
1988-89	149·6
1989-90	74·0
1990-91	81·6
1991-92	102·2
1992-93	68·0
Total	758·7

Tornado

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what analysis has been conducted of the reasons for the improvement in the Tornado GR1 major accident rate since 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: A number of factors has been identified as possible reasons for an improvement. Given such a short statistical period however it has not been possible to conclude whether these are significant.

Depleted Uranium Ammunition

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the storage sites and operational bases which have been authorised for storage or handling of depleted uranium ammunition.

Mr. Hanley: Depleted uranium ammunition is stored in a small number of military munitions depots in the United Kingdom. It is not the Department's practice to disclose the locations where specific types of ammunition are stored.

RAF Upper Heyford

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future use of RAF Upper Heyford.

Mr. Hanley: Since the United States Department of Defense announced that it would be returning RAF Upper Heyford to MOD control by the end of September 1994 we have been investigating alternative defence uses for the airfield thereafter; this work continues. On a contingency basis my officials have been participating in working party discussions with the local authorities to consider the options for the long-term redevelopment of the airfield should no alternative defence use be identified.

Jaguar and Harrier

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the differences in role, mission assignment and capability between the Jaguar and Harrier in Royal Air Force service.

Mr. Hanley: The Jaguar and new Harrier GR7 fulfil similar roles. Both aircraft have a long range air-interdiction capability; they are capable of all offensive support missions and are assigned to NATO in that role. While the Jaguar is currently more capable in the tactical reconnaissance role, the Harrier possesses a longer range, greater weapons carriage capability and a modern avionics suite with an operational under-the-weather night capability. Also the Harrier has unique ship-borne operational capability.

Goose Bay

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what requirements have been notified to the Canadian authorities by his Department, for additional facilities in the low-level training areas around Canadian forces base, Goose bay for (a) weapons training, (b) electronic threat simulation and (c) air combat manoeuvring instrumentation, for use by Royal Air Force aircraft.

Mr. Hanley: Requests for additional facilities at Goose bay are not made in isolation by any one nation, but are progressed with the Canadian authorities on a multi-national basis, once the requirement has been agreed between user nations. User nations have recently expressed a desire to construct another practice weapons training range with a laser target marking facility, and provide electronic threat simulators. We are not aware of any plans to suggest a requirement for air combat manoeuvring instrumentation facilities.

Land, Blyth Valley

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much land his Department owns in Blyth valley; and how much of that land is unused.

Mr. Hanley: The MOD owns three married quarters at Stakeford (total area 0·097 hectares). The MOD also leases land at Cramlington, on which five married quarters (total area 0·121 hectares) are situated, and the Royal Naval Auxiliary Service (RNXS) training centre at North Harbour in Blyth—total area 0·012 hectares. All the married quarters and the training centre are currently occupied.

Corporal Jake Malcolm

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action his Department is taking following the award of £6,500 to corporal Jake Malcolm following racial discrimination shown to him while serving in the United Kingdom armed forces; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: It has been made clear throughout the services that racial discrimination, harassment or abuse will not be tolerated. Since the case of corporal Malcolm, the Army has issued a letter to commands reminding them of the armed forces' policy on race relations. To reinforce this policy, a code of practice on race relations will be published shortly for dissemination throughout the services.

Nuclear Deterrent

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of gross domestic product was committed to Britain's nuclear deterrent in each year since 1988.

Mr. Hanley: Figures for the years in question are available only for the strategic nuclear deterrent. Those relating to the years up to and including 1991-92 are derived from tables published in the statistical volume of the annual "Statement on the Defence Estimates" prior to 1992. The figures for 1992-93 and 1993-94 are based on ad hoc exercises to identify the capital and operating costs associated directly with the strategic deterrent.

Year	Expenditure on strategic nuclear force (£ million)[1]	Percentage of gross domestic product
1988-89	1,072	0·23
1989-90	1,158	0·22
1990-91	1,480	0·27
1991-92	1,445	0·25
1992-93	1,245	0·21
1993-94	1,177	0·19

Nuclear Weapons Transport

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will carry out a full public consultation on the policy of transporting nuclear weapons by road; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: No. A Ministry of Defence guidance document, on the actions to be taken in the event of an accident involving a nuclear weapon was however issued to all civil emergency services and local authorities in England, Scotland and Wales in December 1992 and their comments have been invited.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will fully consult chief police officers, chief fire officers and local authority emergency planning officers on the movement of nuclear weapons by road through heavily populated areas.

Mr. Hanley: The views of individual officers from the civil emergency services and local authorities are already invited during MOD training courses. Additionally an MOD guidance document, on the actions to be taken in the event of an accident involving a nuclear weapon was issued to all civil emergency services and local authorities in England, Scotland and Wales in December 1992 and their comments have been invited.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will allow local authority emergency planning officers to attend Ministry of Defence training programmes for nuclear weapons transportation accident contingency plans.

Mr. Hanley: Emergency planning officers can already attend the MOD nuclear weapon accident training course.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the level of risk of a nuclear accident arising as a result of the transportation of nuclear weapons by road.

Mr. Hanley: Our nuclear weapons are always transported in containers which are designed and tested to keep the warheads safe from the effects of severe impacts and prolonged fires, and the vehicles in which they are transported by road provide a further substantial level of protection. Because of multiple layers of protection and the intrinsic safety of the weapons themselves there is no plausible road accident involving the transport of a nuclear weapon which could result in a radiological hazard to the public.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what emergency framework is available to respond to a nuclear incident resulting from road transport of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Hanley: The planning for the response to a nuclear accident is described in the document entitled, "Local Authority and Emergency Service Information on Nuclear Weapon Transport Contingency Plans", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Pregnant Service Women

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the costs to his Department occasioned by industrial tribunal cases concerning allegations of unfair dismissal by service women dismissed from the services on the ground of pregnancy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: It is not possible to estimate what the cost will be to the Ministry of Defence of sex discrimination cases referred to industrial tribunals by service women dismissed on grounds of pregnancy between August 1978, when the EC equal treatment directive came into force, and August 1990, when the policy of compulsorily discharging pregnant service women was discontinued. Those service women eligible for compensation who are dissatisfied with the amount offered by the Department are entitled to apply to industrial tribunals for determination of their claims.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the number of service women dismissed by the services on the ground of pregnancy in (a) the Royal Navy, (b) the Army and (c) the Royal Air Force in each of the past 20 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of women dismissed from the services on the ground of pregnancy since April 1973, the earliest date for which the information is available, are as follows. The numbers of female officers leaving on pregnancy can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The figures given are estimates based on the percentage of non-commissioned females leaving each year due to pregnancy:

Financial year	Female officers			Non-commissioned females			Total
	Royal Navy	Army	Royal Air Force	Royal Navy	Army	Royal Air Force
1973-74	5	9	11	129	287	260	701

1989-90	4	14	15	84	157	157	431
1990-91[1]	1	7	5	25	69	51	158

[1]Figures for 1990-91 reflect the introduction of maternity leave in August 1990.

The Ministry of Defence is offering compensation to women dismissed from the services on pregnancy following an agreed order of the High Court applying EC Directive 76/207—the equal treatment directive. Those eligible to claim compensation were dismissed between August 1978, when the equal treatment directive came into force, and August 1990, when the policy of compulsorily discharging pregnant service women was discontinued. The total number of potential claimants is estimated at 5,700.

Depleted Uranium Swarf

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum distance from a public footpath or other publicly accessible place permitted by regulations for the storage of depleted uranium swarf at his Department's establishments.

Mr. Aitken: All storage of radioactive material by my Department is in accordance with the statutory requirements of the Ionising Radiation Regulations 1985 and the associated approved codes of practice issued by the Health and Safety Commission. Account is also taken of the most recent guidance issued by the National Radiological Protection board on radiation exposure of the public. There is no statutory regulation or guidance pertaining to the minimum distance referred to by the hon. Member.

Military Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the contribution made by his Department to the restricted enforcement unit's work overseeing arms and military equipment exports.

Mr. Aitken: The Ministry of Defence participates fully in the restricted enforcement unit by contributing to the information exchange.

Uranium-tipped Shells

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish details, for each year since 1979, of the cost of his Department's programme of test-firing depleted uranium-tipped shells; and if he will provide a breakdown of how the costs are distributed between different departmental test ranges (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) abroad.

Mr. Aitken: Our records are not kept in a form which would enable us to answer these questions.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Parish Funding

Mr. Roger Evans: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will make a statement on the Church Commissioners' proposals to reduce the funding support for parishes over the next five years.

Mr. Alison: The Commissioners are currently discussing with dioceses what action will be needed over the next few years to correct the over-distribution of Commissioners' funds in previous years and to bring their income and expenditure into balance. This is likely to involve a mixture of reductions in allocations and the transfer to dioceses of responsibility for some categories of expenditure. The mission and ministry of the Church will depend increasingly on the giving of church members.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

War Crimes

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General how many cases are actively under consideration for possible prosecution under the War Crimes Act 1991; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Metropolitan police war crimes unit has submitted interim reports to the DPP in 10 cases. Inquiries into those 10 cases are still being actively pursued. The inquiries are not yet complete and the question of a possible prosecution cannot be considered until they are concluded.

Siemion Serafimowicz

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration has been given to the case of Siemion Serafimowicz by the Director of Public Prosecutions; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The police are actively inquiring into allegations against Siemion Serafimowicz and as soon as those inquiries are completed, the question of any possible prosecution will be considered by the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Mrs. Lubov Voronovich

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration is being given to launching a prosecution in respect of the murder of members of the family of Mrs. Lubov Voronovich; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The Metropolitan police war crimes unit is actively pursuing inquiries in respect of this and a number of other allegations. When those inquiries are complete, the Director of Public Prosecutions will consider whether prosecutions should follow.

Treason Allegation

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Attorney-General when he expects the Director of Public Prosecutions to make a decision in respect of the complaint of alleged treason by Mr. Rodney Atkinson; how long the DPP has now been considering the complaint; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: Complaints of alleged treason made by Mr. Rodney Atkinson and Mr. Norris McWhirter were referred to the Crown Prosecution Service by the clerk to the justices at Hexham, Northumberland, on 9 September 1993. The Crown Prosecution Service wrote to the clerk to the justices on 22 October 1993 stating that, although it was entirely appropriate for the clerk to have referred the matter to the Crown Prosecution Service, the complaints themselves were misconceived and totally without foundation.

Racial Hatred Incitement

Mr. Shore: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions for incitement to racial hatred under the Public Order Act 1986 he has authorised in each year since 1987; and on how many occasions the prosecution was successful.

The Attorney-General: Since 1987, the Law Officers have consented to the prosecution of offences contrary to part III of the Public Order Act 1986 in respect of the following numbers of persons:

Year	Number
1987	0
1988	2
1989	1
1990	2
1991	3
1992	3
1993	2

Seven cases resulted in a finding of guilty and one of acquittal. In addition, one defendant was bound over; one died before trial and one case was discontinued by the Crown Prosecution Service. Prosecutions have been started, but have not been concluded, in two cases.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Rape

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration has been given to ending the right to anonymity of victims in rape trials; what current provisions govern this right; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Anonymity for complainants in rape trials is governed by the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1976.

The Government are committed to ensuring that victims of all sexual offences are encouraged to report these crimes and are well treated by the criminal justice system when they do so. In 1992, the Government supported private Member's legislation—now the Sexual Offences (Amendment) Act 1992—which extended the right to anonymity to victims of all sexual offences.

However, the Government recognise that difficult questions can arise when a defendant is acquitted and there has been substantial publicity surrounding the case. My right hon. and learned Friend has recently indicated his intention to review the arguments for and against the current anonymity provisions as they relate both to complainants and defendants.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people have been tried on charges of (a) rape and (b) attempted rape (i) in the current year using the most recent statistics and (ii) for each preceding year from 1985, inclusive;

(2) how many people have been found guilty of (a) rape and (b) attempted rape (i) in the current year, using the most recent available statistics and (ii) for each preceding year from 1985, inclusive.

Mr. Mclean: Information from 1985 to 1992—which is provisional—is given in the table. The 1993 data will not be available until the autumn of 1994.

[1] Provisional.
[2] Details of offence not known.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases of (a) rape and (b) attempted rape are recorded in (i) the most recent crime statistics for the current year and (ii) for each preceding year from 1985, inclusive.

Mr. Maclean: Figures for attempted rape are included in the rape offence classification and are not separately available. There were 4,142 recorded rapes in England and Wales in 1992. Figures for 1985-91 are published in table 2.16 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales, 1991", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Bosnian Refugees

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will name each voluntary organisation which assisted in the reception of Bosnian refugees in 1992; and how much grant each received.

Mr. Charles Wardle: In 1992, the Home Office funded the Refugee Council and the British Red Cross to provide reception arrangements for ex-detainees and other humanitarian cases, and their dependants, whom the Government brought here from the former Yugoslavia at the request of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. In 1992-93, grants of £476,000 and £86,000 were paid to the Refugee Council and British Red Cross, respectively for this purpose.

A full list of organisations making their own arrangements to assist individuals from Bosnia is not available.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation took place with representatives of the ethnic minority communities in (a) Lancashire, (b) the north-west and (c) England before the Government decided to reduce the share of section 11 funding for projects funded jointly with local authorities from 75 to 57 per cent.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Decisions made in the public expenditure round reflect the general economic situation and consultation with particular interest groups would not be practicable in the course of that process. However, we have subsequently sought the views of all interested parties on how the available funding should be used in order to achieve maximum benefit for members of ethnic minorities.

National Identity Card

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the banks about the viability of smart card technology as a basis for a national identity card system.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend has had no such discussions with banks.

Young People (Custody)

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) 15 and 16-year-olds and (b) 17 to 21-year-olds were held under sentence or remand in gaols in England and Wales at the latest date available; and what were the corresponding numbers during each of the preceding 12 months.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Jean Corston, dated 28 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking how many (a) 15 and 16 year olds and (b) 17 to 21 year olds were held under sentence or remand in jails in England and Wales at the latest date available; and what the corresponding numbers were during each of the preceding twelve months.

The information you have requested is only available for 30 June 1992 and 30 June 1993. I enclose a table detailing the population aged 15 to 20, by type of custody in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on those dates.

Population[1] aged under 21 by type of custody in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on 30 June 1993

Age	Untried	Convicted unsentenced	Sentenced[2]
15-16	85	36	308
17-20	1,890	784	4,773
TOTAL	1,975	820	5,081

[1] Provisional data.
[2] Includes those sentenced for non payment of a fine.

Population[1] aged under 21 by type of custody in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on 30 June 1992[2]

Age	Untried	Convicted unsentenced	Sentenced[3]
15-16	77	20	261
17-20	1,881	746	5,296
TOTAL	1,958	766	5,557

[1] Provisional data.
[2] Excludes those held in police cells (140 untried, 2 convicted unsentenced and 32 sentenced on 30 June 1992).
[3] Includes those sentenced for non payment of a fine.

European Police Information Centre

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much it has cost to set up the European police information centre; and what is the annual running cost.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Total capital costs have been £68,000. Running costs are expected to be £2,000 per annum.

Police (Protective Clothing)

Mr. Austin Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what investigations have been carried out to ascertain the effectiveness of issuing the Metropolitan police and other forces with protective clothing.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The operational use of protective clothing is primarily a matter for chief officers of police. So far as I am aware no investigations into its effectiveness have been carried out by police forces. The police scientific development branch offers advice to chief constables on protective clothing which is based on trials. It has also partly completed a project to assemble information about public order injuries from which it will be possible to assess the effectiveness of protective equipment.

Siemion Serafimowicz

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will withdraw the passport of Siemion Serafimowicz.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Records relating to the issue and possession of a British passport are confidential. It would not be appropriate for me to comment on this particular case.

Blakenhurst Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will give details of all complaints made by persons at Blakenhurst prison during the disturbances at that prison on 9 October;

(2) what reports he has received concerning assaults on prisoners by prison officers in the segregation unit of Blakenhurst prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 28 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about assaults on prisoners by prison officers in the segregation unit, and about complaints of assaults made by persons during the disturbances on 9 October, at Blakenhurst prison.

Six prisoners at HMP Blakenhurst have made complaints of assault allegedly committed by prisoner custody officers on 9 October. These are being investigated by the Controller as required by Section 85(4)(b) of the Criminal Justice Act 1991.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what legal action is pending by prisoners at Blakenhurst prison against prison officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 28 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about what legal action is pending by prisoners at Blakenhurst prison agaisnt prison officers.

I am not aware of any such action.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ask Her Majesty's chief inspectors of prisons to visit Blakenhurst prison and to report on the running of the prison.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Unless otherwise directed by the Secretary of State, it is for Her Majesty's chief inspector of prisons to decide when he wishes to visit and report to the Secretary of State on the running of any prison.

Each prison should be inspected about every five years.

Aero-engines

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pusuant to his reply of 21 October, Official Report, column 271-72, if he will specify the animals used to test impact consequences on aero-engines.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Ducks.

Racial Incidents

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by police force area in England and Wales, reported racial incidents so far in 1993.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not yet available. It is collated centrally on an annual basis and will be made available for the whole of 1993. All available earlier data have already been provided for years up to 1992.

Data Protection

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he is taking to implement the improvements to the administration and enforcement of the Data Protection Act 1984 recommended by the National Audit Office report on data protection controls and safeguards.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The recommendations in the National Audit Office report are primarily directed to the Data Protection Registrar. I understand that he is considering the implications of the report for the work of his office.

Racist Attacks

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many men and how many women have been killed as a result of racist attacks in England and Wales in each year since 1988.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available. The police are required to make returns of each known homicide to the Home Office, but are not specifically requested to note whether they consider the attack was a racist one.

Young Offenders

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many 15-year-olds categorised as a suicide risk were placed in a strip cell (a) 1992 and (b) 1993 to date;

(2) how many 15-year-old inmates were categorised as a suicide risk in (a) 1992 and (b) 1993 to the latest available date;

(3) how many reported instances of self-injury there were in prisons and young offender institutions involving 15-year-olds (a) remanded into custody and (b) sentenced to custody in (i) 1992 and (ii) 1993 to the latest available date.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answers 19 October 1993]: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 28 October 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General, to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about 15 year olds in prison custody who have self injured, been categorised as a suicide risk or placed in strip cells.

The number of incidents of self injury by 15 year olds in Prison Service custody in 1992 and 1993 is as follows:

	1992	[1]1993
Remand	1	2
Sentenced	19	32
TOTAL	20	34

[1] To 30 September.

There has been no self-inflicted death by a 15 year old prisoner in 1992 or 1993.

Information about the number of 15 year old prisoners who have been categorised as a suicide risk, and about the number of such prisoners placed in unfurnished or protective accommodation, is not available.

ENVIRONMENT

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received from local authorities concerning his review of standard spending assessments.

Mr. Baldry: A total of 197 local authorities have responded to our invitation to make representations on the review of standard spending assessments for 1994-95.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the extent to which the current differential in grant and standard spending assessments between different authorities for primary and secondary education (a) are excessive or (b) relate accurately to the different needs of pupils in different authorities.

Mr. Baldry: The standard spending assessment element for education is based on detailed research and analysis fully discussed with the local authority associations. Both the primary and secondary education assessments incorporate an index of additional educational need which is based on indicators reflecting the social and economic characteristics of the population of each authority.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the reasons underlying the range of standard spending assessments for other district level services.

Mr. Baldry: The standard spending assessments of individual authorities for other district level services are based on the formula set out in the Local Government Finance Report for 1993-94, which was approved by the House in February. The formula reflects those social and demographic characteristics of each area considered to be relevant in the provision of this group of services.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current timetable for the review of standard spending assessments.

Mr. Baldry: Work on the review of standard spending assessments for 1994-95 has now finished. My right hon. Friend will announce the outcome of the review later in the autumn as part of his proposals for revenue support grant for 1994-95. There will then be a period of consultation on those proposals, as in previous years.

Sheltered Housing

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning the private ownership of occupied sheltered housing; what help is available to those living in non-regulated/non-registered accommodation; and if he will set up an ombudsman scheme.

Sir George Young: The Department has received written representations from elderly leaseholders—directly or through their residents' asociations and via hon. Members.

All leaseholders are protected by the contractual terms of their lease which setout the rights and duties of landlords and tenants and the basis of the service charges. In addition, the existing legislation in the Landlord and Tenant Acts of 1985 and 1987 gives leaseholders additional statutory rights.

This protection will be augmented by new provisions in the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993. Qualifying tenants may jointly purchase the freehold of their flats. It also enables the Secretary of State to approve codes of management practice governing property management and gives tenants the right to a management audit of their landlord by an independent accountant or surveyor.

The Government are not persuaded of the case for an ombudsman scheme for privately owned sheltered housing, nor of the practicality of that approach.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the regional total of capital expenditure by the local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89 for each standard English region;

(2) what was the capital allocation for each local authority in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89;

(3) what was the national total of capital allocations for other services to local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89; and if he will give the breakdown of the total between (i) non-metropolitan district councils, (ii) county councils, (iii) metropolitan district councils, (iv) London boroughs and (v) the City of London;

(4) what was the regional total of capital expenditure on other services by the local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89 for each standard English region;

(5) what was the capital expenditure on other services by each local authority in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89;

(6) what was the national total of capital expenditure by local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89; and if he will give the breakdown of the total between (i) non-metropolitan district councils, (ii) county councils, (iii) metropolitan district councils, (iv) London boroughs and (v) the City of London;

(7) what was the regional total of capital allocations for other services to the local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89 for each standard English region;

(8) what was the capital expenditure by each local authority in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89;

(9) what was the national total of capital expenditure on other services by local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89; and if he will give the breakdown of the total between (i) non-metropolitan district councils, (ii) county councils, (iii) metropolitan district councils, (iv) London boroughs and (v) the City of London;

(10) what was the capital allocation for other services for each local authority in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89;

(11) what was the national total of capital allocations to local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89; and if he will give the breakdown of the total between (i) non-metropolitan district councils, (ii) county councils, (iii) metropolitan district councils, (iv) London boroughs and (v) the City of London;

(12) what was the regional total of capital allocations to the local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89 for each standard English region.

Mr. Baldry: I will write to the hon. Member and put the replies in the Library.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the regional total of capital expenditure on housing by the local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89 for each standard English region;

(3) what was the national total of capital expenditure on housing by local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89; and if he will give the breakdown of the total between (i) non-metropolitan district councils, (ii) county councils, (iii) metropolitan district councils, (iv) London boroughs and (v) the City of London.

Sir George Young: I will write to the hon. Member.

Revenue Support Grant

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the revenue support grant given to Barnet and Wandsworth in 1993-94; and what is the amount expressed relative to the respective populations.

Mr. Baldry: The information requested is as follows.

Local authority	Revenue Support Grant, 1993-94
	£ million	£ per head
Barnet	93·823	314·93
Wandsworth	160·203	619·18

Government Car Service

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many cars there are in the Government car service; and how many (a) use lead free petrol, (b) are fitted with catalytic converters and (c) are electric powered.

Mr. Baldry: There are currently 193 cars in the Government car service fleet; 181 use lead-free petrol and 144 are equipped with catalytic converters. With the exception of some vehicles which cannot be readily replaced, the entire GCS fleet will use unleaded petrol with catalytic converters by 1 April 1994.

No electric-powered vehicles are currently in use by the GCS. Electric-powered vehicles were trialled, but were not found to be capable of the required operating range.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what quantities of plutonium-contaminated radioactive waste material is currently stored at the Drigg site; and what plans there are to remove this material to Sellafield.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much plutonium-contaminated material is currently being stored at Drigg low-level waste dump; whether this material is intended to be moved to Sellafield; and to what extent the containers currently intended to be used for these transports comply with IAEA regulations.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

The Drigg site is owned and operated by British Nuclear Fuels plc and is used for the disposal of solid low-level radioactive waste. It has also been used for the storage of plutonium-contaminated material, a category of intermediate level waste. I understand that the company is planning to move this material to Sellafield for interim storage and pre-disposal treatment. Any such movements are subject to regulation by the Department of Transport as the national competent authority.

Wood Report

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his response to the Wood report.

Mr. Curry [holding answer 27 October 1993]: The Government have carefully considered the Wood report on the rating of plant and machinery, and industry's responses to it. The committee has produced a package of measures to update the law, to harmonise the rating systems, and to remove the substantial differences between the rules in the various parts of the United Kingdom.

We have decided that the major recommendations of the report should be implemented throughout Great Britain for the 1995 rating revaluation of all non-domestic property. The main change to the committee's propoals will be to apply these rating rules whatever the valuation technique used.

Implementation of the recommendations will involve replacing secondary legislation in England and Wales, and amending primary legislation in Scotland. The Government will consult interested people shortly on the way in which this will be done.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Reprocessed Uranium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what quantities of reprocessed uranium have been returned to overseas customers with reprocessing contracts with British Nuclear Fuels plc to date; what quantities remain stored in the United Kingdom and at which locations; and what arrangements have been put in place for the future management of reprocessed uranium arising from foreign contracts.

Mr. Eggar: Except for small quantities which have already been returned, uranium arising from reprocessing to date by British Nuclear Fuels plc of irradiated nuclear fuel on behalf of overseas customers is stored under international safeguards by the company at its various sites.

Plans for the usage of current and future uranium from reprocessing are a commercial matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc and its customers. The new oxide fuels complex at Springfields has the capability to fabricate nuclear fuels using recycled uranium from the thermal oxide reprocessing plant.

Nuclear Safety

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will bring forward proposals to require (a) the nuclear installations inspectorate and (b) Nuclear Electric to publish data on routine radioactive combination caused by the decommissioning of the Berkeley nuclear power station.

Mr. Eggar: No. Decommissioning of Berkeley nuclear power station is regulated by the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate by means of conditions attached to the nuclear site licence. These include the need for consideration of a safety case for decommissioning and arrangements for reporting incidents including those involving radioactive contamination. No significant radioactive contamination incidents have arisen during the decommissioning of Berkeley. Routine monitoring for contamination off site is carried out by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and the data are published annually.

Disqualified Directors

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps are being taken to ensure that Companies House keeps the register of disqualified directors up to date.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The register of disqualified directors is maintained and updated by Companies House from information supplied to it on new disqualifications from the various courts throughout the country. The register currently contains the names of all those directors notified to Companies House by the courts.

Companies House is working with the Lord Chancellor's Department to improve reporting by the courts.

Newspapers

Mr. William Ross: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will commission research into the arrangements for the supply and distribution of newspapers in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: No, my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has no plans to commission research into the arrangements for the supply and distribution of newspapers in Northern Ireland.

On 19 August 1992 the Director General of Fair Trading referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission—MMC—the supply of newspapers from publishers to wholesalers and wholesalers to retailers in England and Wales. The MMC reported to the President of the Board of Trade on 30 July. Its recommendations are still under consideration and until the report is published it would be inappropriate for me to comment further.

The terms of reference of the MMC's inquiry exclude Scotland and Northern Ireland, primarily because newspaper distribution arrangements there are different. However, the Office of Fair Trading continues to keep these markets under review and, when the MMC's report is published, will examine the general principles arising from its conclusions to see whether any action is warranted.

Prescribed Quantities

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to seek to amend the United Kingdom's national legislation on prescribed quantities; and what action he proposes to make in relation to current EC legislation on prescribed quantities and unit pricing.

Mr. McLoughlin: Under the existing national legislation certain pre-packed goods, including products such as biscuits, breakfast cereals, pasta and bread, must be produced in specified standard sizes. This restricts choice for the consumer—the standard sizes may not always suit their needs—and can impose an unnecessary burden on business.

Accordingly, the Government are today issuing a consultation document to interested parties about abolishing these requirements where this would not conflict with mandatory EC legislation.

With similar concerns in mind, the Government also propose to discuss with the European Commission ways of reducing the burden of the EC's legislation on standard sizes and on related unit pricing. This requires retailers to display the price per unit of measurement for certain categories of pre-packed goods where they are not made up in standard sizes.

European Regional Aid

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which areas he has proposed to the European Commission should be designated under objectives 2 and 5(b) of the European structural funds.

Mr. Sainsbury: I placed in the Library of the House on 11 October a detailed list of the areas that have been proposed. In summary, the population coverage of the proposals is as follows:

'000s

	Objective 2	Objective 5(b)
Scotland and Wales	5,211	1,087
Northern England	9,866	409
English Midlands	4,822	415
Southern England	3,525	909
Gibraltar	30	—

The Government have taken careful account of the many representations received, a list of which I have also placed in the Library. Most of the current objective 2 and 5(b) areas, with the exception of the highlands and islands of Scotland and Merseyside, are included. These two areas, like Northern Ireland, have already been designated as objective 1 areas.

A number of urban areas not previously designated, including parts of London, are included under the objective 2 criteria, which allow for the designation of urban areas with very high unemployment or industrial dereliction.

The areas proposed under objective 5(b) represent a significant increase in the coverage of British rural areas. This is made possible both by the promotion of the highlands and islands to objective 1 and the increase in financial allocations agreed at the Edinburgh Council last December. A number of areas dependent on fishing have also been proposed under both objectives, as specifically provided for in the regulations agreed by the Council in July.

Further detailed information about the extent of the proposed areas may be obtained from Mr. G. Roach in my Department—telephone 071-215 2659 or 2556.

There will now be consultation between the Commission and the Government before the Commission publish its decision probably in early December. The Commission may want to reduce the coverage of the United Kingdom's and other member states' proposals to keep allocations across the Community as a whole to a reasonable limit.

The Government's proposals are however realistic and I look forward to the structural funds continuing to make a significant contribution to the economic development of the United Kingdom's priority industrial, urban and rural areas.

The Government sent their proposals to Brussels on 6 October in order to meet the deadline set by the European Commission.

Beer and Cider

Mr. Riddick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his Department's review of policy on section 43 of the Weights and Measures Act 1985 relating to froth on beer or cider.

Mr. McLoughlin: My hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh) announced on 29 March, Official Report, columns 50-51 that, as part of the Government's deregulation initiative, the Department of Trade and Industry was reassessing the costs and benefits of the implementation of section 43 and that interested parties had been asked to provide information relevant to this reassessment.

We have now completed our reassessment of the commencement order which was made last year and which would bring section 43 into force from next April. After reviewing the costs of complying with the order, and considering the views of consumers, enforcement authorities and business we have concluded that these costs are disproportionate to the consumer benefit. They would include the cost to licensees of replacing brim measure glasses with new lined glasses or installing meters. It was also clear from the consultations that in most cases the costs of extra beer would be passed on to the consumer, with price increases amounting to about 7p a pint in pubs now using brim measures.

Accordingly, I have today revoked the commencement order thus allowing the continuation of the existing case law that a pint of beer may consist of liquid and a reasonable head. We will also bring forward, as soon as parliamentary time permits, legislation to repeal section 43.

I understand that the Brewers' Society is issuing revised guidance to its members on the dispense of draught beer. It will say that a pint of draught beer with a head should contain a minimum of 95 per cent. liquid. This guidance is issued in conjunction with organisations representing licensees. Trading standards officers will be able to refer to the guidance in court cases about short measure and the courts can be expected to attach considerable weight to it.

If customers are unhappy with the amount of liquid beer they have received they are already able to ask for, and should get, a top-up. The Brewers' Society's revised guidance will state that such requests should always be received with good grace.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response he has made to the letter sent to him on 4 August by Professor Horlock in his capacity of chairman of the Advisory Committee on the Safety of Nuclear Installations on nuclear waste management in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 27 October 1993]: I have sent a copy of Professor Horlock's letter of 4 August, and of my reply, to the hon. Member and have placed a copy of each in the Library of the House.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of reports from insolvency practitioners were rejected by the Insolvency Service in the latest available year; and if he will provide a breakdown of the numbers and percentages of rejected reports according to each principal reason for rejection.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 27 October 1993]: The percentage of reports from insolvency practitioners rejected at the vetting stage during the 12 months to 30 September 1993 was 80·3 per cent.—3,345 reports.

Of those reports, 70 per cent. identified elements of unfit conduct, but the case was not considered to be sufficiently serious or evidentially strong enough to justify proceeding in the public interest or there was clear mitigation or some other relevant factor; 24 per cent. were linked with one or more other companies/individuals subject to other insolvency procedures or proceedings; 5 per cent. were submitted with insufficient time remaining to prepare the evidence and with an insufficient basis to seek leave to extend the statutory time limit; and 1 per cent. where the whereabouts of the director were not known and service would be unlikely to be effected.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for 12 months ago.

Mr. David Davis: The expenditure by my Department on premises and personnel overseas is as follows:

	Current financial year (estimated) £	Previous financial year £
Premises[1]	10,044	7,323
Personnel[2]	1,037,086	956,991

Notes.

[1] These costs relate to HMSO's recently opened European Sales Office in Germany.

[2] These costs include the staffing of HMSO's European Sales Office (an estimated £43,551 in 1993 and £29,654 in 1992). The remainder covers the cost of British civil servants serving with European Community institutions in furtherance of the Government's initiative for wider representation in Europe.

DEFENCE

Low Flying

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what communications have taken place between his Department and the German authorities concerning the German experience of operating a computerised low flying management system.

Mr. Hanley: My Department holds frequent discussions with the German authorities, at all levels. These cover a wide range of topics of mutual interest, and have included the German experience of operating a computerised low flying management system. The system in use in Germany is, however, somewhat different in scope and purpose to the automated low flying, flight planning, inquiry and notification system currently being developed for use in the United Kingdom.

Nuclear Weapons Accidents

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will declassify the RN manual BR4022 and the RAF manual AP 110A-0103-IAI, both relating to accident procedures, and subsequent amendments lists; and if he will make those documents available to civilian emergency services and local authorities with emergency planning responsibility.

Mr. Hanley: No. The documents are already available to students on the relevant MOD training courses. Furthermore, the MOD document for local authorities and emergency services, issued in December 1992, gives appropriate guidance on contingency planning and the countermeasures that should be taken to protect the public.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will organise a nuclear weapon transport accident exercise in Scotland.

Mr. Hanley: Officers from Scottish emergency services and local authorities already participate in the exercises that are an integral part of the MOD's regular nuclear accident response training courses. The MOD also conducts a programme of other nuclear accident response exercises with relevant authorities throughout the United Kingdom. A variety of scenarios are addressed in such exercises, including nuclear weapon transport accidents. An exercise addressing nuclear weapon contingency planning at Coulport was held earlier this year; a nuclear weapon transport exercise will be held in due course in Scotland.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on liaison arrangements and communications equipment which would be used between the RAF incident team and local civilian services and authorities in the event of a nuclear weapons accident in (a) Scotland and (b) other parts of the United Kingdom;

(2) if he will make a statement on contingency planning for an accident involving a nuclear weapon transported by air over Scotland; and if such weapons are transported by air over Scotland.

Mr. Hanley: Contingency plans for all forms of nuclear weapon transport are described in the MOD guidance document for local authorities and emergency services, issued in December 1992. A copy has already been placed in the Library.

It is the long-standing policy of successive Governments to neither confirm nor deny the presence of nuclear weapons at any particular place or time; this applies also to the routes that are used for their transportation.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the maximum amount of time during which traffic on a public road might have to be stopped in a worst case scenario nuclear weapon transport accident.

Mr. Hanley: The duration of traffic restrictions would clearly be entirely dependent on the specific circumstances of an accident.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will incorporate his Department's guidance to local authorities on response to nuclear weapon transport accidents into the nuclear accident procedures course.

Mr. Hanley: The guidance document for local authorities and emergency services was issued in December 1992. It has already been incorporated into the nuclear accident procedures course.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will extend the scope and participation of the nuclear accident procedures course to provide local authority input on the same basis as the special safety study period.

Mr. Hanley: Local authority emergency planning officers already lecture to both courses, and equally organisers of both courses encourage constructive inputs from the officers and officials, whether from local authorities or elsewhere, who attend the courses.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide for participation by health boards and regional health authorities in nuclear accident procedures courses and special safety study periods in future.

Mr. Hanley: Officials from health boards and regional health authorities already attend both courses, and have done so for some years.

5 Airborne Brigade

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 21 October, Official Report, column 328, if he will list the wheeled and tracked transport currently available to 5 Airborne Brigade, showing specifically the number of (a) six-wheeled buggies, (b) Land-Rovers, (c) light-wheeled tractors and (d) eager-beavers; if he has any plans to increase the on-ground mobility of the brigade; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: 5 Airborne Brigade's current peacetime establishments for the vehicles listed are:

(a) All Terrain Mobile Platforms ("six wheeled buggies"): although 5 Airborne Brigade has no formal establishment for these vehicles, 39 are currently available for the Brigade's use.
(b) Trucks Utility Light/Medium ("Land Rovers")—663.
(c) Light Wheeled Tractors—13.
(d) Rough Terrain Forklifts (formerly known as "Eager Beavers")—22.

In addition, 5 Airborne Brigade uses the following types of wheeled and tracked vehicles:

Motorcycles
Ambulances
Cars and Vans
Minibuses
Recovery Vehicles
Trucks 1 Tonne, 4 Tonne, 8 Tonne
Trucks Utility Heavy
Demountable Rack Offloading and Pick-Up System (DROPS) Medium Mobility Load Carriers
Trailers
Earth Moving Plant
Barrack Mechanical Handling Equipment

The wheeled and tracked transport currently provided for the brigade is sufficient to meet its training and operational needs.

Normandy Landings

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he proposes to take to commemorate the 50th anniversary in 1994 of the Normandy landings.

Mr. Hanley: The Ministry of Defence has overall responsibility for organising the Government's participation in commemorative events marking the 50th anniverasary of the D-Day landings. An announcement of our plans will be made shortly.

Battle of Arnhem

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he proposes to take to commemorate the 50th anniversary in 1994 of the battle of Arnhem.

Mr. Hanley: The anniversary of the battle of Arnhem is commemorated each year in the Netherlands. The British Government will be represented at an appropriate level at the 50th anniversary in 1994. In addition, the occasion will be marked by a parachute drop by members of 5 Airborne Brigade.

Armed Services Suppliers

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of ammunition and propellants supplied to the armed services are procured from foreign companies; how many of those foreign companies are incorporated in EC states; and what is the value of these contracts.

Mr. Aitken: Less than 5 per cent. by value of our current contracts for ammunition and propellants have been placed directly with foreign companies. Four companies are involved, three of which are incorporated in EC states. The total value of the overseas contracts is £10 million.

Wartime Command Centre

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total cost to date of the construction of a wartime command centre underneath the Ministry of Defence building in Whitehall.

Mr. Hanley: The total cost to date of the construction and equipping of the command centre underneath the Ministry of Defence building in Whitehall is some £126 million, of which £66 million was for construction which has now been completed.

Anti-ballistic Missiles

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's latest assessment of the improvements made to Russian anti-ballistic missile defences around Moscow since 1990 and of whether Russia is still acting in strict compliance with the terms of the 1972 anti-ballistic missile treaty.

Mr. Hanley: The current Moscow ballistic missile defence system, which became operational in 1989, includes the Gazelle short-range and Gorgon long-range interceptors and conforms to the 1972 treaty and its protocols. This is a bilateral agreement between the US and Russia, and we are not aware of any compliance concerns at present.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's assessment of Russia's capability to counter ballistic missile attack in areas of its territory which lie outside the operational range of the anti-ballistic missile defences that it deploys around Moscow.

Mr. Hanley: In accordance with the 1972 ABM treaty, there are no strategic missile defences deployed outside of the Moscow ABM system. Some Russian surface-to-air missiles do however have a capability against short-range tactical ballistic missiles, but these are assessed as ineffective against strategic missiles.

Trident

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the requirement to test fire the United Kingdom's Trident D5 missiles will be significantly less than that for the Polaris missiles;

(2) if the proportion of spare Trident missiles compared to the overall United Kingdom Trident missile buy will be significantly different from that of the United Kingdom's Polaris missile purchase.

Mr. Aitken: There will be no spare Trident missiles. All will be deployed operationally, test fired or form part of a processing margin. The proportion of missiles in the second and third categories is expected to be significantly less than for Polaris.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the Trident submarines will be capable of deploying a sub-strategic nuclear capability upon entering operational service.

Mr. Aitken: Trident will be able to contribute to our sub-strategic capability on entering service.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Her Majesty's Government can deploy the Trident system as an effective minimum nuclear deterrent with the number of Trident D5 missiles that have already been purchased from the United States; and whether there is a continuing requirement to purchase further Trident D5 missiles from the United States.

Mr. Aitken: The United Kingdom's Trident strategic nuclear deterrent is not yet ready for operational deployment. As previously announced, further Trident D5 missiles are planned to be purchased from the United States in due course to meet the overall requirements of the Trident programme.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 18 October, Official Report, columnns 34-35, if it is Her Majesty's Government's policy to deploy only Trident D5 missiles in the nuclear role when the WE177 eventually leaves service; and what are the implications of the decision for (a) the number of Trident D5 missiles required and (b) the overall number of nuclear warheads deployed by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Aitken: On current plans, the Trident D5 missile will be the only United Kingdom nuclear system after the WE177 is eventually withdrawn for service. My right hon. and learned Friend's announcement on 18 October does not alter our previous commitment that each Trident submarine will carry no more than 128 warheads. It is not our practice to comment on future plans for the purchase of missiles.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to place the order for the next batch of Trident D5 missiles from the United States.

Mr. Aitken: It is not our practice to reveal our future missile procurement plans.

Tornado

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of Tornado GR1s are withheld from conventional military duties in order to fulfil the sub-strategic nuclear role.

Mr. Hanley: None. All nuclear capable Tornado GR1s are dual-roled and would undertake conventional military duties in wartime until required to fulfil the sub-strategic nuclear role.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's latest assessment of (a) the nuclear weapon programmes of (i) Iran, (ii) Iraq, (iii) Libya and (iv) Syria and (b) the earliest date by which (1) Iran, (2) Libya and (3) Syria could develop a crude nuclear weapon and develop the means of delivering a nuclear warhead on a ballistic missile.

Mr. Hanley: The UN inspection teams found incontrovertible evidence that Iraq was developing a crude nuclear weapon and there is concern that Iraq could reinstate its nuclear weapons programme if current UN sanctions were to be lifted. As states which are parties to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty—NPT—Iran, Libya and Syria have undertaken formal commitments not to acquire nuclear weapons which we expect them to honour in full. The experience with Iraq has demonstrated however that membership of the NPT alone is not a guarantee of non-proliferation. We therefore take every opportunity both bilaterally and in international fora to stress the significance we attach to all states which are parties to the NPT complying fully with their obligations.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's latest assessment of the number of air-launched sub-strategic nuclear weapons currently deployed by Russia.

Mr. Hanley: An assessment of the number of air-launched sub-strategic nuclear weapons currently deployed by Russia is complicated by the fact that many are being withdrawn from service and are earmarked for dismantlement. We estimate that a total of 11,000 to 12,000 sub-strategic warheads of all types remain, but it is likely that some are non-operational.

Defence Research Agency

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of staff of the DRA at the Woolwich Arsenal site are on paid leave; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: This is a matter delegated to the Defence Research Agency under its framework document. I have, therefore, asked the chief executive to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. John Austin-Walker, dated 28 October 1993:

In today's written answer the Minister of State for Defence Procurement informed you that I would be replying to your question about DRA staff at the Woolwich Arsenal sites.

In answer to the first part of your question, there are no DRA staff members on special paid leave at the Woolwich Arsenal sites, although 10 MOD staff who were until recently on loan to the DRA but have been returned to MOD are on special paid leave whilst MOD examines their future employment.

You also asked for a statement on the DRA situation at Woolwich. As I explained in my letter to you of 5 August commercial pressures have caused me to accelerate plans for the withdrawal of DRA staff from the Woolwich sites. Steps to achieve this withdrawal are in hand. Those scientific and technical staff from Woolwich for whom the DRA has a continuing requirement have now been transferred to the management of other Sectors within the DRA. The staff for whom we regrettably have no jobs have either been given letters of redundancy or have been informed that they will be returning to MOD. The last DRA staff will have left the Woolwich West site by 31 March 1994; a small number will remain on the East site until the end of March 1995.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Kenya (Refugees)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Kenyan Government on the problems now being faced in that country as a result of refugees crossing the border from Somalia to Kenya; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development discussed this issue recently with the Kenyan Foreign Minister. In 1992-93, we provided over £2·4 million via UN agencies and non-governmental organisations as aid to refugees in northern Kenya, over 85 per cent. of whom were Somalis.

Pergau Hydro-electric Project

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the factors underlying his decision to issue a ministerial directive to the accounting officer in his Department to incur expenditure on the Pergau hydro-electric project.

Mr. Hurd: The accounting officer correctly carried out his responsibilities. I reached my decision against the wider background of Britain's interests in Malaysia. I had to take into account that an undertaking had been given at the highest level, and that we had made a formal offer of aid support for the Pergau project to the Malaysian Government. The Malaysians wanted to proceed. It would have been damaging to British companies and to British exports to Malaysia to renege on our undertaking. Later developments including the rapid expansion of our trade indicate that this was the right decision.

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what considerations underlay his Department's decision to arrange for the loan agreement for the Pergau hydro-electric project to be made directly with Tenaga Nasional; and what consideration was given to arranging it with the Government of Malaysia.

Mr. Hurd: The reasons for the loan agreement in respect of the Pergau project being with Tenaga Nasional rather than the Government of Malaysia are set out fully in paragraphs 40 to 42 of the National Audit Office report on the project, laid before the House on 22 October.

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what options for financing the Pergau dam were considered; what was the cost of each; which was chosen; and what considerations underlay the choice.

Mr. Hurd: I refer the right hon. Member to paragraphs 4, 5, 35-39 and 57 and appendix 2 of the National Audit Office report on the project, laid before the House on 22 October.

Aid and Trade

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list each individual scheme which received financial assistance under aid and trade provision since the programme began, in each case giving (a) the sum provided, (b) the date of project approval and (c) the project's location.

Mr. Hurd: A list has been placed in the Library of the House. Central records on ATP projects include the dates of each formal ATP aid agreement concluded with an overseas government, but not the dates of approval of individual projects.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

India

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current relations between India and Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Our relations with India are excellent.

Kashmir

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Governments of Pakistan and India regarding the situation in Kashmir.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have regularly discussed the situation in Kashmir with the Governments of India and Pakistan, most recently at the Commonwealth Heads of Government meeting in Cyprus. We have encouraged both Governments to resolve their differences through bilateral dialogue.

European Parliament

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the rental of hemicycles rented by the European Parliament in (a) Strasbourg, (b) Brussels and (c) Luxembourg; and how often each building will be used for a plenary session in 1993.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The EP is holding 11 plenary sessions in the hemicycle in Strasbourg in 1993, and has held two mini-plenary sessions in the new hemicycle in Brussels this year. It has held none in Luxembourg since 1981.

The detailed appropriations given in section 1, chapter 20 of the "General Budget of the European Community", published in "Official Journal" No. L31, volume 36 of 8 February 1993, copies of which are available in the House, indicate operating expenditure, including rental of buildings, as follows:

Strasbourg:	Palais de l'Europe: 471,200 ecu (approximately £367,583)
Brussels:	D1: 20,750,000 ecu (approximately £16,187,075)

I will write to my hon. Friend if more precise figures are available from the European Parliament.

Endangered Species

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 20 October, Official Report, column 242, if he will give details of the seizures in Hong Kong restaurants and shops of suspected endangered animals and animal products.

Mr. Goodlad: Seizures by the Hong Kong authorities over the past 12 months—1 August 1992 to 3 July 1993—of suspected endangered animals and animal products from Hong Kong shops and restaurants were as follows:

Endangered Species
Pangolin	Scale	0·43 kg.
Musk	Pod	4 Nos.
	Grain	8·316 G
Rhinoceros	Medicine	4 small vials
Owl	Live	1 Hd.
Sea-Turtle	Stuffed	1 Hd.
	Scale	1 Pc.
Land-Tortoise	Live	3 Hds.
Giant Salamander	Live	26 Hds.
Asiatic Bony	—	—
Tongue Fish	Live	17 Tails
Arapaima Gigas	Live	3 Tails

Chemical Weapons Convention

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when Her Majesty's Government plans to ratify the chemical weapons convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Legislation is necessary to enable the United Kingdom to fulfil its obligations under the convention. We intend to ratify the convention as soon as this legislation is in place. The legislation will be introduced when parliamentary time permits.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries in the middle east have not signed the chemical weapons convention.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: One hundred and fifty states, including Bahrain, Iran, Israel, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates and Yemen, have signed the chemical weapons convention since it opened for signature in January 1993. Of the middle eastern countries, only Egypt, Iraq, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon have failed to sign.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest date by which 65 signatories to the chemical weapons convention must have ratified the convention in order that it comes into force in January 1995.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The earliest possible date that the chemical weapons convention can enter into force is 13 January 1995. To achieve this 65 signatories must have ratified the convention by 18 July 1994.

Sudan

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent efforts he has made to encourage a peaceful settlement between the warring factions in the Sudan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Small Heath (Mr. Godsiff) on 18 October, Official Report, column 79.

Test Ban Treaty

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek the successful negotiation of a comprehensive test ban treaty by September 1996.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom will be seeking a successful outcome to negotiations for a comprehensive test ban treaty within a reasonable time scale. We do not believe that setting a deadline for the treaty's conclusion will necessarily help the conduct of negotiations.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when direct negotiations towards a comprehensive test ban treaty are expected to resume; and which states are expected to participate.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Negotiations for a comprehensive test ban treaty are likely to begin in early 1994, when the conference on disarmament reconvenes in Geneva. We expect that all states who are members of the conference on disarmament will participate.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the conditions that will have to be met before Her Majesty's Government agree to sign a comprehensive test ban treaty.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom will be seeking a comprehensive test ban treaty which makes a real contribution to non-proliferation. Wide adherence and effective verification measures will be important in this regard, but we do not believe it sensible to set rigid conditions that a CTB treaty must satisfy before treaty negotiations begin.

Overseas Conferences

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been spent by his Department on sponsoring conferences overseas, either alone or jointly, in each of the last two years.

Mr. Goodlad: I regret that details of expenditure on sponsoring conferences overseas are not recorded separately and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Committee of the Regions

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Government intend to nominate the United Kingdom members and alternative members of the Committee of the Regions; and whom they will nominate.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have today proposed the following list of nominees for appointment by the Council of Ministers, in accordance with article 198a of the Maastricht treaty:

EDUCATION

Adult Literacy

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will give details of his Department's planned funding for schemes to improve adult literacy in 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Boswell: In 1992-93 and 1993-94, the Department for Education has provided £3·751 million and £3·815 million respectively in grant to the adult literacy and basic skills unit for its work on adult literacy and basic skills, including £700,000 in each year for the Basic Skills at Work programme. The Department has also made available a further £250,000 in 1993-94 in support of the new family literacy initiative.

Capital Expenditure

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the capital expenditure on education by each local authority in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is in the table.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many representations he has received from hon. Members with regard to the method of auditing of the accounts of grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: We have received six such representations this year, of which five concerned the possibility of a role for the Audit Commission which was considered during the passage of the Education Act 1993.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether he will list all grant-maintained schools operating at the end of the last financial year stating in each case the extent of any financial surplus or deficit.

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is available only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what grants, other than specific purpose grants, are available to grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: The grants, other than special purpose grants, that are available to self-governing schools, are annual maintenance grant and capital grant.

In addition, self-governing schools are eligible to receive section 11 grant from the Home Office, on whose behalf the Department for Education oversees payments to qualifying self-governing schools.

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what were the capital allocations to grant-maintained schools in Cumbria in the financial years 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Robin Squire: The following self-governing schools in Cumbria have received capital allocations.

Some schools have yet to claim their formula allocation for 1993-94.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what payments have been made from public funds to heads of grant-maintained schools to attend conferences, seminars, workshops or meetings on grant-maintained status.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has reimbursed head teachers and governors of grant-maintained schools for expenses they have incurred in connection with their attendance at conferences, seminars, workshops and meetings designed to provide factual information on grant-maintained status.

The total amount of such expenses reimbursed by the Department in financial year 1992-93 was £15,234. The figure for the current financial year up to the end of September is £15,546.

Kirbie Kendal School

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 18 October, Official Report, column 99, what was the purpose of the specific purpose grant (emergency) paid to the Kirbie Kendal school in the last financial year.

Mr. Robin Squire: The grant was paid in respect of expenditure incurred by the school in connection with meeting the needs of a number of pupils with statements of their speical educational needs.

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what (a) contacts his Department has had with and (b) payments it has made to firms of consultants or accountants in respect of the organisation of conferences, seminars or workshops on grant-maintained status or the provision of advice thereon.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has not to date called in consultants or accountants to assist it in, or provide advice on, the organisation of conferences, seminars or workshops designed to provide factual information on grant-maintained status, and has, therefore, not made payments to any such firms in this respect.

The Department does, however, use the services of a number of outside contractors to provide basic support for these events such as secretariat support, venue booking, a mailing service, and the provision of conference equipment.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost for the current financial year of his Department's having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (i) 12, (ii) 24, (iii) 36 and (iv) 48 months ago.

Sir John Cope: There is no cost to the Treasury for premises overseas. The cost of locally engaged staff overseas in the current financial year is estimated at £80,000. The cost in 1992-93 was £48,520, in 1991-92 £73,253, in 1990-91 £73,974, and in 1989-90 the cost was £61,694.

Ministerial Salaries

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 October, Official Report, column 14, concerning ministerial salary payments, if he will list each occasion in the last 10 years when payments have been made, giving the amounts in each instance.

Mr. Dorrell: The Parliamentary Pensions Act 1984 introduced severance payments for Ministers and other paid office holders in the House of Lords, subject to the conditions set out in the Act. The Ministerial and Other Salaries Order 1991 extended the provision to Commons Ministers and other paid office holders in each House.

Although no composite list is kept, we have identified from our records the following occasions on which severance payments have been authorised since 31 July 1984. In each case, the severance payment would have been equal to three months of the relevant ministerial salary, as provided for by the Act.

Tobacco

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received regarding the retailing of imported tobacco products on which United Kingdom duty has not been paid; what estimates he has of the extent of this retailing; and what action he proposes to prevent it.

Sir John Cope: Representations expressing concern over the illegal importation of tobacco products have been received from Members of Parliament, tobacco manufacturers and retailers.

There are no reliable estimates of the extent of the retailing of illegally imported tobacco products. During the eight-month period January to August, Customs and Excise recorded 464 offences involving 543,791 cigarettes, 7,565 kg of hand-rolling tobacco and 2,809 cigars obtained in other member states of the EC and alleged to be destined for illicit retail sale.

The Finance (No. 2) Act 1992 introduced new offences to meet the threat of increased smuggling of revenue goods following the completion of the single market. The offences carry penalties of up to seven years' imprisonment. Customs and Excise have also implemented new control procedures to catch and deter bootleggers, including the recruitment and training of excise verification officers for intelligence-based targeting and enhanced checks at likely outlets for smuggled goods; increasing the excise intelligence resources within the customs investigation division; increased mutual assistance with other member states, including the appointment of liaison officers to work in the Netherlands, Belgium and France; prosecuting or compounding, with, people and businesses found stocking, handling or dealing commercially in illicit excise goods.

Customs and Excise will continue to review the situation in the light of experience.

Tobacco and Alcohol Imports

Mr. Mills: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the amount of tobacco products imported from France and Spain since 1 January which are sold in the United Kingdom in markets, car boot sales and clubs; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: No such estimates are available. However, during the eight-month period January to August, Customs and Excise recorded 464 offences involving 543,791 cigarettes, 7,565kg of hand-rolling tobacco and 2,809 cigars obtained in other member states of the EC and alleged to be destined for illicit retail sale.

Income Tax

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the rates of income tax over 25 per cent., and the bands of income, in local currency terms, to which they apply, for France, Germany, the Netherlands, Italy, the United States of America, Canada, Australia and Japan.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is as follows.

France

Rate per cent.	Band of taxable income (francs)
28·8	60,690—73,450
33·6	73,450—84,740
38·4	84,740—141,190
43·2	141,190—194,190
49	194,190—229,710
53·9	229,710—261,290
56·8	over 261,290

Note:
The above bands of income apply to a single person; they are increased according to the taxpayer's family circumstances, e.g., x 2 for a married person with no children, and x 3 for a married taxpayer with two children.

Germany

The German tax rates rise gradually from 19 per cent. to 53 per cent. The effective rate rises above 25 per cent. when taxable income reaches 28,349 DM (single taxpayer) and the top rate of 53 per cent. takes effect when income is over 120,041 DM. These two amounts are doubled for a married couple taxed jointly.

Netherlands

Rate Per cent.	Band of taxable income (guilders)
50	43,267-86,534
60	over 86,534

Italy

Rate Per cent.	Band of taxable income (lire)
27	14,400,000-30,000,000
34	30,000,000-60,000,000
41	60,000,000-150,000,000
46	150,000,000-300,000,000
51	over 300,000,000

USA

Rate Per cent.	Band of taxable income (dollars) Single taxpayer	Married couple
28	22,101-53,500	36,901-89,150
31	53,501-115,000	89,151-140,000
36	115,001-250,000	140,001-250,000
39·6	over 250,000	over 250,000

Note:
The above federal rates only. Most states also levy income tax at varying rates.

Canada

Rate Per cent.	Band of taxable income (dollars)
26	29,591–59,180
29	over 59,180

Notes:
1. The above rates are increased by federal surcharges (maximum: 5 per cent. of tax due);
2. All provinces levy income tax, usually as a percentage of federal tax due. For example, the rate in Ontario is 58 per cent., which effectively increases the 26 per cent. and 29 per cent. rates above to 41 per cent. and 45·8 per cent.

Australia

Rate Per cent.	Band of taxable income (dollars)
38	9,543–16,438
46	16,439–22,831
47	over 22,831

Japan

Rate Per cent.	Band of taxable income (yen)
30	6,000,000–10,000,000
40	10,000,000–20,000,000
50	over 20,000,000

Notes: Local income taxes (maximum: 15 per cent. are also payable.

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax was remitted or written off as irrecoverable in 1992; and how much of this was PAYE contributions.

Mr. Dorrell: The amount of tax remitted or written off as irrecoverable in 1992 was:

	£000s
Year ended 31 October 1992	1,694,246

The amount of PAYE contributions remitted or written off as irrecoverable in 1992 was:

	£000s
Year ended 31 October 1992	381,172

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the total sum raised from personal taxation has been paid by the top (a) 1 per cent., (b) 5 per cent. and (c) 10 per cent. of taxpayers in each year since 1979.

Mr. Dorrell: The latest estimates are given in the tables. Estimates of income tax liability are based on information reported to tax offices and collected through annual surveys of personal incomes. For years before 1985-86, estimates exclude some investment income on which tax is deducted at source. For years up to and including 1989-90, married couples are counted as one taxpayer and their incomes are combined. Following the introduction of independent taxation, for 1990-91 onwards, husbands and wives are counted separately. Estimates are based on the surveys of personal incomes for years up to 1991-92 and projections of the 1991-92 survey for subsequent years; the latter are therefore provisional.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what additional revenue would be generated by extending VAT to newspapers, books and magazines.

Sir John Cope: The publication "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" shows the cost of not applying VAT at the standard rate to those goods currently zero-rated. For books, newspapers and magazines the figure for 1993-94 is £1·1 billion. This figure makes no allowance for changes in behaviour.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much could be raised by putting VAT on (a) the clothes and (b) the footwear of small people including children.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The publication "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" shows that the estimated cost of not standard rating children's clothing and footwear was £600 million in 1993-94. This figure makes no allowance for changes in behaviour if the tax were imposed.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is his estimate of the sum that would be raised in the next financial year by imposing VAT on domestic air fares at the standard rate;

(2) what is his estimate of the sum that would be raised in the next financial year by imposing VAT on bus fares at the standard rate.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 26 October 1993]: Table 9 of the publication "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" published by HM Treasury in July 1993 provides an estimate of £1,150 million for the cost of zero-rating domestic passenger transport in 1993-94. Very roughly, around £450 million of this is in respect of bus fares; around £150 million is in respect of air fares. These figures make no allowance for the likely behavioural response to applying VAT at the standard rate to these items.

End-year Flexibility Schemes

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the entitlements for 1993-94 resulting from the carry forward of the capital and running costs underspends allowed under the end-year flexibility schemes.

Mr. Portillo [pursuant to his reply 14 July, 1993, c. 512-18]. The last entry in the table "Cash limits on Votes" shown in columns 515-16 should have read:

SOCIAL SECURITY

Social Security Fraud

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the amount of social security fraud which could be prevented by a national photo identity card using modern technology to prevent forgery.

Mr. Hague: It is not possible to estimate the full impact of identity cards on reducing benefit fraud as many social security frauds arise from misrepresentation of the facts rather than false identity. The issue of national identity cards is a matter for the Home Office.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps are taken to ensure that, when a maintenance assessment is calculated, the Child Support Agency takes into full account the settlement of financial affairs made in the courts between former partners.

Mr. Burt: Calculation of maintenance by the Child Support Agency is based on the current needs of children, and the current income and outgoings of their parents. The maintenance formula which the agency uses, while not making any direct allowance for capital or property settlements, does take account of the practical consequences of such agreements, since the current housing costs of absent parents are allowed for in calculating their maintenance liability, and a capital settlement may affect the assessable income both of the absent parent and of the parent with care. In such cases, where the practical outcome is that the absent parent has higher costs or lower income, his maintenance liability will consequently be less.

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment his Department has made of the performance of the Child Support Agency in the first six months of its operation since April.

Mr. Burt: The Child Support Agency is still a new business. Ministers and officials of the Department meet the chief executive regularly to discuss the agency's performance. The agency has made a determined start on its important task of ensuring that more children receive more maintenance more regularly.

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what number of maintenance assessments his Department has set as a target for the Child Support Agency to handle in the first 12 months of operation; and what other performance targets have been set.

Mr. Burt: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has set a limited range of targets for 1993-94 which are set out in the agency's published business plan. They are:

60 per cent. of people with the care of children making eligible applications to the CSA to have maintenance arranged;

annual benefit savings of £530 million;

to maintain the Agency's resources so as to deliver its Business Plan within a total budget of £115 million;

65 per cent. of clients to regard the service as satisfactory, as measured by an independent national survey; to meet a set of milestone targets which relate to major initiatives.

Accommodation. Open Child Support Agency Centre at Birkenhead and Plymouth by 31 October 1993.

Recruitment and training. Recruit and train sufficient numbers of staff to begin operations at Birkenhead and Plymouth Centres by 31 October 1993.

Staff resources. Develop further the complementing system in the light of live running to inform proposals for staff in the 1994 Public Expenditure Survey.

Child Support Computer System. Implement by 30 June 1993 Release 1·1 of the Child Support Computer System.

Service planning. Child Support Agency Centres and Divisions to produce service plans in time to inform the 1994 Public Expenditure Survey.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) in how many cases considered by the Child Support Agency at the latest date for which figures are available the parent with care has declined to reveal details of the absent parent or to sign the authorisation; in how many of these the explanation has been accepted by the Child Support Agency and no further proceedings taken; and in how many cases investigations are continuing;

(2) how many cases there have been at the latest available date for which figures are available where the parent with care is a man; and what percentage these represent of the total number of cases dealt with by the Child Support Agency;

(3) how many absent parents have appealed against the sum fixed for maintenance by the Child Support Agency; and what percentage this is of the total number of such assessments issued;

(4) how many and what percentage of the total number of Child Support Agency authorisation forms signed at the latest date for which figures are available have been signed by a parent with care in receipt of income support;

(5) how many completed maintenance assessments and what percentage of the total so completed relate to cases where the parent with care is in receipt of income support at the latest date for which figures are available;

(6) what is the average period between the issue of an inquiry form to a parent with care and the fixing by the Child Support Agency of the sum to be paid in maintenance by an absent parent;

(7) what is his best estimate of the administrative cost of processing an individual case by the Child Support Agency from the initial reference of the parent with care to final assessment of the absent parent's maintenance payment and of the average collection costs in a full year;

(8) what estimate he can give of the administrative costs of the Child Support Agency in the first year of its operation;

(9) how many cases there have been at the latest date for which figures are available in which there has been a deduction from income support because of a refusal by a parent with care to supply information about an absent parent;

(10) in how many cases considered by the Child Support Agency, at the latest date for which information is available, the absent parent has disputed parenthood; and in how many of these cases court proceedings to establish parenthood have been instituted or are pending;

(11) how many maintenance assessments have been issued (a) in total and (b) in each of the Child Support Agency's regional centres at the latest date for which figures are available;

(12) what estimate he can give of the average sum assessed for maintenance by the Child Support Agency where there is (a) one child, (b) two children and (c) more than two children at the latest date for which such figures are available;

(13) how many authorisation forms have been signed by parents with care (a) in total and (b) in each of the Child Support Agency's regional centres, respectively, at the latest available date for which figures are available;

(14) how many staff are presently employed by the Child Support Agency (a) in total, (b) at headquarters and (c) at each of the regional centres.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 27 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about various aspects of the work of the Child Support Agency.

I should perhaps first explain that the information refers to the period 5 April to 30 September 1993 except where otherwise indicated, and that the Agency does not distinguish whether a Parent with Care of children or an Absent Parent is male or female.

You ask about cases where the requirement to co-operate has been an issue. The number of such cases to 30 September 1993 is 6,600, and in 4,900 of these the Agency has accepted that the Parent with Care had good cause not to co-operate in pursuing a maintenance claim. Of those cases in which "good cause" was not accepted, only 22 have been referred to the Benefits Agency for the prescribed benefit reduction.

As regards appeals, at 30 September 1993, 2,825 clients had requested a review of their maintenance assessment, representing 7·7 per cent. of the total number of maintenance assessments in the same period. In addition the Independent Tribunal Service had approached the Agency for a report in 86 appeal cases. The Agency does not distinguish between appeals made by Absent Parents and Parents with Care.

You ask specifically about Income Support claimants. To date, 527,000 Maintenance Application Forms (MAFs) have been issued and of these 385,000 (ie, 73 per cent.) were in respect of parents with care on Income Support, 328,000 MAFs have been returned but the number of these which relate to Income Support clients is not known as this information is not collected. Information on MAFs returned and maintenance assessments completed and broken down by CSA Centre (CSAC) is contained in Annex A.

Information on the time taken to process maintenance applications is not yet available but we anticipate that this will take between 6 and 12 weeks in a straightforward case and longer in more difficult cases.

You ask about the Agency's costs and I should explain that the fees, £44 for the Agency's assessment service and £34 for the collection service, are based on the full economic cost of administering the Agency's services to its clients. The Agency's administrative budget for 1993-94 is £115 million (ie, £95 million in running costs and £7 million in capital costs) and £13 million in other costs. This information was contained in the Agency's Business Plan. No changes have been made to the agreed budget.

With regard to disputed paternity, there have been less than 1,000 cases to date of which fewer than 20 have been referred to the courts to be resolved.

Figures on the average amount of maintenance assessment payments are not yet available. The Child Support Act provides for maintenance to be assessed by means of a standard formula, which will result, on average, in payments of £40-£50 a week. This compares to the £25-£30 a week which was previously the average maintenance payment.

Information on staff employed by the Agency is contained in Annex B.

I hope you will find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Household Income

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the median incomes for the top, ninth, eighth, seventh and sixth deciles, before and after housing costs for the years 1979 and 1990-91, in terms of net equivalised household income.

Mr. Burt: The information is provided in the tables.

Median net equivalised household income of top five deciles

TRANSPORT

New Rolling Stock

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to come to a consultation on the review of the timing of new rolling stock, pursuant to the West Yorkshire passenger transport authority's letter of 11 October.

Mr. Freeman: My officials will be discussing with the passenger transport executive a number of issues raised in the appraisal. Subject to a satisfactory resolution of those issues, I am hopeful that we will be able to complete our review of the timing of new rolling stock within six weeks.

Vehicle Operator Licensing

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many heavy goods vehicles are exempt from goods operator licensing;

(2) if he will list each type of vehicle exempt from goods vehicle operator licensing.

Mr. Key: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on Tuesday 26 October, at columns 539-40.

HGV Drivers

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will institute a review of the regulations governing licences for heavy goods vehicle drivers with insulin-dependent diabetes.

Mr. Key: Regulations introduced on 1 April 1991 included insulin treated diabetes as a bar to entitlement to drive large lorries and buses for new applicants and those first treated with insulin after this date. The effect of diabetes on driving is kept under constant reassessment by the honorary medical advisory panel on driving and diabetes mellitus.

Bus Services, London

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reasons underlie his decision to apply different rules for publication of the terms of commercial contracts between tenderers for contracts with public bodies providing urban bus services inside Greater London and those elsewhere in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norris: Different legislation governs the provision of bus services in London from that in the rest of the country.

Outside London, the rules for publication of information about bus route contracts are laid down by the Transport Act 1985. Inside London, it is London Transport which is responsible for deciding whether to publish the terms of commercial contracts for the provision of tendered bus services.

London Underground (Safety)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the statistics he has given in response to the figures presented to him by London Underground Ltd. relating to the impact of its plans, entitled "A Decently Modern Metro", of reductions in capital funding for safety and maintenance of this system at levels below those already indicated by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Norris: We are still discussing with London Underground Ltd.—LUL—its plans for "A Decently Modern Metro", and I cannot comment on future funding levels in advance of the unified budget. Safety on London Underground remains, of course, a top priority for LUL and Government.

Transport Capital Finance

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what was the national total of capital allocations for transport to local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89; and if he will give the breakdown of the total between (i) non-metropolitan district councils, (ii) county councils, (iii) metropolitan district councils, (iv) London boroughs and (v) the City of London;

(2) what was the capital allocation for transport for each local authority in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89;

(3) what was the national total of capital expenditure on transport by local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89; and if he will give the breakdown of the total between (i) non-metropolitan district councils, (ii) county councils, (iii) metropolitan district councils, (iv) London boroughs and (v) the City of London;

(4) what was the regional total of capital allocations for transport to the local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89 for each standard English region;

(5) what was the capital expenditure on transport by each local authority in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89;

(6) what was the regional total of capital expenditure on transport by the local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89 for each standard English region.

Mr. MacGregor: This information is collected centrally by the Department of the Environment. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given today by my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry), the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment.

Rail Franchising Director

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will publish a draft of the objectives, instructions and guidance which he would intend to set for the Passenger Railway Franchising Director as provided for under clause 5 of the Railways Bill.

Mr. Freeman: I am today placing copies of a draft in the Libraries of both Houses.

HEALTH

Nursing Home Beds

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the number of registered nursing home beds in 1991-92 in each health authority in England.

Mr. Bowis: This information is published in the annual summary "Private Hospitals, Homes and Clinics Registered under Section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984" which has been placed in the Library.

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has to reduce the number of regional health authorities or change the areas which they cover.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave the hon. Member for Leicester south (Mr. Marshall) on 26 October, at column 675.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has in respect of the number of representations in respect of the recent NHS trusts approved; and how many representations in each consultation were considered (a) to favour trust status, (b) to oppose trust status and (c) to be neutral.

Mr. Sackville: As with all national health service bodies, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has available very wide-ranging information about all key aspects of the running of the NHS trusts in question.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many trusts have been established; what is their total budget; and what percentage of the NHS total expenditure this accounts for.

Mr. Sackville: The total number of first, second and third wave national health service trusts operational in England in 1993-94 is 292. Trusts do not have specific budgets but obtain much of their income by contracting for patient services. Total forecast income for NHS trusts in 1993-94 is £13·5 billion, representing 44 per cent. of total NHS gross expenditure.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many health service trusts have provided business plans; and how many of these have been made available to the public or to hon. Members;

(2) what plans she has to give hon. Members a statutory right to have access to the business plans of the health service trusts which serve their constituency; and what existing guidelines there are about making such plans available to (a) hon. Members and (b) the public.

Dr. Mawhinney: National health service trusts are required to provide the NHS Management Executive with a three-year business plan every year and have done so. They are also expected to make a summary business plan available to the public, including hon. Members, by 31 March each year. The arrangements for making plans available to the public are for individual trusts to determine and no central record of their issue is maintained. There are no plans to give hon. Members statutory rights to access the business plans.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health to whom health service trusts are accountable for their business plans and expenditure outturns; and what plans she has to improve that accountability.

Dr. Mawhinney: National health service trusts are accountable to the NHS Management Executive for both their business plans and their expenditure outturn. These accountability arrangements are effective and we have no current plans to make any changes.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS staff members serve as (a) non-executive directors and (b) chairs on trust boards in each region.

Dr. Mawhinney: The regulations governing membership of national health service trust boards disqualify NHS employees from serving as chairmen or non-executive directors of NHS trusts, except that a designated teaching trust will have a non-executive director drawn from a university, who may be an employee of a health service body.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 27 July, Official Report, column 826, if she will provide a list of fourth-wave trusts which received grants, indicating the value of the grant, by district health authority.

Mr. Sackville: The successful fourth wave national health service trust applicants are listed by regional and district health authority. Unless otherwise stated, allocations totalling £254,000 will have been made in respect of these applicants. These additional moneys have been made available to cover the following: public consultation, conveyancing and expenditure during the trust's "shadow period".

Successful 4th wave NHS Trust applicants listed by regional and district health authority.

[1] Birmingham Heartlands Hospital is to be reconfigured without the requirement to dissolve the existing Trust under guidance issued in TEL(93)1, copies of which are available in Library. Since this is a minor reconfiguration no additional allocations have been made for conveyancing or expenditure incurred during "shadow period". Therefore, an additional allocation of only £13,000 has been made in respect of this Trust to cover the costs of the public consultation exercise.

[2] Both these successful applications are existing trusts reconfiguring with directly managed units. Although the costs of public consultation and conveyancing are covered the applicants are only eligible for half of the allocation made to cover expenditure incurred during the shadow period. Therefore, additional allocations of only £147,000 have been made in respect of these two applications.

Perioperative Deaths

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to conduct an inquiry into the number and causes of perioperative death of patients; if she will estimate the numbers so dying in each of the last five years; and if she will list the numbers preventable in each of the last five years and the broad preventable causes of death.

Mr. Sackville: The Department of Health already supports the national confidential inquiry into perioperative deaths. Information on the number of people who die following surgery is not available centrally. A table on trends in "avoidable" deaths, 1979-92, for a selected number of conditions is contained in "Health and Personal Social Services Statistics 1992", copies of which are available in the Library. While it would not be possible to prevent every death deemed to be "avoidable", it is expected that a substantial proportion could be prevented.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the findings of the NCEPOD report on the confidential inquiry into perioperative death.

Mr. Sackville: The national confidential inquiry into perioperative deaths—NCEPOD—is an important study for patients and the National Health Service. It provides valuable reassurance about the quality of surgical and anaesthetic care. We welcome the inquiry's conclusion that across the range of specialties covered, patients can rely on excellent standards. Some of the problems identified in previous reports, such as the percentage of consultants involved in decisions on patient care, are improving. There is, however, room for further improvement. For example there is scope for clinicians and local managers in some areas to work together to improve operating facilities. The report also identifies issues for the medical profession which can improve standards of professional practice, such as in the prevention of pulmonary embolism and in the control of fluids in elderly patients.

Through careful assessment of clinical standards, this inquiry helps to ensure that the medical profession retains a critical approach to its work. The Government wish to encourage all surgeons and anaesthetists to continue to support NCEPOD, and NHS managers and the profession to act on the results. We expect all doctors to participate in peer review activities, and we provide continuing financial support for medical and clinical audit, as well as for NCEPOD. In these ways, doctors can develop confidence in their clinical performance and identify areas where they can further develop their expertise.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to require contractors to write into contracts a confidential inquiry into perioperative death data requirement.

Mr. Sackville: It is for individual health authorities to establish local health needs and on that basis determine what they include in their contracts.

Junior Doctors

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to ensure that her targets for the reduction of junior doctors' hours are reached.

Dr. Mawhinney: Our targets for reducing junior doctors' hours are set out in "Junior Doctors: The New Deal", copies of which are available in the Library. It is for local units to develop plans to achieve these targets, but regional task forces support local action, monitor progress and report regularly to the National Health Service Management Executive.

We are also providing an extra £12·2 million from central funds this year to establish a further 125 consultant posts targeted to reduce hours and for other local initiatives to promote the new deal. This is in addition to the £24·8 million we are spending this year to support action begun in the past two years.

Footwear

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines she has on healthy footwear in adults and children.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Anti-smoking Patches

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy regarding the availability of anti-smoking patches on the national health service; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have decided that nicotine patches should not be available on national health service prescription. We do not consider their supply to be a priority for the use of the limited resources available to the national health service. Statutory Instrument 2421—the National Health Service (General Medical Services) Amendment (No. 2) Regulations 1993—which was laid before the House on 11 October, adds a number of nicotine patch products to the list of items which cannot be prescribed by general practitioners.

Community Care

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give greater account in the system for allocating community care resources for 1994-95 to the assessed needs of people in different areas, relative to the amount of historical provision in the independent sector.

Mr. Bowis: Decisions about the distribution of the community care special transitional grant in 1994-95 will be announced in due course. The movement of this year's grant into personal social services standard spending assessments in 1994-95 will, in itself, mean that an increased proportion of the new resources for community care will be distributed according to SSAs.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps are being taken to co-ordinate the review of the system of allocation of resources for community care for 1994-95 with the review of local authority standard spending assessments.

Mr. Bowis: The standard spending assessment review will be among the factors taken into account when decisions are made about the distribution of the community care special transitional grant in 1994-95.

Sight Tests

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many national health service sight tests paid for by family health service authorities took place in 1992-93 in each regional health authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: The number of national health service sight tests paid for by family health service authorities in 1992-93 is shown in the table.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 14 July, Official Report, columns 532-34, if she can now give the final figures for 1992-93 for sight tests.

Dr. Mawhinney: The figures have been validated, and remain unchanged from those provided in my reply to the hon. Member on 14 July at columns 532-34.

Personal Social Services

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the regional total of capital allocations for personal social services to the local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89 for each standard English region;

(2) what was the capital expenditure on personal social services by each local authority in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89;

total between (i) non-metropolitan district councils, (ii) county councils, (iii) metropolitan district councils, (iv) London boroughs and (v) the City of London.

Mr. Sackville: This information is collected centrally by the Department of the Environment. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment, my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry).

GPs (Misconduct)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances under which a general practitioner found guilty of serious professional misconduct by the General Medical Council can be allowed to continue to practise; and what assessment she has made of whether patients are sufficiently protected.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is a matter for the professional conduct committee of the General Medical Council to decide whether a doctor is fit to continue practising after he has been found guilty of serious professional misconduct. Where a finding of serious professional misconduct is made by the professional conduct committee, it may order that the name of the practitioner concerned is erased from the register; that his registration be suspended, or that his continuing registration be dependent upon his compliance with such conditions of practice as the committee may think fit. The professional conduct committee would need to consider each case on its merits having regard to its primary concerns to protect the public and uphold the reputation of the profession.

The Government's aim is to ensure that proper controls exist to protect patients against the risk of deficient conduct and professional regulatory bodies like the GMC have an important role to play in safeguarding standards of medical care. Under the terms of the Medical Act 1983, the disciplinary remit of the GMC covers only those offences amounting to serious professional misconduct.

A family health service authority has a duty to remove from its medical list the name of any general practitioner whose name has been erased from the medical register, or whose registration has been suspended, following disciplinary proceedings by the GMC.

The GMC is proposing to introduce performance procedures which would apply where a doctor's pattern of professional performance was seriously deficient but did not amount to serious professional misconduct. We support the GMC in its aims and will continue to contribute to the discussions about the detail of the proposals.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in what circumstances it is possible for a general practitioner to continue to provide NHS services after a direction has been made by the General Medical Council that his or her name be erased from the register; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: A doctor who is the subject of a decision by the General Medical Council's professional conduct committee to erase his or her name from the register has 28 days in which to appeal against the direction to the judicial committee of the Privy Council. During that period and if there is an appeal, until the appeal is withdrawn or disposed of, the doctor's registration is not affected and he or she is able to continue practising. The professional conduct committee may direct that a doctor's registration should be immediately suspended where it is satisfied that such action is necessary for the protection of members of the public or would be in the best interests of the doctor.

A family health services authority has a duty to remove from its medical list the name of any general practitioner whose name has been erased from the medical register, or whose registration has been suspended, following disciplinary proceedings by the GMC.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the speed in dealing with cases of charges of serious professional misconduct at the NHS tribunal and on appeal; and if she will make a statement in relation to a recent case raised with her by the hon. Member for Woolwich.

Dr. Mawhinney: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State looks to the chairman of the National Health Service Tribunal to deal with references made to the tribunal as speedily as possible within the regulations governing its procedure. The outcome of a hearing of the NHS Tribunal may be that a practitioner is no longer included in a family health service authority list or all such lists. That is a serious matter and the parties must have reasonable time to prepare themselves for the hearing. The tribunal chairman is responsible for ensuring that the proceedings of the tribunal are conducted fairly.

The case drawn to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's attention by the hon. Member was originally scheduled for hearing in September. Unfortunately the hearing was delayed because of the resignation of the previous tribunal chairman. The case has been relisted for 15 November when it will be heard by the tribunal under its new chairman, Mr. Adrian Whitfield QC.

Regional Administration Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 14 April, Official Report, column 616, if she will now make available the final regional administrative costs for 1992-93.

Mr. Sackville: The final regional administrative costs for 1991-92 are unchanged from those given in my reply to the hon. Member on 14 April at column 616.

Information for 1992-93 is contained in the annual accounts for health authorities. We are assembling and summarising these accounts in accordance with statutory deadlines. Comprehensive information will be available at the end of November.

General Practioners (Suspensions)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration she has given to the need for legislation to provide for the suspension of general practitioners from the provision of NHS services.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department is currently considering whether there is a need for legislation to provide for the suspension of general medical practioners, in extreme cases, from the provision of national health service services, and the ways in which suspension would be effected.

Sellafield

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the committed effective dose to children in the terrestrial critical group will be for each year of discharge if the proposed liquid and gaseous radioactive discharges from BNFL's Sellafield installation are granted; and whether any children within that critical group will be exposed to doses exceeding the latest National Radiological Protection board's dose constraints of 0·3 mSv.

Mr. Jack: I have been asked to reply.

The estimated committed effective dose to children in the terrestrial critical group from liquid and gaseous radioactive discharges from Sellafield at the proposed authorised discharge limits is 239 μSv—microsievert—per year. This dose, calculated on the basis of pessimistic assumptions, is below the National Radiological Protection Board's recommended annual dose constraint of 300 μSv in respect of discharges from new plant.

PRIME MINISTER

THORP

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister whether he will place the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield on the agenda of the European Council special summit in Brussels on 29 October.

The Prime Minister: No.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 28 October.

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Official Histories

Mr. Gale: To ask the Prime Minister which further official histories of peacetime events have been commissioned.

The Prime Minister: I have appointed Professor Alan Milward, professor of economic history at the university of London, London School of Economics, as an official historian with effect from October 1993 to write the official history of the United Kingdom's accession to the European Community.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Disabled Access

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what plans he has to improve access to the House Chamber and Committee rooms for wheelchair bound civil servants.

Mr. Ray Powell: The general question of access to the House for the disabled is to be considered in the near future by my Committee. I anticipate that the specific issue of access to the Chamber and Committee rooms will be included in our deliberations.

EMPLOYMENT

Youth, Birmingham

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people aged 16 to 17 years in Birmingham are not in employment, not on a youth training scheme and not in full-time education; and what proportion of that age group this represents.

Miss Widdecombe: In July 1993, there were 428 unemployed claimants aged 16 to 17 years in the Birmingham travel-to-work area. Information on claimant unemployment by age expressed as a percentage of the workforce in a particular age band, is not available below national level.

All 16 and 17-year-olds are covered by the Government's guarantee of an offer of a youth training place, if they are willing to accept YT as a route into employment.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment why reference to ethnic minorities has been omitted from the draft plan for European social fund objective 3 1994-99; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: It has always been our intention that ethnic minorities should continue to be among the beneficiaries of the European social fund—ESF—supported programmes in the next programming period 1994-99. The draft plan outlines a number of ways in which ethnic minorities may receive help from the ESF.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sheep Quota

12. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received on the regulations dealing with sheep quota.

Mr. Jack: I have received a number of representations about the arrangements for sheep quotas, principally from farmers and landowners.

Minke Whales

13. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has made to the Government of Norway about the killing of minke whales in the north Atlantic.

Mr. Jack: The United Kingdom Government have made it clear, at the highest levels, that we deplore the resumption of commercial whaling.

Dairy Sector

14. Sir David Knox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she will next meet the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss the dairy sector.

Mr. Jack: A copy of our consultation document on the England and Wales Milk Marketing Board's reorganisation scheme was sent to the NFU last week. My right hon. Friends look forward to receiving the NFU's views in due course.

Veterinary Products

15. Ms Lynne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has for the reform of veterinary products licensing.

Mr. Soames: I am adapting the licensing system to take account of Community law requirements, including the future systems package, and the deregulation initiative. The core scientific requirements of safety, quality and efficacy will be retained.

Nitrates

16. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to what extent her Department has taken sufficient steps to lessen the amount of nitrates in watercourses and the water table.

Mr. Jack: The Department is playing its full part through the promotion of its nitrate-sensitive area policy in keeping the level of nitrate in water at acceptable levels.

Animal Welfare

17. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received concerning EC legislation to protect the welfare of live farm animals during transport.

Mr. Soames: During the consultation on proposed new Community rules, many representations have been received pressing the Government to seek high standards to protect animals in transport. This is our intention.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has made to the European Council of Ministers concerning the implementation of EC directive 91/628 on the protection of animals during transport.

Mr. Soames: The European Commission has issued proposals for additional rules to protect animals in transport. We are pressing for strong welfare safeguards, based on the high standards which apply in this country.

Tenancy Laws

18. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps she intends to take concerning reform of the agricultural tenancy laws; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have made it clear that we intend to proceed with reform, to the benefit of both landlords and tennants.

Food Processing

19. Mr. Shersby: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what support her Department is giving to food processing companies.

Mr. Jack: We give help in a number of ways, notably export refunds on manufactured foods, marketing and processing grants, funding of export promotion through Food from Britain, and support to R and D on food processing technology under the Link arrangements.

Farm and Conservation Grant

20. Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received concerning the farm and conservation grant scheme; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: We reg. 'arly receive representations about the farm and conservation grant scheme, usually in relation to individual grant cases. Each representation is carefully considered and, where it is both possible and desirable to do so, taken into account when framing adjustments to the conditions of the scheme.

Days-at-sea Regulations

21. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the progress of talks over the implementation of days-at-sea regulations.

Mr. Jack: I have visited a dozen ports in England, Wales and Northern Ireland and met local fishermen and representatives from around 80 organisations associated with fishing. We are now considering the results of these consultations and the results of parallel discussions in Scotland, together with the formal responses we have received from the National Federation of Fishermen's Organisations and from the Scottish Fishermen's Federation, and we shall be announcing our plans soon.

Cattle

22. Mr. Roger Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures are being taken to monitor the causes of infection of cattle by tuberculosis; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: A thorough investigation is carried out following every cattle herd breakdown to attempt to identify the source of the infection and any cattle moved on or off the premises are traced and tested if appropriate.

Wildlife carcases submitted by the public of a range of animals such as deer and badgers are examined for tuberculosis if local staff or the State Veterinary Service believe useful information may be provided.

Badger removal operations are undertaken only where badgers are believed to be involved in the spread of infection to cattle; all badgers killed in these removal operations are examined for tuberculosis.

In support of the bovine tuberculosis programme, the Department is funding a field research programme to provide information on the mode of transmission of bovine tuberculosis from badgers to cattle.

Marketing

23. Mrs. Browning: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps are being taken to improve the marketing of British horticultural products.

Mr. Jack: In addition to the promotional activities in which I and my colleagues are pleased to assist, my right hon. Friend has asked me to undertake a specific and intensive survey of horticultural marketing.

We are also consulting the industry on our proposals for a new marketing development scheme, and our "continental challenge" initiative with European retailers should open the door to better export performance.

Agricultural Training Board

24. Mr. Olner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received concerning the future of the agricultural training board.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my predecessor on 1 April 1993 at column 329 to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) following the consultation exercise on the future status and operation of the agricultural training board.

Nearly 700 responses were received to the consultation document published on 25 September 1992 from a variety of interested organisations and individuals.

No subsequent representations have been made to this Department on this issue.

Weeds Act 1959

26. Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations she has received regarding the future of the Weeds Act 1959; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In response to our consultation on the future of the Weeds Act 1959, some 1,000 representations were received from individuals and bodies, the majority of which were against repeal of the Act.

After careful consideration of these responses by Agricultural Ministers, my noble Friend the Earl Howe announced on 11 October that the Act would be retained. I am pleased that it is perceived as serving a useful purpose.

Potatoes

25. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what alternative proposals she has received to the Potato Marketing Board's plan for the future of potato marketing in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have received alternative proposals for modification of the potato marketing scheme from the National Farmers Union.

I have also received proposals for the abolition of the scheme from the Potato Processors Association.

27. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total expenditure (a) in 1992 and (b) to date in 1993 paid to producers by the potato marketing scheme; and what proportion of that was funded by the levy on producers.

Mr. Jack: For the 1992 crop year—1 July 1992 to 30 June 1993—the total cost of the Potato Marketing Board's —PMB—buying programmes amounted to £20,796,439 of which 92·66 per cent was funded by the levy on producers. For the 1993 crop year commencing on 1 July 1993, the PMB has spent £158,716 to date, all of which has been funded by the levy on producers.

Labour Statistics

28. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the number of persons employed full time either as farmers or farm workers in England; and what was the figure in 1980.

Mr. Jack: The number of persons employed full-time either as farmers or farm workers in England in 1980 and in 1993 is shown in the table.

Year	Whole-time principal farmers, partners and directors (doing farm work)	Salaried managers	Whole-time family workers	Whole-time hired workers	Total number of whole-time workers
1980	136·6	6·9	19·5	121·3	284·2
[1]1993	112·9	7·1	16·6	72·1	208·0

[1]Provisional results.

Notes:

Source: June Census of Agriculture and Horticulture each year.

Includes estimates for minor holdings.

Figures exclude:

(i) the wives/husbands of farmers, partners and directors, even though they themselves may be partners or directors.

(ii) seasonal or casual workers.

Coastal Defences

Dr. Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proportion of coastal defences exhibit some signs of wear or require structural attention.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In 1992, the National Rivers Authority estimated that in England 2 per cent. of sea defence elements—for example, walls, embankments, groynes—were in need of significant works.

Warble fly

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the number of incidents of warble fly in each year since 1989.

Mr. Soames: The number of premises with clinical cases recorded in Great Britain is as follows:

	Number
1989	2
1990	1
1991	0
1993	107

All of the cases recorded in 1993 were directly linked to imported cattle. Seventy-one premises have been released from all controls following satisfactory treatment. The remaining 36 premises will be released from controls when compulsory autumn treatment has been completed.

Agricultural Wages Board

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which International Labour Organisation conventions currently in force relate to the Agricultural Wages Board; when they expire; and what plans she has to renew them.

Mr. Jack: Those International Labour Organisation conventions which are currently in force and relate particularly to the Agricultural Wages Board are convention 99, concerning minimum wage fixing machinery in agriculture, and convention 101, concerning holidays with pay in agriculture. The conventions do not expire, although periodically signatories have the opportunity to reconsider their adherence. Any decision would be for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Broiler Chickens

Mr. Denham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to improve the welfare of broiler chickens.

Mr. Soames: The Government's response to the Farm Animal Welfare Council's Report on the welfare of broiler chickens was published in April 1993. The Government accepted that the council recommendations should be taken forward on a Community basis or, where appropriate, used as the basis for revision of the Government's welfare code.

Folic Acid

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to ensure that breads, cereals and flours are enriched with folic acid.

Mr. Soames: Many breakfast cereals and a number of breads are already fortified with folic acid. My Department has written to the relevant trade organisations to encourage them to increase the range of produces fortified with folic acid in line with recommendations of the expert advisory group in its report to the Chief Medical Officer, "Folic Acid and the Prevention of Neural Tube Defects". The response has been positive and some new fortified products have appeared on the market already. We shall keep in touch with the industry on developments.

Fish

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research she has undertaken into the impact of organophosphate exposure upon fish.

Mr. Soames: No research has been carried out by my Department into the impact of organophosphate exposure on fish, although the results of work on the toxicity of dichlorvos to shell fish were reported to the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea in 1990.

Birds

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research has been conducted by her Department on the effect of the organophosphate Fonofos on the United Kingdom bird population.

Mr. Soames: This Department is currently undertaking research into the effect of seed treatments, including Fonofos, on bird populations as part of its assessment of the environmental hazards of pesticide usage.

Organic Food

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on the future of the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards following changes to the structure of Food from Britain.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: For the time being Food From Britain retains its responsibility for the United Kingdom register of organic food standards—UKROFS—but the secretariat is about to be relocated within my Department. I value UKROFS' independence and effectiveness and want to maintain these through the decisions that need to be taken about UKROFS' longer-term future.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures she intends to take to promote organic farming in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government are keen to encourage farmers to meet the growing demand from consumers for organic produce. The United Kingdom register of organic food standards was established by Food From Britain with funding from MAFF in 1987.

On 10 August, I announced proposals for an aid scheme to farmers in England wishing to convert to organic production methods. It is proposed to launch the scheme this winter and expenditure is planned to rise to £1·5 million by 1995-96. Similar schemes were announced by my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Scotland and Wales and my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

The organic sector can benefit from the group marketing grant scheme, and its successor on which we are currently seeking the views of the industry.

In addition to the organic scheme, the broad range of other MAFF support schemes are open to organic farmers. We also spend some £1 million per annum on research and development specifically related to organic agriculture and advice on organic farming from ADAS.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the value of imported organic food produce in (a) real and (b) cash terms for each year since 1980.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: This information is not available because import statistics do not distinguish between organic and conventional food.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of the consumption of organic produce in each EC member state is met from domestic production.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: This information is not available.

Driftnets

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if she will make a statement regarding the level of compliance with EC regulation 245/92 by the United Kingdom and other EC vessels in the north-east Atlantic and the Mediterranean; and if she will make a statement on the adequacy of the monitoring and enforcement measures in force;

(2) how she plans to vote on the proposal to extend the deadline for all fishing vessels to comply with EC regulation 245/92, which limits the length of driftnets allowed on one vessel, at the EC Fisheries Council meeting in November;

(3) what plans she has to make represention to the European Commission and the Italian Government on the level of enforcement of EC regulation 245/92 in the Italian swordfish driftnet fishery;

(4) whether she will promote the fair and consistent implementation of EC regulation 245/92 which limits the length of EC driftnets and oppose the extension of the existing derogation which exempts some French vessels from the restriction until 31 December.

Mr. Jack: The EC regulation in question is 345/92 of 27 January 1992.

A small number of United Kingdom-registered vessels take part in the summer drift net fishery for long-finned albacore tuna which occurs in the north-east Atlantic beyond British fishery limits. Responsibility for monitoring and enforcing the present arrangements rests with the member states whose vessels participate in the fishery or in whole waters the fishery occurs. British sea fishery officers make spot inspections from time to time to check that nets taken on board do not exceed 2·5 km. A derogation exists permitting longer nets for vessels who were fishing in the north-east Atlantic tuna fishery for at least two years before the regulation came into force. However, this expires on 31 December 1993 and no proposal for a continuation of the derogation has been received. No United Kingdom vessels fish in the Mediterranean and I have no information concerning the swordfish fishery referred to.

Hill Livestock Compensation Allowance

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many hill farmers in England have not yet received their hill livestock compensation allowance in respect of 1993.

Mr. Jack: Of 14,012 claims so far received in England in respect of the 1993 hill livestock compensatory allowances scheme, 396 are still outstanding. This repreents 2·8 per cent. of claims received. Claims are still being received in respect of 1993, albeit in small numbers.

Food Promotion

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what countries United Kingdom food promotion delegates have visited so far this year.

Mr. Jack: Food From Britain, the United Kingdom's food export promotion organisation, maintains a permanent presence in the key markets of north America, Germany, France, Italy, Netherlands, Spain and Belgium.During the current year, FFB has also promoted British food at exhibitions in Japan and Dubai. In the period, Ministers of this Department have visited Turkey, India, Hungary, Argentina, Paraguay and Uruguay with food promotion and other objectives in view.

Apples

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures she intends to take concerning the promotion of British apples.

Mr. Jack: My ministerial colleaguess and I have been pleased to participate in a number of recent events to promote English apples. On 19 October, I attended the launch of the 1993 main apple season. On Apple Day itself, the Minister was presented with an apple pie and the Parliamentary Secretary in the Commons attended Food From Britain's launch of "Great Food From Britain". On 27 October, the Minister visited the Marden fruit show. In addition, I recently announced my horticultural marketing initiative, one of the key aims of which will be to stimulate United Kingdom consumption of United Kingdom produce—including apples.

Seals

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures are being taken to protect and conserve the seal population from the consequences of salmon farming.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 27 May 1993]: I have been asked to reply.

Seals continue to have appropriate protection under the Conservation of Seals Act 1970.

WALES

Family Credit

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many families receive family credit in Wales; and what is this figure expressed as a percentage of all those families eligible for family credit in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: At 30 April 1993, there were an estimated 30,000 claimants in receipt of family credit in Wales. No figures are available for the number of families eligible for family credit.

Income Support

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) men and (b) women are at present in receipt of income support in Wales; and what are the figures expressed as percentage of (i) men between 16 and 64 years and (ii) women between 16 and 60 years respectively.

Mr. Redwood: The latest information available is given in the table:

Income support beneficiaries in Wales, November 1992[1]

	Age	Number (thousands)	Per cent. of age group[2]
Male	16-64	126	14·0
Beneficiaries	65 and over	17	8·3
Total		143	13·0
Female	16-59	135	16·5
Beneficiaries	60 and over	77	20·6
Total		212	17·8

Source: Department of Social Security.

[1] Beneficiaries include partners of recipients. Dependents aged under 19 and still living with the recipient are not included as information on their gender is not available.

[2] Population figures used are for mid-1991.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the Welsh Development Agency concerning the implementation of the recommendations of the Committee of Public Accounts in relation to full recovery from employees of costs incurred through excess private mileage.

Mr. Redwood: I take very seriously the criticisms of the Public Accounts Committe. The Goverment's response to its report makes it clear that there should be contributions by individuals to cover the cost of private use. The agency has recognised this and has ensured that the chief executive and other senior executives make appropriate contributions.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the Welsh Development Agency concerning the recommendations in Sir John Caines' report concerning (a) common directorships held by board members and (b) the apppointment of board members involved in construction and property development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I myself have had none. The WDA has received a copy of the Caines report and would have seen my statement to the House on 19 October.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects implementation of the recommendations of the quinquennial financial management and policy review of the Welsh Development Agency 1991-92, that there should be a management statement and new financial guidelines defining delegation of financial authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: A management statement is in place and the financial guidelines are being revised.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the Welsh Development Agency concerning revisions to the employee handbook (a) in respect of procedures for dealing with conflicts of interest involving employees' families and close personal friends and (b) other respects; what proposals for such revisions have been submitted to him; and when he expects to complete the approval process of such revisions.

Mr. Redwood: None. I understand that the board of the agency is currently considering the revised employee handbook. I expect to see any proposals for changes to terms and conditions when the board has completed its deliberations.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the Welsh Development Agency in relation to the recommendations in Sir John Caines' report to withdraw the facility for WDA staff to sell their cars into the executive car-leasing scheme.

Mr. Redwood: I myself have had no discussions with the WDA. I refer the hon. Member to the agency's response to Sir John Caines' report, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Hill Livestock Allowances

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 25 October about hill livestock compensatory allowances not yet paid, how many field inspections will be carried out in respect of the claims still unpaid in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: This will depend on the number of queries which cannot be resolved by correspondence.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many field inspections have been carried out in respect of hill livestock compensatory allowance applications in Wales in 1993 to date.

Mr. Redwood: Up to 30 September 1993, field inspections had been undertaken to validate 5,590 claims for HLCA from both sheep and cattle producers. The number of actual farm visits will have been substantially less than this because inspections of sheep and cattle claims are often carried out during the same visit.

Sight Tests

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many NHS sight tests took place in each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The number of NHS sight tests paid for by family health services authorities in each year in Wales was as follows:

	Number
1984-85	570,864
1985-86	600,714
1986-87	626,644
1987-88	697,280
1988-89	733,469
1989-90	292,060
1990-91	271,170
1991-92	332,240
1992-93	372,590

SCOTLAND

Forestry

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations the review group has received on the subject of the privatisation of the Forestry Commission.

Mr. Lang: Many individuals and organisations have written to Ministers and Government Departments and to the secretary and members of the forestry review group giving their views on issues connected with the work of the group.

They did not do so in the knowledge or expectation that their names or their submissions would be published and I therefore do not think it would be right to publish this information.

Most of the representations received have been opposed to the idea of privatisation of the Forestry Commission estate, but the remit of the review group is to look at issues much wider than this.

Ministers have asked the group to review:

the effectiveness of the current incentives for forestry investment, in accordance with the manifesto commitment, and options for the ownership and management of Forestry Commission woodlands, and to make proposals for changes which would improve the effectiveness of the delivery of the Government's forestry policy objectives, having regard to the Government's other economic and environmental policies.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he now expects to receive the report from the interdepartmental working party on the future of the Forestry Commission.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 26 October 1993]: Forestry Ministers expect to receive the advice of the forestry review group early next year.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many submissions have been made to date to the interdepartmental working group on the future of the Forestry Commission; and how many of these have favoured privatisation as an option.

Sir Hector Monro: Over 300 organisations and 1,350 individuals have made submissions or offered comment direct to the forestry review group. Comment has also been addressed to Ministers and officials in the other departments represented on the group. The issues most commonly raised are access to woodlands, security of timber supplies and the environment. In so far as these issues might be affected by privatisation, virtually all commentators are opposed.

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made towards publishing the United Kingdom's national forestry plan.

Sir Hector Monro: The Forestry Commission is co-ordinating the publication and work is well advanced.

The plan will draw together the various strands of the Government's present forestry policy and programmes. Since we would not wish the plan to pre-empt the findings of the forestry review group or to prejudice our decisions on its recommendations, it will not be practical to go beyond that.

We have concluded, therefore, that there would be little benefit in consulting publicly before publishing the plan. Instead, we will be inviting comments on the plan after it has been published.

Information Scheme

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he proposes a redeployment of Scottish Office staff across Scotland in connection with the Government's new scheme of information points.

Mr. Lang: My Department has no plans to redeploy Scottish Office staff across Scotland in connection with the Government's new scheme of information points. The 20 information points already opened are located in existing departmental offices and no additional staff were required.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hill farmers in Scotland have not yet received their hill livestock compensatory allowance in respect of 1993.

Sir Hector Monro: Of 17,437 claims so far received in Scotland in respect of the 1993 HLCA scheme, 94 claims are still outstanding. This represents 0·5 per cent. of claims received. A small number of claims are still being received in respect of 1993.

Fish Conservation

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he received the fish conservation report from the Scottish Federation of Fishermen's Organisaations.

Sir Hector Monro: On 30 September 1993.

Smoke Alarms

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what funding is available to assist those with hearing impairment to purchase special smoke alarms for their homes; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 25 October 1993]: I refer to the reply I gave to the hon. Member on Tuesday 19 October 1993, Official Report, columns 37-38.

Farming

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many farm holdings in (a) Scotland and (b) East Lothian, are in the less-favoured area and the non-less-favoured area respectively; and how many holdings include land in both the less-favoured area and non-less-favoured area;

(2) what is the total area of agricultural land in (a) Scotland and (b) East Lothian inside or outside the less-favoured area, respectively.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 27 October 1993]: The information requested as it relates to total agricultural areas is currently available only from the agricultural census. The table gives the figures as recorded at the 1992 census:

	Less-favoured area	Non-less favoured area
Scotland
—holdings	23,326	8,251
—agricultural area (hectares)	5,200,279	684,266
East Lothian
—holdings	47	374
—agricultural area (hectares)	18,819	37,610

The less-favoured area/non-less-favoured area classification is that used for statistical rather than subsidy purposes. On the statistical basis, farms are classified as either within or outside the less-favoured area boundary; no information is, therefore, available from the census on the number of holdings with land in both the less-favoured area and the non-less-favoured area.

Ancient Monuments

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the first national survey of the scheduled ancient monuments in Scotland was completed; when and in what form it will be published; if he will list the damage identified by the survey to scheduled ancient monuments in Scotland from natural forces, vegetation and animals; and what moneys he has allocated during this financial year to tackle the damage identified in the first national survey of scheduled ancient monuments.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by Historic Scotland. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Graeme Munro, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from G. N. Munro to Mr. Nigel Griffiths, dated 28 October 1993:

Sir Hector Monro MP, the Minister for Agriculture and Environment at The Scottish Office has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking when the first national survey of scheduled ancient monuments in Scotland was completed and when and in what form it would be published.

The survey of scheduled ancient monuments is not a "one-off" project with a definite end when a final report can be prepared. Because it involves the continuous monitoring by Historic Scotland's monument wardens on a three to four year cycle of all the scheduled monuments (including the 300 new sites scheduled each year) the results are constantly being updated. The first round of visits by wardens has not yet been completed in three areas—Shetland, Orkney and West Strathclyde (Argyll and Bute).

You also asked the Secretary of State if he would list the damage identified by the survey of scheduled ancient monuments from natural forces, vegetation and animals and what monies he had allocated this financial year to tackle the damage identified.

Analyses of the results of the first round of warden visits are presently being prepared for Highland South and Tayside and Borders Regions for the use of my staff in their conservation work. The publication of summary articles in the professional archaeological press, containing the statistical information you mention, is being considered.

Funds are not specifically allocated for tackling damage to monuments identified by our wardens as being at risk. However monies are available for this sort of work and in financial year 1993-94 these are £14,000 for management agreements under section 17 of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979 and £189,000 for grant aid for the repair of monuments under section 24 of the 1979 Act.

Information Directorate

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are employed in the information directorate of his Department; what was the total cost of the directorate in 1992-93; and if he will give the comparable information for 1978-79.

Mr. Lang: The number of staff employed in the Scottish Office information directorate on 30 September 1993 totalled 51·5. The running cost of the directorate in 1992-93 was £1·9 million. Owing to the introduction of new Scottish Office budgetary arrangements in 1986-86, a directly comparable figure for running costs is not available for 1978-79; and no record has been retained of the total number of people then employed.

Moats

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what action his Department is currently taking to record and preserve moated sites of archaeological interest; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list (a) the surveys and (b) the excavations that are currently being carried out of moated sites of archaeological interest.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 27 October 1993]: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by Historic Scotland. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Graeme Munro, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from G. N. Munro to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 28 October 1993:

Sir Hector Monro MP, the Minister for Agriculture and Environment at The Scottish Office has asked me to reply to your two recent Parliamentary Questions about moated sites of archaeological interest.

Firstly, you asked what action was being taken to record and preserve such sites. The recording of sites of archaeological interest in Scotland is the responsibility of the Royal Commission on the Ancient and Historical Monuments of Scotland (RCAHMS), and their preservation through scheduling and management, is the responsibility of Historic Scotland.

Moated sites (which are most frequent in south-west Scotland) are dealt with in exactly the same fashion as all other sites of archaeological interest. They are recorded by written description and by photographic and drawn illustrations and these records are made available either by printed publication or through the National Monuments Record of Scotland, which the Royal Commission maintains. There is no scheduling campaign directed specifically towards moated sites, but their merits are considered along with all other sites when geographical areas are being considered in the agency's rolling scheduling programme.

Secondly, you asked if the Secretary of State would list the surveys and excavations currently being carried out on moated sites of archaeological interest. The RCAHMS is responsible for carrying out such surveys. They inform me that 8 such sites were surveyed in Scotland in the last year—6 in Annandale and 2 in south east Perthshire. I understand the Royal Commission plan to survey 3 sites next year. There are no excavations currently being carried out on such sites.

If you have concerns about specific moated sites in Scotland I would be pleased to hear and to consider them.

NORTHERN IRELAND

EC Students

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the costs of education in Northern Ireland for EC students met by (a) his Department and (b) each education and library board; and what are the numbers of such students from each EC country and in each level of institute of education.

Mr. Ancram: The following table shows the numbers and estimated costs of fees—only awards held by EC students at Northern Ireland institutions during the 1992-93 academic year.

	Number of students	£000
Department of Education	24	53
Education and Library Boards
North-Eastern	1,330	3,126
Belfast	495	1,163
Western	101	237
Southern	3	7
South-Eastern	—	—

Information is not available on the numbers of students from each EC country. However, 1,852 of the students are ordinarily resident in the Republic of Ireland and the balance—101—come from elsewhere in the EC.

Residential Care Homes

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps will be taken to ensure that the levels of income support for those currently resident in homes should be set at levels which would ensure a choice of homes within income support limits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: In setting the income support limits for people in residential care and nursing homes with preserved rights, the Government take account of information on movements in charging patterns in homes as well as on cost factors.

Dwellings and Tourist Development

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many planning applications were made for dwellings and tourist developments in the Lecale coast, Mourne and Strangford areas of outstanding natural beauty from 1 April 1983 to 31 March 1993; of these, how many were approved and how many were refused; and what were the general reasons for refusal;

(2) how many planning applications were made for dwellings and tourist developments in the environmentally sensitive areas in the Mournes and Slieve Croob areas from 1 April 1983 to 31 March 1993; of these how many were approved and how many were refused; and what were the general reasons for refusal.

Mr. Atkins: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Countryside (Access)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what grant aid was made available to district councils in order to facilitate access to the countryside from 1 April 1983 to 31 March 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins The information is as follows:

Financial Year	Provision (£'000s)
1983/84	10
1984/85	20
1985/86	80
1986/87	90
1987/88	249
1988/89	226
1989/90	275
1990/91	280
1991/92	288
1992/93	295

The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland gives a high priority to improving access and will continue to grant-aid district councils for all reasonable schemes proposed.

Environmental Protection Agency

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will take to establish an environmental protection agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: In Northern Ireland, most of the intended functions of the proposed agency in England and Wales already lie within central Government, namely in the Environment Service of the Department of the Environment. When final details of the agency are available, I will decide whether or not any proposals for change in Northern Ireland should be made.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current assessment of the number of people in Northern Ireland suffering from myalgic encephalomyelitis.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is not available centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Local Anthority Debt

Rev. William McCrea To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current extent of local authority debt in each of the 26 district councils in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: The total debt outstanding from loans and advances from the Government Loans Fund by district council area at 31 March 1992 is set out as follow:

Antrim Borough Council	2,904,499
Ards Borough Council	3,273,355
Armagh District Council	2,635,445
Ballymena Borough Council	860,584
Ballymoney Borough Council	1,655,184
Banbridge District Council	2,745,515
Belfast City Council	12,289,642
Carrickfergus Borough Council	32,370
Castlereagh Borough Council	5,821,792
Coleraine Borough Council	2,388,273
Cookstown District Council	306,375
Craigavon Borough Council	1,456,472
Derry City Council	6,992,348
Down District Council	5,146,690
Dungannon District Council	1,326,877
Fermanagh District Council	888,196
Larne Borough Council	1,740,599
Limavady Borough Council	1,542,266
Lisburn Borough Council	1,970,384
Magherafelt District Council	1,114,525
Moyle District Council	1,773,441
Newry and Mourne District Council	8,917,629
Newtownabbey District Council	7,115,280
North Down Borough Council	10,471,472
Omagh District Council	3,968,856
Strabane District Council	3,807,291
Total	93,145,360

A district council may also borrow money from other financial institutions. However, this information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Residential Care Homes

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps will be taken to ensure that the value of the former homes of a person in residential care is disregarded by the health and social services boards where a former carer remains in the property.

Mr. Ancram: A health and social services board, in assessing a resident's ability to pay for residential or nursing home care, can disregard the value of his or her former home if it is also the sole residence of someone who has been caring for the resident. Where a board has decided to disregard the value of the property because a former long-term carer is living there it may review that decision when that person moves out or dies.

Bogland

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make it his policy to preserve the Curran bog and other areas of bogland left in the Province.

Mr. Atkins: The Government's policy on the conservation of peatland in Northern Ireland is set out in the document "Conserving Peatland in Northern Ireland —a Statement of Policy" issued on 23 June 1993. This states, at paragraph 2.5:—

"It is the Department's intention to declare all remaining areas of intact lowland raised bog as Areas of Special Scientific Interest where they meet the minimum scientific criteria".

In this context, the Department of the Environment is reassessing the scientific interest of a number of lowland bogs that were not in the first round of declarations. Curran bog will be re-evaluated as part of that exercise, and I will write to the hon. Gentleman once that process is complete.

Recycling

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps will be taken to ensure that district councils are allocated sufficient funding to undertake recycling programmes in accordance with Government's guidelines and directives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Government published a consultation paper in March 1993 entitled, "Future Strategy for Waste Management in Northern Ireland". The paper included new legislative proposals similar to the waste management provisions in the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Under these provisions, district councils will be required to draw up recycling plans for their districts. Should councils wish to undertake capital spending on recycling schemes, the Government will be prepared to consider sympathetically applications for loan sanction for this purpose. The legislation will include provision to allow for savings made by district councils as a result of recycling to be made payable to those promoting recycling, such as voluntary groups.

Litter

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps will be taken to ensure that district councils are allocated sufficient funding in order to undertake new duties and responsibilities as a consequence of the proposed Litter Order.

Mr. Atkins: I am aware that district councils have been seeking additional finance to help them implement the requirements of the proposed litter legislation. This matter is under consideration in the light of the responses to the consultation on the publication of the proposal for a Draft Litter (Northern Ireland) Order. I shall make an announcement in the near future on the results of that consultation process.

Disability Benefits

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have made applications in respect of (a) disability living allowance and (b) invalidity benefit from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1993; of these how many were successful; and what financial amounts were made payable.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. Wylie to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 27 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Social Security Agency I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the number of applications received in respect of Disability Living Allowance and Invalidity Benefit from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1993.

During the period 3 February 1992 to 31 March 1993, 31,981 claims to Disability Living Allowance were received, of these 21,627 were successful. In addition 7,958 claims were received from existing Attendance Allowance/Mobility Allowance beneficiaries and of these 6,923 were also successful. The actual expenditure for 1992-93 is not yet available but the estimated expenditure is £57 million.

Information on the number of applications received in respect of Invalidity Benefit during the period 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1993 and the number who were successful is not available in the form requested. However the number of persons receiving the benefit at April each year from 1988 to 1993 and the yearly benefit expenditure are as follows:

Year	Number of persons receiving invalidity benefit	Benefit expenditure
		£ million
1988	45,318	130·1
1989	47,735	141·2
1990	50,890	157·3
1991	54,122	182·0
1992	58,197	215·0
1993	62,823	[1]238·4

[1] Estimated.

I hope you will find this reply helpful. Further information on social security claims and expenditure is published in "Expenditure, Plans and Priorities (Northern Ireland)". A copy of this reply will appear in the Official Report and copies will be placed in the Library.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are taken to ensure that adequate resources are allocated to the disability section of the Department of Health and Social Services in order that staff can deliver a full and effective service.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. Wylie to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 27 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Social Security Agency I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about resources for Disability Living Allowance Branch.

Since Disability Living Allowance was introduced in April 1992, we have been keeping the resource position under close review. Overall the staffing level has risen by around 100 posts in the past 18 months with the complement now standing at 241 posts.

The target of clearing 65% of claims within 30 days has been met from June 1993 and I am satisfied that the Branch is adequately resourced to handle the current intake of claims. I would however assure you that workloads and staffing levels will continue to be closely monitored to ensure that claims from our customers are processed as quickly as possible.

I hope this helps explain the position for you. A copy of this reply will appear in the Offical Report and copies will be placed in the Library.

Social Fund

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have made applications to the social fund at each of the social security offices in South Down from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1993; of these how many were successful; and what financial amounts were made payable.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A.Wylie to Mr. Eddie McGrady, dated 27 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Social Security Agency I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the number of people who made applications to the Social Fund at each of the social security offices in South Down from 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1993, the numbers who were successful and the amounts involved.

The information is not held precisely in the form requested but I have set out the available data in the attached table.

As an individual can make more than one application to the Social Fund the figures shown refer to the total number of applications received. As regards details for each Social Security Office in South Down, these can only be supplied for the period 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1991. From April 1991 the Social Fund has been managed on a District basis and I am therefore providing information from that date in respect of Mourne District, comprising Newry, Banbridge, Newcastle and Kilkeel and for Belfast South and Down District which covers Knockbreda, Shaftesbury Square, Downpatrick and Ballynahinch.

You may be interested to know that information about the number of applications processed, the number of awards and the amount paid, is available in the Library under Social Fund Data. The figures are updated on a monthly basis.

I hope you will find this information helpful. A copy of this reply will appear in the Official Report and copies will be placed in the Library.

Residential Care Homes

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he will take to ensure that all residents in nursing and residential homes receive their personal allowance of £12.65 per week.

Mr. Ancram: The registration and inspection units monitor the extent to which residential and nursing homes help residents to control their own finances, including personal allowances, as part of their inspection process. They also monitor the arrangements in place for handling the finances of those residents who cannot look after their own affairs. The units have the power to cancel the registration of residential and nursing homes where standards are considered to be below an acceptable level.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps will be taken to increase income support levels for those in receipt of care in residential and nursing homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: Each year the Government make an assessment of the position and look carefully at the levels of the income support limits as part of the general benefit uprating exercise. This will continue to be the case.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what reports have been received in respect of residential and nursing homes by the registration and inspection units set up under the Residential Homes Order 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ancram: The Eastern, Northern and Western boards registration and inspection units have each produced two annual reports which detail the work undertaken since their establishment. The Southern board's registration and inspection unit is about to produce its first annual report. The reports are presented to health and social services boards and are available to members of the public on request.

Local Government Reorganisation

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he has last met representatives of the Association of Local Authorities in Northern Ireland to discuss local government reorganisation.

Mr. Atkins: I have never met representatives of the Association of Local Authorities of Northern Ireland to discuss local government reorganisation, nor have I had any request to do so.

Job Vacancies

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the number of new vacancies notified to jobcentres in Strabane, Omagh, Cookstown and Magherafelt during the past three years, together with the number of job losses during the same period in each area.

Mr. Atkins: The information on new vacancies notified to local offices of the Training and Employment Agency and jobs lost in each area during the three-year period up to 8 October 1993 is as follows:

	Vacancies notified	Jobs lost
Cookstown	1,849	90
Magherafelt	2,496	600
Omagh	3,129	30
Strabane	1,941	237

The figures for jobs lost are based on returns made to the Department of Economic Development.

Government Employees

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Government employees, including home civil servants, there are in Northern Ireland.

Sir John Wheeler: On 1 April 1993, there were 33,009 whole-time equivalent staff employed in the Departments for which my right hon. and learned Friend has responsibility.

In counting whole-time equivalent staff, part-time employees are counted as halves.

Sight Tests

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many national health service sight tests took place in each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Ancram: The numbers of health service sight tests for which payments was made in Northern Ireland in the financial years 1984-85 to 1992-93 were:

Financial year	Total health service sight tests (Thousands)
1984-85	207·1
1985-86	221·0
1986-87	231·1
1987-88	254·9
1988-89	284·9
1989-90	143·8
1990-91	119·5
1991-92	142·3
1992-93	159·9

From 1 April 1989 health service sight tests were restricted to certain groups in the population, and there was a substantial increase in demand prior to this restriction. This resulted in a backlog of payments for tests done in 1988-89, which was not cleared until the next financial year.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Crown Court

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many cases were tried in the Crown court in the last available three months; and what were the figures for the equivalent period (a) one year ago and (b) two years ago.

Mr. John M. Taylor: During the three months July to September 1993, 5,148 cases were disposed of by trial in the Crown court. The corresponding figures for the same period in 1992 and 1991 were 6,719 and 7,271 respectively.

Public Trust Office

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans his Department has to establish the Public Trust Office as a next steps agency.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I am pleased to announce that it is the Lord Chancellor's intention to establish the Public Trust Office as an executive agency in the second half of 1994. As part of the process of establishing the office as an agency, the Lord Chancellor will be examining the services the office provides, defining them clearly and asking the public trustee to draw up a statement of charter standards, setting out the levels of service the office aims to achieve.

Although the agency will initially comprise all the present functions of the office, the Lord Chancellor has asked for further work to be carried out to examine the continuing need for a trustee service provided by the public sector and whether the functions undertaken by the Court Funds Office are necessary.

Snaresbrook Crown Court

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on how many occasions in 1993 scheduled individual sittings of separate courts within the Snaresbrook Crown court complex have been unable to sit due to the absence of a judge or recorder; what was the specific reason for each such cancellation; what was the date of the maximum number of cancellations occurring on a single day; and what was the estimated cost to public funds on that day, and the total for the year so far.

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 18 October 1993]: The information requested is not readily available in the form requested and could be obtained in that form only at disproportionate cost. However, I am in a position to provide the following information on planned and actual sittings for the Crown court at Snaresbrook in the period 22 March 1993 to 11 October 1993.

Week commencing	Judge days
	Planned	Sat
22 March 1993	94	96
29 March 1993	96	95
5 April 1993	44	41
14 April 1993	30	30
19 April 1993	93	91
26 April 1993	96	96
4 May 1993	81	74
10 May 1993	95	94
17 May 1993	96	98
24 May 1993	95	95
2 June 1993	59	52
7 June 1993	99	98
14 June 1993	98·5	97
21 June 1993	90·5	94
28 June 1993	91	91
5 July 1993	94	86
12 July 1993	95	95
19 July 1993	100	99
26 July 1993	87	87
2 August 1993	60	61
9 August 1993	59	56
16 August 1993	55	56
23 August 1993	54	54
31 August 1993	42	35
6 September 1993	65	62
13 September 1993	69·5	70
20 September 1993	63	63
27 September 1993	58·5	59
4 October 1993	55	55
11 October 1993	78	79

During the period, there were 44·5 planned sittings cancelled, the largest number being eight during the week of 5 July 1993. However, there were also 11·5 sittings which were not originally scheduled.

Planned sittings are cancelled for a variety of reasons including:—

(a) Judicial sick leave;

(b) Lack of work/lack of suitable work;

(c) Recorder, Assistant Recorder or Deputy Circuit Judge being unable to fulfil their booking at short notice; and

(d) Leave being taken at short notice.

Actual sittings may exceed planned sittings if recorders or assistant recorders unexpectedly become available to sit.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what has been the number of people who have received legal aid in each of the last three years.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The number of acts of assistance provided under the legal aid scheme between 1990-91 and 1992-93 was 2·6 million, 3 million and 3·3 million respectively.

Land Registry

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department for what reason survey work in Her Majesty's Land Registry's current market testing exercise has been awarded to Ordnance Survey; and what consideration was given to private sector bids.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Ordnance Survey bid for the whole of England and Wales represented the best value for money when compared with any other combination of bids. Her Majesty's Land Registry gave full and proper consideration to all the bids received from the private sector, and the evaluation process observed scrupulously the principles of fair trading and good management practice.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Predatory Birds

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many applications his Department has received in the past six months for licences to control the threat to fisheries from cormorants and similar predatory birds.

Mr. Soames: From 1 April to 30 September 1993, 34 such licence applications were received.

Pesticides

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much has been allocated by her Department in each of the last 10 years for monitoring and inspecting levels of pesticide residue in food.

Mr. Soames: The costs of monitoring for pesticide residues carried out by the Government's working party on pesticide residues over the last 10 years are as follows:

	£ million
1992-93	2·1
1991-92	1·9
1990-91	1·8
1989-90	1·5
1988-89	0·9
1987-88	0·7
1986-87	0·55
1985-86	[1]0·5
1984-85	[1]0·5
1983-84	[1]0·5

[1] Approximately.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make it her policy to adopt a target for reducing pesticide use in the United Kingdom by 50 per cent. by 2,000.

Mr. Soames: No. Government policy is to ensure that pesticide use is limited to the minimum necessary for the effective control of pests compatible with the protection of human health and the environment. As I informed the hon. Member in my answer of 26 May 1993, columns 597-98, this policy is pursued through the approvals process and our research programme. The tonnage of pesticide applied in England and Wales between 1980 and 1990 fell by 21 per cent. There is also increasing evidence that users are seeking to use reduced application rates where possible, building on the results of research findings.

Sheep and Cattle Farms

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the net farm income for mainly sheep and sheep and cattle farms in severely disadvantaged areas in England and Wales, in both nominal and real terms for each year since 1978.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The statistical information used in the autumn review of hill livestock compensatory allowances will be placed in the Library of the House when the outcome of the review is announced on 30 November.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many producers in England and Wales are entitled to hill livestock compensatory allowances; and what proportion of those are located in (a) severely disadvantaged areas and (b) disadvantaged areas.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Some 30,000 producers in England and Wales are currently entitled to claim hill livestock compensatory allowances; of these about 22,000 farm either wholly or in part within the severely disadvantaged area and the remaining 8,000 farm either wholly or in part within the disadvantaged area and land outside the less-favoured area.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers in England and Wales were in receipt of hill livestock compensatory allowances in the severely disadvantaged areas according to the most recent figures for each year since 1978.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Precise annual figures covering this period are not available but the number of claimants paid each year under the hill livestock compensatory allowances scheme to farmers with holdings located either wholly or partially within the severely disadvantaged area, or the corresponding area prior to the extension of the less-favoured areas in 1985, has risen slightly from about 20,700 in 1980 to 21,300 in 1992.

Ewe and Cow Premiums

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will give the figures for England and Wales relating to 1993 for the value of the ewe premium and suckler cow premium per head distinguishing the value of any supplements if applicable.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The rate of sheep annual premium in England and Wales for the 1993 marketing year is fixed only after the end of the year. To date, Commission regulations provide for payments of two advances totalling £12·55 per eligible ewe and a supplement in less-favoured areas of £5·16 per eligible ewe. The final rate of premium and supplement due in spring 1994 will reflect the level of market prices and green rates operating in each member state throughout the marketing year.

The 1993 suckler cow premium rate per head is £65·73 in England and Wales. In addition a payment of £28·17 per head can be made if the stocking density on a holding is less than 1·4 livestock units per hectare of eligible forage area.

Aujeszky's Disease

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement about the arrangements for the use of the surplus levy funds from the Aujeszky's disease eradication fund.

Mr. Soames: We have held discussions with the Pig Disease Eradication Fund Ltd. and have drawn up an arrangement for the use of the accrued interest on the surplus levy funds. Starting in this financial year, for three years the accrued interest will be used to offset some of the costs of the monitoring work carried out by the state veterinary service to maintain Great Britain's internationally recognised health status. The capital sum will remain untouched by this arrangement. At the end of the three years we will carry out a further review with the Pig Disease Eradication Fund, in the light of the developments regarding pig disease in the United Kingdom and EC. I am pleased that the Pig Disease Eradication Fund Ltd. accepts this arrangement.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Siemion Serafimowicz

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what inquiries have been received from overseas Governments regarding Siemion Serafimowicz, now living in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 28 October 1993]: None.

Immigration

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long it takes on average for replies to be sent to legal representatives dealing with deportation and immigration cases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Charles Wardle: The information is not available.

DEFENCE

AWE, Aldermaston

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether red commissioning has commenced on the A90 complex at AWE, Aldermaston.

Mr. Aitken: No.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all modifications made to the liquid and solid waste treatment plants at AWE, Aldermaston, following the publication of the Pochin report.

Mr. Aitken: Details of the large number of modifications carried out for liquid waste treatment are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate costs. However, significant modifications have been made in the following areas:

Effluent collection system
Effluent treatment
Sludge solidification
Treated effluent discharge
Change room access to plants

Solid waste is not treated on site.

Dangerous Flying

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what sanctions are available to discipline pilots of military aircraft who have been guilty of dangerous flying and who have left the service before the institution of disciplinary proceedings under service regulations.

Mr. Hanley: The disciplinary codes of all three services make provision for court-martial action to be taken against former service pilots who have committed an offence, provided the trial begins within six months of their ceasing to be subject to service discipline. These provisions would cover the offences of dangerous and low flying.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will introduce legislation to make dangerous flying in military aircraft over the United Kingdom an offence.

Mr. Hanley: Existing legislation deals adequately with occurrences of dangerous flying. I refer the hon. Member to section 20 of the Navy Discipline Act 1957, section 49 of the Army Act 1955 and section 49 of the Air Force Act 1955.

Low Flying

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the RAF police investigation of the low-flying incident over Gullane on 16 September 1992 included (a) an interview with the rear-seat passenger in the Tornado or (b) interviews with or attempts to find witnesses on the ground apart from the original complainer.

Mr. Hanley: The RAF police investigation of the low-flying incident over Gullane on 16 September 1992 did not include an interview with the rear seat passenger of the aircraft or interviews with or attempts to find witnesses on the ground other than the original complainant.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the established procedure to be followed if a Tornado navigator feels unwell during a low-level sortie.

Mr. Hanley: No specific procedures apply if a Tornado navigator feels unwell during a low level sortie. The pilot will decide appropriate action, which may range from carrying on with the original purpose of the flight in the case of a temporary incapacity to terminating the sortie, in the light of the particular circumstances.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the regulations for low-level familiarisation flights in Tornado aircraft; what are the criteria for weather at base and operating area, and the minimum altitude and maximum speed; whether such flights can include low passes or simulated attacks either on planned targets or targets of opportunity; what are the limits on bank angle and G pull on such flights; what specific manoeuvres are prohibited in such flights; and whether such flights are permitted in operational GRI and GRIA variants.

Mr. Hanley: The weather criteria for a low-level Tornado familiarisation sortie are visibility of 5 km and 1,500 m horizontal and 500 ft vertical separation from cloud. These are the standard criteria for military low flying. The weather at the base airfield must also meet the standard criteria for take off and landing of 800 m visibility and a minimum cloud base of 200 ft. The minimum altitude permitted during the sortie is 250 ft minimum separation distance; and the maximum speed permitted would normally be 480 knots, although an absolute maximum speed overland of 550 knots may be permitted for very short time periods. Low passes and simulated attacks would be permitted. There are no limits placed on the angle of bank, and the maximum G would be dictated by the limits placed on the aircraft unless the passenger's medical clearance specified a lower limit. No specific manoeuvres are prohibited but the involvement of passengers in the operation of weapon release equipment or switches is not permitted. Such sorties may be flown in operational variants of the Tornado GR1 and GR1a. All such sorties must be properly authorised, and the pilot of the aircraft must meet minimum experience and qualification standards before being permitted to fly passengers.

Laser-guided Bombs

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on his plans for procuring precision-guided munitions to fulfil staff requirement 1242; and what is the timetable for this procurement;

(2) if it is his intention to exclude non-European participation from competition for SR 1242.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Worcester (Mr. Luff) on 4 May 1993, columns 18-19. Twelve companies in the United Kingdom, United States and Europe were invited to tender by 4 August 1993. Three companies responded—one each in the United Kingdom, United States and France. We are currently considering these in detail but I do not expect to be able to announce the results of the competition until the new year.

Military Flights

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the southerly directional flow control was introduced for military flights over the Gullane/ Aberlady area.

Mr. Hanley: The flow controls north of East Fortune airfield were introduced on 1 June 1992.

Nuclear Weapons Accidents

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the maximum area that might have to be (a) evacuated and (b) subjected to restrictions in a worst case scenario nuclear weapons transport accident; and what are the maximum arc and distance that would be involved in the most unfavourable weather conditions;

(2) if he will make a statement on the extent of nuclear weapon plutonium dispersion hazards.

Mr. Hanley: Because of the stringent safety precautions observed, a nuclear weapon transport accident that posed a real hazard to the public would be an extremely unlikely event. The worst scenario would involve the crash of a military aircraft transporting nuclear weapons which then subsequently produced a release of respirable particles of plutonium.

The MOD document for local authorities and emergency services, issued in December 1992, does address this scenario, and gives general guidance on the measures that should be taken promptly to protect the public. A copy of the document is already available in the Library of the House. The document makes clear that further specific advice would be given by the MOD for the particular circumstances of an accident.

Joint Direct Attack Munition

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the decision by the US Defense Department to exclude foreign participation at prime contractor level from the completion for a joint direct attack munition.

Mr. Aitken: Despite representations by the Ministry of Defence, the US Department of Defense has decided to exclude foreign participation at prime contractor level in its joint direct attack munition programme because of US national security constraints. However, foreign firms may participate as sub-contractors and United Kingdom companies will no doubt pursue any opportunities in this area.

Submarine Accidents

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the maximum area and radius which would have to be (a) evacuated and (b) subjected to restrictions in the worst case scenario of a severely ruptured submarine reactor due to collision or other circumstances in the firth of Forth or the firth of Clyde; and what contingency plans have been made.

Mr. Hanley: The overall probability of any accident resulting in even a small release is very low indeed. Nevertheless it remains prudent to develop contingency plans to respond to the possibility of an accident which might result in a radioactive hazard. The risk of an accident which would require the application of public protection measures such as shelter, evacuation or taking potassium iodate tablets from any accident location is no more likely than about one in 1 million in any one year, even assuming a reactor is operating continuously at that particular location.

Personnel Statistics

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a breakdown by section, agency or function of the numbers of civil servants, civilian and non-military personnel employed by his Department.

Mr. Aitken: The information requested is published in Defence Statistics 1993 tables 2.3 and 2.27, a copy of which is held in the House of Commons Library.

Pilot Training

Dr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual cost of the RAF pilot training operations, Bristol university air squadron and No. 3 Air Experience Flight, at Colerne airfield, Wiltshire.

Mr. Hanley: The Bristol university air squadron and No. 3 Air Experience Flight, which commenced operations at Colerne airfield in April have budget allocations for the current financial year of £758,000 and £329,000 respectively.

Dr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many young people are currently being trained to fly at Colerne airfield; and how many of these trainees are expected to join the RAF as pilots.

Mr. Hanley: Forty-three young people are currently being trained to fly at Colerne airfield with the Bristol university air squadron. From experience, we would expect about 70 per cent. to join the RAF as pilots.

Seawolf Missiles

Mr. James Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about orders for vertical launch Seawolf missiles.

Mr. Aitken: I am pleased to announce that we have awarded a contract for a second production order of 450 vertical launch Seawolf missiles to British Aerospace Defence Ltd., Dynamics Division. These will provide 24-hour protection for the Royal Navy's type 23 frigates against aircraft and anti-ship missiles.

The value of the order is more than £100 million. Work will be centred at the company's Lostock and Filton sites. It will sustain some 100 jobs within the company, and many more at sub-contractors throughout the country.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Konver Programme

Mr. McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether the Commission rules for funding under the Konver programme apply only to small and medium-sized enterprises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Ms Anderson) on 27 October, Official Report, column 643.

Methane

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the potential contribution of coal-bed methane to United Kingdom energy resources; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Coalbed methane is still in the exploration phase in the United Kingdom, determining if production is viable. No estimate has therefore been made.

Although the coal fields are well defined, it is necessary to find out the parameters that will govern the rate and extent of release of methane from United Kingdom coals and to adapt the production technique for United Kingdom conditions.

Iron and Steel Readaptation Benefit

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the future of the iron and steel readaptation benefits scheme.

Mr. Sainsbury: The scheme was set up in 1974 since when many improvements have been made to the arrangements for helping unemployed people. ISERBS is not very effective in assisting redundant steel workers to re-enter the labour market and has not proved good value for money. Further large-scale restructuring in the United Kingdom steel industry is no longer anticipated. Redundant steel workers should henceforth be treated in the same way as most other redundant workers. ISERBS will therefore be terminated.

The termination will apply in respect of closures, capacity cuts or changes in activities at steel companies which take place from today. However, it is important that appropriate transitional arrangements are put in place which are as fair as possible. Accordingly I am today also issuing a consulation paper and inviting comments by 10 December 1993 on those arrangements in respect of such events which I am satisfied are imminent.

Eco-management and Audit Regulation

Mr. David Porter: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the result of the consultation exercise in relation to the accreditation arrangements relating to the EC Eco-management and audit regulation and British Standard BS 7750.

Mr. McLoughlin: The consultation exercise showed clear support for the appointment of the National Accreditation Council for Certification Bodies as accreditation body for both the EC regulation and BS7750. NACCB is being asked to start work immediately so that it has the maximum possible time to develop accreditation arrangements which will include the necessary environmental dimension and to streamline procedures so that both regulation and standard may be as accessible as possible, to small firms in particular. We are actively considering the formal separation of NACCB from BSI and a further announcement will be made in due course. A further announcement will also be made in due course on the appointment of a competent body under the terms of the regulation.

Accounts Services Agency

Mr. Heald: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the review of options for the future of DTI's Accounts Services Agency.

Mr. Eggar: The Department has received a proposal for a management led employee buy out from members of the agency's management. I very much welcome this initiative.

In view of this proposal and of the very good progress the Accounts Services Agency has made in developing a more commercial approach since it became an agency in October 1991, I have decided to commission a review to consider the options for the future of the agency.

PA Consulting Group has been appointed to assess the commercial position and prospects of the agency; to assess the current and potential developments in the markets in financial and management accounts services, and the opportunities and threats these may present to the agency; and to consider alternative possible forms of ownership and management. The consultants will assess the advantages and disadvantages to the Department, the agency, its customers and staff of all options.

In assessing the options the consultants will need to take account of the requirement to ensure that the Department continues to receive essential accounting services. The Department is reviewing its requirements for these services, and the scope for them to be met from the private sector, in parallel with the review by consultants.

In undertaking their review the consultants will take account of the proposal for a management-led employee buy-out.

EC Trade Mark Office

Mr. Mills: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received about the economic and employment effect of locating the proposed European Community trade mark office in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 28 October 1993]: The Government have received two letters about the proposed Community trade mark office since January this year.

The location of CTMO has been linked to the question of the seats of other Community bodies. The Government's priority has always been to get the best deal for the United Kingdom. Our bid for the CTMO remains on the table.

Press Advertising

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much Companies House has spent on press advertising in the years 1991-92, 1992-93 and so far in 1993-94.

Mr. Neil Hamilton [holding answer 27 October 1993]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the chief executive of Companies House Executive Agency for which my Department is responsible. I have therefore asked Mr. David Durham to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Durham to Sir Michael Grylls, dated 29 October 1993:

On 21 October you tabled the following Parliamentary Question:—

To ask the President of the Board of Trade, how much Companies House has spent on Press advertising in the years 1991-92, 1992-93 and so far in 1993-94.

Following the answer given by the President of the Board of Trade, I am replying as Chief Executive of Companies House.

In 1991-92 Companies House spent £106,399 on display advertising in national and regional newspapers, trade and professional press. In 1992-93 the figure was £232,744 and in the current financial year Companies House has spent £39,178 with a further £47,476 committed.

These figures exclude VAT. They cover advertising paid for directly by Companies House as well as advertising funded by the Department of Trade and Industry.

I hope this information is helpful to you.

TRANSPORT

Trans-Pennine Study

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce the Government's response to the public consultation on the trans-Pennine study.

Mr. Key: I shall make my response when all replies to the public consultation have been fully considered.

Vehicle Operator Licensing

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list details of road checks on light goods vehicles and passenger-carrying vehicles carried out by vehicle inspectorate staff during 1992; and how many vehicles were issued with defect notices or prohibition notices.

Mr. Key: The vehicle inspectorate collects information on a financial rather than a calender year basis. The figures below relate to the financial year 1992-93.

	Number
Roadworthiness checks
LGVs[1]
Number of vehicles checked	134,382
Number of prohibitions issued	18,786
Number of defect notices issued	18,379
PCVs[2]
Number of vehicles checked	29,542
Number of prohibitions issued	2,366
Number of defect notices issued	4,275
Vehicles examined
LGVs	295,124
PCVs	40,508
Vehicles weighed or prohibited
LGVs
Number weighed	124,004
Number prohibited	6,987

[1] Large goods vehicle
[2]Passenger carrying vehicle
These figures include 8,012 and 4,647 special partial checks on headlights and exhaust emissions on LGVs and PCVs respectively.
VI issues advisory defect notices only as part of its roadworthiness checks.
Traffic enforcement checks (checking driver hours and operator, vehicle and driver licences)

M20

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was (a) the agreed cost, (b) the final cost, (c) the estimated time for and (d) the actual time taken, of the construction and widening of the M20 motorway between junctions 5 and 8.

Mr. Key: (a) The accepted tender for widening the M20 between junctions 5 and 8 is £69·5 million.

(b) The final cost is not yet known.

(c) Work started on 29 July 1991. The original contract completion date was 15 February 1993 but extensions of time have been granted under the terms of the contract.

(d) The works are still under construction.

Motorway Network

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those links on the national motorway network which (a) are to dual four-lane specification and carry average daily traffic volumes in excess of 120,000 vehicles, (b) are to dual four-lane specification and carry average daily traffic volumes between 100,000 and 120,000 vehicles., (c) are to dual three-lane specification and carry average daily traffic volumes in excess of 80,000 vehicles, (d) are to dual three-lane specification and carry average daily volumes between 65,000 and 80,000 vehicles, (e) are to dual two-lane specification and carry average daily traffic volumes in excess of 50,000 vehicles and (f) are to dual two-lane specification and carry average daily traffic volumes between 40,000 and 50,000 vehicles.

Mr. Key: This information is not immediately available, but I will write to the hon. Member in due course.

Bicycles

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many accidents were recorded in the last 12 months involving pedestrians and bicycles.

Mr. Key: Latest available data show that there were 24,962 pedestrian accidents and 49,767 bicycle accidents during the 12 months of 1992.

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to introduce regulations making it compulsory for bicycles to carry a warning device to warn pedestrians of their approach.

Mr. Key: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 11 May by my hon. Friend the Member for Lincoln (Mr. Carlisle), to a question by my hon. Friend the Member for Monmouth (Mr. Evans), Official Report, 12 May 1993, column. 380.

A38

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if it is his intention to give further consideration to a route option to the south of Landrake as part of the consultation procedures for the A38 trunk road improvement between Saltash and Trerulefoot; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: We are considering all the responses to the recent public consultation, including suggestions for an alternative to the south of Landrake.

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when work will commence on the installation of speed control cameras and the construction of a footbridge over the A38 trunk road at Landrake; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: We are arranging for the provision early in the new year of the necessary electrical and other work which will enable the police to install a speed enforcement camera at Landrake on the A38 trunk road.

Construction of a footbridge over the A38 in the village requires the acquistion of privately owned land. We have yet to settle whether this land can be acquired by agreement, permitting construction in 1994-95, or whether compulsory purchase powers will have to be used, which would lead to later construction.

Transport Research Laboratory

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the benefits that have arisen for safety of drivers, passengers, pedestrians and cyclists from the innovations and work of the transport and road research laboratory in the last 10 years; and what plans he has to ensure that further progress in this field is maintained by commercial contact with bodies other than his own Department.

Mr. Key: The Transport Research Laboratory has been responsible for many research projects which have made important contributions to the safety of road users. For example, work on vehicle standards has provided benefits for both vehicle occupants and vulnerable road users, research on urban safety has resulted in the implementation of low cost engineering schemes showing significant casualty reductions and work on skidding accidents has led to a new road surface standard which has again significantly reduced casualties.

The Department intends to continue with a major programme of research in road and vehicle safety at TRL, and expects to place contracts both with TRL and with other researchers. TRL for its part is also seeking work in these fields from bodies other than the Department.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the benefits obtained for his Department and the nation since the Transport Research Laboratory, Crowthorne became an executive agency in April 1992; and if he will list the possible further benefits and disbenefits he expects to raise from its full privatisation

Mr. Key: Benefits have been obtained through the Transport Research Laboratory's good performance against the challenging annual efficiency and quality targets set by my right hon. Friend; and through its high-quality research output, which has informed a range of policy decisions. The possible benefits and disbenefits of transferring the laboratory to the private sector are currently being studied by external consultants.

Union Railways

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive a comprehensive report from Union Railways concerning the route of its proposed fast link, its costs, finance, operating capacity, international traffic forecasts, and forecasts of passenger traffic generated from any intermediate station; and when the report will be made available to the public.

Mr. Freeman: I received today a report from Union Railways which, apart from commercially sensitive information, will be published when the Government's decisions are announced.

Office Costs

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 on rent and other costs associated with the offices of his Department at 2 Marsham street, London.

Mr. Norris: The estimated expenditurre on rent and other associated accommodation costs for the Department's offices at 2 Marsham street, London, is £10,156,641 in 1993-94.

Jubilee Line Extension

Sir Michael Neubert To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current position on the proposed extension to the Jubilee line to Stratford via Canary Wharf; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The High Court today discharged the relevant Olympia and York companies from administration; accordingly I shall today be giving the chairman of London Regional Transport my approval for London Underground Ltd. to let contracts for the construction and equipment of the Jubilee line extension. This reflects the fact that, in anticipation of their release from administration, and with the permission of Court, Olympia and York as the developers of Canary Wharf have entered into agreements to make a contribution of some £400 million towards the cost of the extension, a previously envisaged. The first contribution, of some £100 million, will be made forthwith, finance having been made available by the European Investment bank.

London Underground Ltd. will start letting contracts for the extension at once. The total cost of the project is put at £1·9 billion, with the creation of over 22,000 jobs in the United Kingdom. London Underground Ltd. envisage completion of the extension in the first half of 1998. The 10-mile line will have 11 stations, including one at Westminster.

I warmly welcome this successful outcome. The new line, assisted by private sector finance, will be of major benefit to London and its transport system, and in particular to the development of docklands.

Director and Co-ordinator of Transport Security

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, when he will publish the 1992-93 annual report of the Director and Co-ordinator of Transport Security.

Mr. John MacGregor: I am today placing copies of this report in the Library of the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members Dining Room

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what plans he has to improve the ventilation in the Members' Dining Room.

Mr. Ray Powell: Although there are no current plans specifically to improve ventilation in the Members' Dining Room, I understand that this matter forms part of the Catering Committee's comprehensive investigations into options for the modernisation of the Refreshment Department.

Chamber (Seating)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will introduce proposals to arrange for the Chamber to be so arranged as to provide seating for every hon. Member; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I have no plans to do so.

University College, Swansea

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council what plans he has to publish the report carried out by Sir Michael Davies last year in respect of three philosophy lecturers at University college, Swansea; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the right hon. Member for Swansea, West (Mr. Williams) on 6 July 1993, column. 114.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many parliamentary questions have been answered on or since 18 October with the statement that the answer could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Newton: The number of answers given to parliamentary questions from 18 to 25 October 1993 recorded in the POLIS database as including a reference to part or all of the information being available only at disproportionate cost was 13. The total number of POLIS entries for written answers in that period was 1,374.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Overseas Aid

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what guidelines are used in evaluating whether or not to grant support for projects under the Overseas Development Administration's aid and trade provision.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The criteria used in evaluating aid and trade provision cases are set out in the ATP "Guidelines for Applicants" booklet, copies of which are in the Libraries of the House. This is currently being revised to take account of the new OECD rules governing tied aid which came into force in 1992 and the revised arrangements for ATP announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development in another place on 17 June. Copies of the revised guidelines will be placed in the Libraries of the House when available.

Commonwealth Institute

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he received from his Commonwealth counterparts at the Commonwealth conference in Cyprus in regard to the decision to withdraw Government funding for the Commonwealth Institute in London.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The Commonwealth Secretary General reminded my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State of the Secretary-General's statement of 22 September regretting the decision. There were no other representations.

Overseas Aid (Efficiency)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria the Government use to judge the efficiency of overseas aid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Ensuring the efficiency and effectiveness of United Kingdom aid has the highest priority. The ODA's departmental report 1993, Cm 2202, sets out the Government's approach to these issues.

Pakistan and India

Mr. Bates: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the amount of British aid given to Pakistan and India in 1992-93.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The provisional figures for gross bilateral aid to India and Pakistan in 1992-93 are £114·7 million and £34·5 million respectively. The final figures will be available in "British Aid Statistics", due to be published later this year.

UNICEF Progress

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans the ODA has to meet representatives of UNICEF-UK to discuss the implications for United Kingdom overseas aid policy of the findings of the UNICEF report "The Progress of Nations".

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Overseas Development Administration officials are in regular contact with UNICEF-UK on all UNICEF related matters. My officials attended a briefing meeting with UNICEF staff as well as the press launch last month of the progress of nations report.

Angola

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent situation in Angola.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Following United Nations Security Council resolution 864 and the introduction of limited sanctions against UNITA the movement has declared a unilateral ceasefire and agreed to return to negotiations based on the 1991 Bicesse peace accords. "Proximity talks" involving the Government of Angola and UNITA, chaired by the United Nations Secretary General's special representative, Mr. Beye, began in Lusaka on 25 October. We hope that these will result in direct talks. We shall continue actively to support the Secretary General's efforts to bring about a nationwide ceasefire and a negotiated settlement.

Aid Projects

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions since October 1989 he has overruled the advice of his Department's accounting officer that a project being considered for aid funds should not be supported in each case, giving the reasons for his decision.

Mr. Hurd: I have given a ministerial directive to ODA's accounting officer on one occasion. I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave him yesterday on the Pergau hydro-electric project.

EDUCATION

Literacy

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of (a) school leavers and (b) 16 to 19-year-olds have poor literacy skills; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: A recent survey by the Government-funded adult literacy and basic skills unit suggested that more than 40 per cent. of students entering further education colleges needed help with basic literacy in order to achieve a good qualification. The raising of literacy standards is a top priority for the Government's policies for education.

Sex Education

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to ensure that boys are being taught moral responsibility in sex education.

Mr. Forth: In the new draft guidance which will be issued shortly, schools will be reminded of the requirement that sex education should be provided in such a manner as to encourage pupils to have due regard to moral considerations and to the value of family life. The guidance will emphasise the need for schools to foster in both sexes responsible sexual attitudes and behaviour.

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he will take to encourage the work of the School Curriculum and Assessment Authority in sex and moral education.

Mr. Forth: Under section 1 of the Education Reform Act 1988 all maintained schools are required to offer a curriculum which promotes the spiritual, moral, cultural, mental and physical development of pupils at the school and of society. The School Curriculum and Assessment Authority will be carrying out its work within this framework.

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will issue guidance to education authorities advising them not to use the Family Planning Association's primary school workbook on sex education for four-year-olds; and what is his policy on the use of explicit teaching materials for sex education in primary schools.

Mr. Forth: The law does not require primary schools to teach about sex. It does, however, require that where there is such teaching it should encourage pupils to have due regard to moral considerations and to the value of family life. My right hon. Friend has made clear his view that education about sex should begin in the home, as should all education. Governors of all schools should keep closely in touch with parents on this sensitive subject.

School Inspections

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the number of people trained by the Office for Standards in Education for inspection; and for which categories they have been trained.

Mr. Robin Squire: The arrangements for inspecting schools under the Education (Schools) Act 1992 are a matter for Ofsted.

I have asked Professor Sutherland to write to the hon. Member.

First-Degree Arts Courses

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate he has made of the saving to public funds that could be achieved by a reduction to two years in the time taken for first-degree arts courses at universities in England and Wales.

Mr. Boswell: Average public funding per student through Funding Council grant, mandatory awards and student loans for a funded student place on a classroom-based course in 1993-94 is around £5,000. If all such courses were of the conventional length of three years full time, a reduction to two years would lead to recurrent savings of some £560 million in 1993-94 prices when the change was fully implemented.

If the length of first degree courses were reduced with no corresponding increase in the amount of teaching per year, curriculum coverage would be reduced. The Higher Education Funding Council for England is funding a pilot scheme of accelerated degree courses, which provide for more intensive teaching over two years. Direct comparisons with the costs of conventional three year degrees are not possible since the pilot courses attract special funding from the HEFCE and students are eligible for additional maintenance payments. The Government believe that such accelerated courses are likely to appeal mainly to some mature students.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education under what statutory power he intends to provide a grant to the Grant-maintained Schools Centre to enable it to set up four regional offices to provide information on grant-maintained status.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend is making grant available to the Grant-maintained Schools Centre pursuant to regulation 15 of the Education (Grant) Regulations 1990 (SI 1990/1989).

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total cost to the Exchequer of the reduction in the special purposes grant-paid to grant-maintained schools to compensate for their reduced liability to pay council tax—uniform business rate—for the years 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Robin Squire: No cost to the Exchequer arises in this manner.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the special purposes grants given to each grant-maintained school in Devon for each financial year since 1991-92, including the current financial year.

Mr. Robin Squire: The following self-governing schools in Devon have received special purpose grants (SPGs):

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to increase the grant to the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend announced on 16 March, Official Report, column 143, that he was making funds available to the Grant-maintained Schools Centre to support the dissemination of factual information about grant maintained status. The grant to the Grant-maintained Schools Centre for 1993-94 is likely as a consequence of this announcement to increase to around £790,000. The precise figure is yet to be finalised.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will place in the Library a copy of the 1992-93 audited accounts for the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre.

Mr. Robin Squire: Yes, as soon as they are available.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what amount was given to each grant-maintained school under section 11 funding for each financial year since 1991-92, including the current financial year.

Mr. Robin Squire: The table shows the section 11 grants paid by the Department direct to grant-maintained schools for each of the years in question. Payments for the current financial year are those paid to date. The table excludes payments in respect of those grant-maintained schools which have elected to remain part of approved projects within their former maintaining local education authority, as these payments are not made by the Department.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will place in the Library a copy of the business plan drawn up by Coopers Lybrand for the Grant-Maintained Schools Centre.

Mr. Robin Squire: No. The business plan which Coopers and Lybrand helped prepare covers the full range of activities of the Grant-maintained Schools Centre. More than half these are not grant-aided and the information on them is commercial-in-confidence.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Cereal Stores

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the amounts of cereals in storage in each region of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Intervention Board Executive Agency under its chief executive, Guy Stapleton. I have asked him to provide the information requested.

Letter from Guy Stapleton to Rev. William McCrea, dated November 1993:

CEREALS IN STORAGE

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to your written Parliamentary Question (1235) tabled for answer on 29 October 1993:—

"To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, what are the amounts of cereals in storage in each region of the United Kingdom."

The information you request is set out below. All figures are in thousands of tonnes and represent stocks at the end of September 1993.

Region[1]	Feed-Wheat	Wheat B	Barley	Total

[1]HGCA regions of England

There are no stocks of intervention cereals in Northern Ireland or Wales.

I am sending a copy of this letter to the House of Commons Library and the Public Information Office.

Government Offices

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Government offices there are in Northern Ireland.

Sir John Wheeler: The number of Government offices in Northern Ireland housing Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland civil service staff is 322.

Office Costs

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 on rent and other costs associated with the offices of his Department in Whitehall.

Sir John Wheeler: A total of £1,060,362·08.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EC Publications

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many copies of his departmental publication, "The European Community: Facts and Fairytales" have been published; at what cost; to whom and to what organisations it has been distributed (a) within the United Kingdom and (b) abroad; and if he will make a statement on its intended purpose.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A total of 30,000 copies of the booklet "European Community: Facts and Fairytales" have been published so far, at a cost of £10,787. Copies have been sent to Members of Parliament, members of the House of Lords, United Kingdom MEPs, the media, including in Brussels, chambers of commerce, information offices, consumer organisations, women's associations, EC and EFTA embassies in London, major United Kingdom posts abroad and to all individuals who have asked for copies. Some 16,000 copies have been sent out so far. The booklet is intended to help inform public opinion about the Community and, as my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs said in the foreword, to fill in some of the gaps which occur when the facts behind the stories are not explained.

Korea

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest situation in respect of relations between the Republic of Korea and North Korea.

Mr. Goodlad: There have been three rounds of talks about talks during October after a period in which the two sides had not met each other. We have been disappointed at the lack of substantive progress. We hope however that North Korea's move at the third round in tabling a draft agreement for the exchange of high-level envoys may signify a willingness on their part to work towards specific progress at a fourth round of talks scheduled for early November.

Military Exports

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the United Nations report on military exports by country.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This 123-page (A/48/344) report was issued by the United Nations on 11 October. It has been sent to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office by our mission to the United Nations and copies will be distributed to the Library very soon.

New Embassy, Berlin

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans there are for the construction of a new British embassy building in Berlin.

Mr. Goodlad: We propose to open a new embassy in Berlin when the Federal Government move from Bonn. The project is still at pre-planning stages. Issues relating to the site of the pre-war embassy, where Her Majesty the Queen unveiled a plaque in October 1992, and the size of the future embassy, are at present under active consideration.

Office Costs

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 on rent and other costs associated with the offices of his Department in King Charles street, London.

Mr. Goodlad: The main building of the FCO in King Charles street is undergoing major refurbishment extending until early 1997. During this programme approximately one quarter of the building is unoccupied. This is reflected in rent levels, and other costs for 1993-94, which are as follows:

Running costs	£
Rent, including works service charge and rates	8,195,719
Maintenance	475,000
Furnishings	700,000
Unilities	382,763
Contract cleaning	592,200
	10,345,682
Capital costs
Refurbishment programme	11,732,000
TOTAL	22,077,682

WALES

Environmental Education

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will issue guidelines to school inspectors on the identification of good practice in the teaching of environmental education.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The statutory responsibility for school inspections rests with Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in Wales under the Education (Schools) Act 1992 and extended in the Education Act 1993. It is for the chief inspector to issue to school inspectors such guidance on good teaching practice as he considers appropriate.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to require each further and higher education college in Wales to develop an environmental policy and action plan for implementation by the start of the 1994-95 academic year.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I have no plans to do so at the moment. However, the report of a committee on environmental education in further and higher education was sent to all FHE institutions in Wales in February 1993. This report contained a specific recommendation that, after consultation with its staff and students, every FHE institution should formally adopt and publicise, by the beginning of the academic year 1994-95, a comprehensive environmental policy statement, together with an action plan for its implementation.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to establish a central co-ordinating agency in Wales to encourage environmental education.

Sir Wyn Roberts: None. However, the Countryside Council for Wales is currently discussing this matter with other interested organisations.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines he has given to the training and enterprise councils in Wales with respect to accounting conventions to be used in their annual report and accounts as regards (a) income and expenditure, (b) profit and loss account, (c) surplus and retained surplus, (d) gross profit and profit on ordinary activities after taxation, (e) turnover, (f) income and (g) chief executive and managing director level appointments and places on the board of such appointees; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The annual operating agreement between the Welsh Office and training and enterprise councils, which is available in the Library of the House, requires them to publish an audited statement of accounts. As private limited companies, the training and enterprise councils are subject to the audit requirements of the Companies Act 1985 as to the form and content of these accounts.

The standard operating agreement also sets out the procedure each training and enterprise council must follow in appointing a chief executive or managing director.

As private limited companies, the composition of the board of training and enterprise councils is governed by the memorandum and articles of association of each.

Damp Housing

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has of the number of houses in Wales affected by dampness, condensation, mould growth or a combination of these.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Estimates from the 1986 Welsh House Conditions Survey show that, 22,500 households had serious mould, 95,700 had rising damp, 150,400 had penetrating damp: no information is available on the number of households with condensation or those with any combination of these factors.

Waste Management

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of whether the regional groups of waste regulation authorities are being a adequately funded by their constituent authorities to enable them to fulfil their functions.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The functions and funding of regional groups are matters for constituent authorities to determine.

Tinworks Site, Treforest

Dr. Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has to order an immediate investigation of reports of anthrax contamination in buildings formerly used to house large quantities of animal bones for industrial processing at the tinworks site in Treforest, Pontypridd;

(2) if he will make it his policy that his Department will allow no development on the tinworks site in Treforest, Pontypridd until exhaustive investigations have been completed into reports that the site is contaminated with anthrax spores;

(3) what plans he has to order an immediate tightening of security arrangements around buildings known as the tinworks site in Pontypridd until such time as investigations are complete into reports that the buildings are contaminated with anthrax spores.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The issues of development and possible contamination of this site are matters for Taff Ely borough council as the local planning and environmental health authority. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State understands the council has made development of the site conditional on a full prior examination of possible contamination. Should evidence of any contamination be revealed, no development would be permitted until appropriate remedial measures were undertaken.

In terms of the security of the site, my right hon. Friend has been advised that the council are following this matter up with the developers.

Office Costs

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 on rent and other costs associated with the offices of his Department in Gwydyr house, Whitehall.

Mr. Redwood: Property and operating costs comprising rent, rates, service charge, works, maintenance, utilities, cleaning and security are estimated at £418,000 for Gwydyr house in 1993-94.

Arable Regionalisation

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his plans for arable regionalisation in Wales.

Mr. Redwood: For the 1993-94 scheme year—1994-95 marketing year—I propose that Wales should be split into two regions on a parish by parish basis using the pre-1974 boundaries.

In region 1, the notional average yield will be 5·93 tonnes per hectare, the same as in England.

The yield in region 2 will be calculated in such a way as to give an average of 4·65 tonnes per hectare over Wales as a whole.

A parish will be included in region 1 if:

it contains land suitable for growing winter cereals according to parameters defined by the Soil Survey and Land Research Centre; and an average of at least 50 hectares of wheat and winter barley was grown in the parish in the three years in 1989-91.

I have placed in the Library of the House a copy of the report prepared for my Department by the Soil Survey and Land Research Centre along with a list of the parishes that fulfil the above criteria according to Welsh Office records based on the location of holdings. However, if it can be demonstrated by documentary evidence that a parish in which on average 50 or more hectares of wheat and winter barley was grown in 1989-91 is not included in my region 1 list and if the parish also fulfils the land suitability criteria, I will add it to region 1.

My officials will be writing to all cereal farmers in Wales giving details of the arrangements I am proposing. I am also inviting the views of industry representatives on them. Any comments on this proposal or representations on additions to region 1 should be made to my Department by 17 December.

Welsh Language Board

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will announce the members of the statutory Welsh Language Board.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The names of the members, to be formally appointed on 21 December 1993, are as follows:

Lord Elis-Thomas (Chairman)
Dr. Gareth Roberts
Ms Meri Huws
Mr. Godfrey Williams
Miss Gwerfyl Pierce Jones
Dr. Patrick Thomas
Mr. Geraint Price Thomas
Dr. Medwin Hughes
Dr. Neil Caldwell
Mr. Gwilym Owen
Mr. Richard John Edwards
Mr. Gwyn Griffiths
Mr. Edward Rea
Mr. Ron Jones
Mrs. Elan Closs Stephens

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Angling

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate he has made of the Sports Council grant available during the current financial year to the sport of angling, expressed in terms per capita of those participating actively in the sport.

Mr. Brooke: Sports Council grant for angling for the current financial year is not yet known. In 1992-93 Sports Council grants to the governing bodies of angling was £46,800, a sum of 1·7p on a per capita basis for the 2·7 million adults actively participating in the sport.

Canoeing

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate he has made of the grant available from the Sports Council and other public bodies in support of canoeing, expressed in terms per capita of those participating actively in this sport.

Mr. Brooke: In 1992-93 canoeing received grant of £344,426 from the Sports Council and a further £2,000 in awards from the Sportsmatch scheme. In total, this amounted to £3·46 per capita for those 100,000 actively participating in the sport.

Moated Granges

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list for the last 10 years the archaeological moated grange sites that have been demolished in England and Wales.

Mr. Brooke: This information is not readily available for England.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales is responsible for archaeological matters in Wales.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list archaeological moated grange sites that are due to be lost because of planning permission approval being granted.

Mr. Brooke: This information is not readily available.

ENVIRONMENT

Stoke Council (Ombudsman's Report)

Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding Stoke city council's refusal to implement the recommendations contained in the report of the local government ombudsman, reference 90/B/1928; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations. This is a matter between the city council and the local government ombudsman. The Government have, however, made it clear that if local authorities continue to ignore the findings of the ombudsman, steps will be taken to make the ombudsman's recommendations legally enforceable.

Oxford University (Pollution Allegations)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the results of the investigation carried out recently by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution into alleged offences under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 at Oxford university; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The investigation concluded that alleged offences by Oxford university, under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960, were not proven. Limits and conditions within the authorisations granted to the University by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution had not been breached. The inspectorate will continue to pay close attention to radioactive waste management operations at Oxford university and will always investigate any complaints.

Sour Gas

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department has carried out into the (a) toxicity and (b) inflammability of sour gas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The properties of sour gas are well known, and no research has been considered necessary by my Department.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the power stations in England and Wales which have been authorised to use sour gas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: No power stations in England and Wales have been authorised to burn sour gas.

Waste Incineration

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to require that all staff operating incineration plants in the United Kingdom are in receipt of formal qualifications by the year 1997.

Mr. Yeo: No.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to produce periodic revised guidelines on pollution control standards in incineration plants to reflect best available technology.

Mr. Yeo: The guidance notes which the Secretary of State and the chief inspector of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution have published, regarding best available techniques for controlling polluting releases from incinerators, will be reviewed at least every four years.

Ecolabelling Board

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to change the balance of interests represented by the composition of the United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board.

Mr. Yeo: My right hon. Friend has no plans to change the range of expertise originally available on the board. However, following the resignation of Miss Tessa Robertson in the summer, we are considering how to replace the expertise she brought to the board, in particular, her knowledge of the views of environmental non-governmental organisations. I hope we will be able to make an announcement shortly.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the members of the United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board showing what sector or company they come from.

Mr. Yeo: The members of the United Kingdom Ecolabelling Board are appointed in a personal capacity and not as representatives of their organisations. They bring with them expertise in a range of relevant fields. The current Chairman and members are:

Member	Sector/Expertise	Position
Dr. Elizabeth Nelson (Chairman)	Market research	Former Chairman of Taylor Nelson A. G. B. plc
Professor Roland Clift	Environmental Science	Professor of Environmental Technology and Director of the Centre for Environmental Strategy, University of Surrey
Ms Anne Foster	Consumer affairs	Director of the Scottish Consumer Council
Ms Julia Hailes	Environmental consultancy	Director of Sustainability Ltd, author of "Green Consumer guide"
Dr Keith Humphreys	Manufacturing	Chairman and Managing Director, Rhone-Poulenc Ltd.
Ms Pippa Hyam	Environmental consultancy	Senior Associate, PDA International
Mrs. Harriet Kimbell	Consumer affairs and Law	Consumer lawyer and law lecturer.
Mr. Kenneth Miles	Advertising	Director General, Incorporated Society of British Advertisers Ltd.
Miss Jyoti Munsiff	Law	Company Secretary, Shell Transport and Trading
Mr. Derek Norman	Manufacturing	Director of Environmental Affairs, Pilkington plc
Dr Richard Pugh	Retailing	Director, Tesco plc
Mr. Lew Scott	Manufacturing	Manufacturing Director Hoover, Ltd.
Miss Catherine Whitehead	Trading Standards	County Trading Standards Officer, Staffordshire County Council
Mr. Nigel Whitaker	Retailing	Executive Director Kingfisher, plc

Asylum

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list those authorities which have accepted (a) more than 200, (b) 150 to 199, (c) 100 to 149 and (d) 50 to 99 asylum-seeking or refugee households in the last year;

(2) what is the estimated average cost of housing a refugee and asylum-seeking family of four in (a) local authority temporary accommodation and (b) local authority permanent accommodation in (i) the London borough of Westminster, (ii) Birmingham, (iii) Manchester and (iv) Uttlesford;

(3) how many refugees or asylum seekers were provided with (a) local authority temporary accommodation, (b) local authority permanent accommodation and (c) private sector accommodation in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: In the year ending 30 June 1993, 13 local authorities in England reported accepting responsibility to secure permanent accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985 for 50 or more households where the reason for the loss of their last settled home was "refugee or asylum seeker". The authorities concerned and the numbers accepted are set out in the table. Other authorities which did not provide returns for all quarters may also have accepted 50 or more refugees or asylum seekers.

Information is not available centrally, and my Department has no estimates, on the types of accommodation provided to refugees and asylum seekers, nor on the average costs of housing them.

Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how the costs to local authorities of rehousing refugees and asylum seekers are reflected in the standard spending assessment calculaltions.

Mr. Baldry: The costs of rehousing refugees and asylum seekers are reflected through the use of information about the numbers of pupils, estimates of the resident population, the numbers of children of income support claimants and the social characteristics of local areas as measured by the latest population census. Authorities where refugees and asylum seekers tend to concentrate have above average standard spending assessmentts to reflect these and other unusual spending pressures.

The review of standard spending assessments for 1994-95 has considered the relevance of including an indicator of homelessness in addition to incorporating 1991 census information. This would be of some benefit to local authorities where refugees and asylum seekers qualify for permanent housing. Work on the review has now finished and my right hon. Friend will announce the outcome later in the autumn as part of his proposals for revenue support grant for 1994-95.

Tributyl Tin

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research has been conducted by his Department on the effect of tributyl tin used as an anti-fouling marine biocide on ship hulls upon the marine environment with particular reference to the shellfish population.

Mr. Yeo: My Department funded research into the impact of tributyl tin—TBT—on dog whelks, Nucella lapillus, which exhibit effects at very low concentrations. This led to such effects being used as a biological indicator for a survey of TBT in the North sea reported upon in 1992. Current research is using the biological indicator to monitor recovery of the marine environment since the 1987 ban on TBT use on vessels of less than 25 m long and in assessing the implications of TBT use on vessels over 25 m.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress achieved in the design and construction of the intermediate level radioactive waste conditioning plant at Harwell; and when it will become operational.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

The main structure of the intermediate level waste vault store at Harwell has now been completed to schedule and below budget. Delivery and installation of plant and equipment is proceeding to programme. The store is on schedule to commence operation in 1996.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what request he has made to the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee for the committee to advise on the validity of calculation methods for radiation doses in regard to radioactive waste management.

Mr. Yeo: The committee has been asked to give its views on the usefulness of collective dose assessments and the validity of presenting such impacts in terms of numbers of fatalities.

Water Charges (Prepayment)

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment with which water companies the Office of Water Services has had discussions over the installation of prepayment devices.

Mr. Yeo: This is a matter for the Director General of Water Services.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which Governments of European Community member states responded to the second public consultation period for the thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield; and if he will indicate whether their submission was for or against THORP being commissioned.

Mr. Yeo: Responses to the consultation are still being assessed. Detailed information about the responses will be made available once they have all been considered.

Water Quality

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to seek a review of the EC water quality directive.

Mr. Yeo: As part of its programme of work following the Edinburgh summit, the European Commission is already reviewing the drinking water directive—80/778/EEC—and should make its recommendations next year. We have already made clear to the Commission the changes that we believe are required.

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what consideration he is giving in his review of standard spending assessments to include as factors (a) unemployment, (b) health indicators, in particular standard morbidity rates, and (c) disability indicators;

(2) what plans he has to measure economic deprivation as part of his review of the standard spending assessment system; and what alternative measures he has so far considered in this regard;

(3) what conclusions he has reached on representations made to him concerning the use of health variables as a reflection of the differing social needs of an area, in place of the measures currently used;

(4) what conclusions he has reached on representations he has received concerning the extent to which the weighting within the current standards spending assessment system placed on the very elderly discriminates against those areas which have significant health problems but in which industrial traditions have lead to deaths at an earlier age.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 28 October 1993]: The review of standards spending assessments has considered a wide range of issues including the potential use of indicators of health, disability, unemployment, homelessness and economic deprivation. The underlying statistical analysis has been discussed in detail with the local authority associations. Work on the review has now finished and my right hon. Friend will announce the outcome of the review later in the autumn as part of his proposals for revenue support grant for 1994-95.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will as part of the standard spending assessment review consider incorporating factors which are of direct relevance to service provision rather than factors which are proxies for real needs.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 28 October 1993]: The calculation of standard spending assessments uses factors which are considered to be relevant to the provision of the service in question and cannot be directly influenced by local policy decisions. Inevitably this means that in a number of cases it is necessary to use factors which act as proxies for the underlying need to spend. The review of standard spending assessments has considered the incorporation of 1991 census data and the relevance of existing and other possible new factors.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the national total of capital allocations for housing to local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89; and if he will give the breakdown of the total between (i) non-metropolitan district councils, (ii) county councils, (iii) metropolitan district councils, (iv) London boroughs and (v) the City of London.

Sir George Young [holding answer 28 October 1993]: Information on housing investment programme allocations is given in the table. The figures for 1990-91 and subsequent years are not directly comparable with those for earlier years because of the revisions to the capital finance system introduced in April 1990.

These figures do not include any supplementary credit approvals issued during the year.

[2] From 1990-91, under the new capital finance system, the HIP allocation is an assessment of relative need for housing capital expenditure rather than a directly borrowing approval. Borrowing approval is now conveyed by the single, all service, basic credit approval.

[3] County councils are not allocated any monies through the Housing Investment Programme as they have no housing stock.

[4] Allocations for the Greater London Council up to and including 1985-86 are included in the figures for the London boroughs.

Water Disconnections

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households have been disconnected from their water supply for non-payment of sewerage charges each year since privatisation.

Mr. Yeo [holding answer 28 October 1993]: Condition H of the instrument of appointment of each water or water and sewerage undertaker states that disconnection of a water supply can only be made for the non-payment of charges due to the water undertaker for the supply of water.

Capital Allocations

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the regional total of capital allocations for housing to the local authorities in England for (a) 1979-80, (b) 1982-83, (c) 1985-86 and (d) each year since 1988-89 for each standard English region.

Housing, Lancashire

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the number and value of home improvement grants paid to private owners and for tenanted properties, in Lancashire since 1989.

Sir George Young [holding answer 22 October 1993]: Information about the total number and value of home improvement grants paid in Lancashire is shown in the table.

Leasehold Reform

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the advisory service for leaseholders seeking to enfranchise or extend their lease under the provisions of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 to come into operation.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his reply, 19 October 1993]: The Government have been ready to provide a contribution to the costs of an advisory service since the Act received Royal Assent on 20 July, through the special grants programme. Normally up to 50 per cent. of the cost can be met by public funds.

A formal bid was received on 7 October. This showed a low level of initial contributions from private sector bodies, many of whom might expect to be closely involved in the enfranchisement procedures. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment has, therefore, written to a number of institutions seeking further support before final decisions are made about the agency's budget.

I remain confident that the service will be in operation very soon. In the meantime, there is a considerable effort being put into disseminating information about the new legislation. My Department has issued 60,000 leaflets so far, and demand remains high. Several books are being published, and a number of solicitors and valuers have published their own guides. Several conferences are also being organised, in which my Department is playing a full part.

SCOTLAND

Government Offices

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the (a) original estimated cost and (b) actual cost of (i) the new courts and offices in Parliament house, Edinburgh, (ii) the proposed new Scottish Office building in Leith and (iii) the cost of moving thereto and moving other Government Departments into the offices so vacated in St. Andrew's house.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 25 October 1993]: The estimated cost at tender stage of the extension to Parliament house was £14·16 million. The estimated final cost is in the range £15·5 million to £16 million. This takes account of inflationary costs allowed under the contract, covers significant foundation difficulties experienced during construction and an increase in VAT during the contract, and includes an allowance for a contractual claim which is under negotiation with the main contractor.

The new building for the Scottish Office in Leith is being acquired by Property Holdings from the developers for a fixed price of £47·5 million. The rental which the Scottish Office will pay to Property Holdings for the new building will represent a saving on rental payable on three buildings which are being given up including New St. Andrew's house, which is being vacated because of the widespread incidence of asbestos there.

The capital costs associated with the new building which will fall to the Scottish Office cover occupational service works and furniture and are estimated at £9·8 million. The cost of moving staff from existing buildings to the new building is estimated to be £0·1 million.

Lost Working Days

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate the number of working days lost due to (a) ill health, (b) industrial injuries and (c) industrial action for each year since 1988.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 27 October 1993]: The number of working days lost as a result of ill health and industrial injury is not available for Scotland. The number of days lost in Scotland in each year since 1988 as a result of industrial action is set out in the table:

Number of days lost in Scotland as a result of industrial action

Year	Number
1988	205,000
1989	541,000
1990	122,000
1991	121,000
1992	55,000

Overseas Staff and Premises

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost for the current financial year to his Department of having (a) premises and (b) personnel overseas; and what were the comparable figures for (a) 12, (b) 24, (c) 36 and (d) 48 months ago.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 27 October 1993]: My Department has no premises overseas. The cost to my Department of having personnel overseas is expected to be around £317,000 in the current financial year and was £230,000 in 1992-93. Details are not available for previous years.

Strategic Land Use

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his proposals for strategic land use planning following the reform of local government in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 28 October 1993]: Our proposals are set out in paragraphs 3.18-20 of "Shaping the Future—The New Councils" (Cm. 2267).

Office Costs

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 on rent and other costs associated with the offices of his Department at Dover house, Whitehall.

Mr. Lang: The estimated cost, including fuel and utilities and maintenance, for Dover house for 1993-94 is £956,982.

Severely Disadvantaged Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many farmers were in receipt of hill livestock compensatory allowances in the severely disadvantaged areas according to the most recent figures for each year since 1978.

Sir Hector Monro: The number of farmers in receipt of hill and livestock compensatory allowances in the severely disadvantaged areas in each year since 1978 is set out in the table.

Year	Number of Farmers
1978	19,802
1979	19,485
1980	19,198
1981	19,072
1982	18,760
1983	18,610
1984	18,343
1985	18,203
1986	17,889
1987	17,852
1988	17,768
1989	17,630
1990	17,537
1991	17,403
1992	17,260
[1]1993	16,827

[1]to date.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many producers are entitled to hill livestock compensatory allowances; and what proportion of those are located in (a) severely disadvantaged areas and (b) disadvantaged areas.

Sir Hector Monro: Based on the 1992 HLCA scheme, the latest complete scheme for which figures are available, of 17,893 claims received 17,260 were from producers located in severely disadvantaged areas and 633 from producers located in disadvantaged areas.

Ewe and Suckler Cow Premiums

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the figures relating to 1993 for the value of the ewe premium and suckler cow premium per head distinguishing the value of any supplements if applicable.

Sir Hector Monro: The rate of sheep annual premium in Scotland for the 1993 marketing year is fixed only after the end of the year. To date, European Commission regulations provide for payments of two advances totalling £12·55 per eligible ewe and a supplement in less favoured areas of £5·16 per eligible ewe. The final rate of premium and supplement due will be fixed by the Commission in spring 1994.

The 1993 suckler cow premium rate per head in Scotland is £65·73. In addition a payment of £28·17 per head can be made if the stocking density on a holding is less than 1·4 livestock units per hectare of eligible forage area.

HEALTH

Community Care

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial provision she intends for community care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I announced last year that the special community care transitional grant to local social services authorities in England would be £716 million for 1994-95 and £618 million for 1995-96. The grant will be increased by £20 million to £736 million in 1994-95 and by £30 million to £648 million in 1995-96. These increases will help local social services authorities to arrange for more home care and respite care. The special transitional grant is additional to the resources in general local government settlements which will be announced in due course. The grant will be phased out in 1996-97. In that year a further £418 million will be made available to local social services authorities to reflect the continued development of their community care responsibilities. The cumulative extra finance then available for local authorities' new community care responsibilities will exceed £2·2 billion in England.

Hospital Services

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the new services that have been provided by the increase in the hospital and community services budget in each of the last three years.

Mr. Sackville: Government spending on hospital and community health services has risen by 13·8 per cent. in real terms since 1990-91. Over this period there have been significant improvements in the level and quality of services provided to patients. General and acute activity is forecast to be 16 per cent. higher this year than in 1990-91. Since December 1992, no patient in the regions has been waiting longer than two years for in-patient or day case treatment, compared with 51,053 at March 1991. The patients charter has raised the standard of services for patients. The national health service has at the same time taken forward the "Health of the Nation" strategy for preventing premature death and avoidable ill health. With local authorities, health authorities and trusts have successfully introduced our community care reforms, which are designed to provide more flexible and local services to people in the community. We shall continue to build on this progress and improve services still further.

Depleted Uranium

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what collaborative studies her Department has conducted with the authorities of the United States on risks from inhalation of depleted uranium dust particles.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the waiting time for hospital in-patient treatment in each of the regional health authorities which cover the Greater London area.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested is given in "Hospital Waiting List Statistics: England". The latest published figures are for March 1993 and are available in the Library. The Greater London area is covered by the figures for the four Thames regional health authorities.

Junior Doctors

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of junior doctors are currently working more than their contracted hours.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made as to the implications for the health service of the EC 48-hour working week directive with particular reference to junior doctors; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The directive on working time has not yet been adopted finally by the European Community Council. However, at the start of negotiations, an assessment was made of the impact of the proposals on the working arrangements of junior doctors within the health service in the light of existing initiatives. On the basis of this assessment we obtained an exclusion from the draft directive for doctors in training.

Abortion

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total cost to the NHS of termination of pregnancy operations in England and Wales in the last 12 months for which figures are available; what proportion of total NHS expenditure this represented; and what were the corresponding figures for each of the previous five years.

Mr. Sackville: The annual cost to the national health service of termination of pregnancy is not available centrally. The cost of this treatment varies according to factors such as gestation and length of stay. The estimated average cost of a surgical abortion in a NHS hospital is £140 for a day case and £270 for a straightforward in-patient case, at 1990-91 figures. In 1991, there were 54,602 residents of England and Wales treated in the NHS on a day care basis and 20,570 as in-patients.

Food Safety Law Enforcement

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many times since the Food Safety Act 1990 came into force his Department has investigated cases where there has been a suggestion that the law has been applied in an over-zealous way by a local authority; and with what results.

Mr. Sackville: The Department started keeping a record of investigations in 1992. Of the 32 cases it has investigated the Department considered eight complaints to be justified. During 1992 the total number of hygiene inspections and other visits carried out under the Food Safety Act 1990 was 542,855.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging Scanner, Greenwich

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who authorised the payment by South-East Thames regional health authority of a deposit for the purchase of a magnetic resonance imaging scanner; for what purpose and on what date; whether the deposit was refundable or non-refundable; on what date Greenwich Healthcare Trust agreed to purchase the scanner and pay the balance of the costs; on what date Greenwich Healthcare Trust took delivery of the scanner; and on what date it was brought into operational use.

Mr. Sackville: The purchase of equipment to support health care is a matter for managers and clinicians in trust hospitals; for the remaining directly managed units it is the responsibility of health authorities. The hon. member may wish to write to the chairman of the Greenwich Healthcare Trust, Mr. Neville Thompson, about the financing and installation of medical equipment at the Brook and Greenwich hospitals.

Bed Closures and Cancelled Operations

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give details of the number of beds closed and operations cancelled for financial reasons since 1 January for each of the district health authorities for England.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

NHS Management

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her oral statement of 21 October, Official Report, columns 398-400, on managing the new NHS, what mechanisms will be established to enable the new regional offices to monitor and promote sub-regional equity.

Dr. Mawhinney: Following the proposed abolition of regional health authorities, the allocation of resources to district health authorities, family health services authorities and general practitioner fundholders would be handled by the National Health Service Management Executive, of which the regional offices will be part, within the policies and financial strategy set by Ministers.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her oral statement of 21 October, Official Report, columns 398-400, on managing the new NHS, (1) how the regional function related to the implementation of the "The Health of the Nation" strategy will be managed;

(2) how the regional research and development function will be managed;

(3) how the regional clinical audit function will be managed.

Dr. Mawhinney: The main functions carried out in the national health service above the level of purchasers and providers are described in the background document "Managing the new NHS", copies of which are available in the Library. The detailed allocation of functions to the NHS Management Executive headquarters and regional offices, and the arrangements for discharging those functions, have not yet been decided. The Government remain committed to the "Health of the Nation" strategy, the research and development strategy and the development of clinical audit.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what actions she intends to take to enable the NHS Management Executive to take on a clearer identity as the headquarters of the national health service.

Dr. Mawhinney: The National Health Service Management Executive is to be streamlined and reorganised to include eight regional offices, each headed by a regional director. This will focus it on the key functions which it needs to perform as the headquarters of the NHS, with a strategic rather than operational role. Work will be undertaken to define clearly the respective roles and responsibilities of the NHS Management Executive and the wider Department of Health.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her latest estimate of the number of NHS staff who will be made redundant as a result of the proposed abolition of regional health authorities and NHS Management Executive outposts; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: No estimate has been made. Future manpower requirements for the National Health Service Management Executive will be determined in the light of the functions which are to be discharged by the headquarters and the regional offices.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guarantees of terms of employment she intends to implement for NHS staff transferring from regional health authorities to other NHS bodies.

Dr. Mawhinney: Our intention is that, so far as the law allows, all staff who transfer from regional health authorities to other national health service bodies will have their terms of employment determined as though the provisions of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 apply. This will mean that staff transferring will generally be able to preserve their continuity of service in the NHS. Staff who transfer between health authorities in the circumstances provided by the NHS (Transfer of Officers Regulations) (No. 2) Regulations, 1986 are already assured of continuity of service.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish a table showing how many national health service trusts fall into (a) band 1, (b) band 2 and (c) band 3 according to unit turnover.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Minister for Health gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 23 February at columns 550-55.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her oral statement of 21 October, Official Report, columns 398-400, on the new NHS, what role she is planning for community health councils within the new NHS structure; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Community health councils have an important role in representing, from an independent viewpoint, the voice of individuals and communities, and this will continue. Arrangements for the establishment and funding of community health councils after the proposed abolition of regional health authorities will be discussed with representatives of the Association of Community Health Councils of England and Wales as legislation is prepared.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her oral statement of 21 October, Official Report, columns 398-400, on managing the new NHS, what plans she has to ensure (a) that a public health function remains at the intermediate tier and (b) that those succeeding regional directors of public health retain their ability to make independent statements.

Dr. Mawhinney: The background document "Managing the New NHS", which provides further information in support of the decisions announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 21 October, states that the major public health responsibilities currently undertaken by regional health authorities will be incorporated in the regional offices of the National Health Service Management Executive, and that the professional accountability for public health issues will remain unaltered. Copies of the background document are available in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations were received by those conducting the NHS functions and manpower review from representatives of community health councils.

Dr. Mawhinney: None. The deputy chief executive of the National Health Service Management Executive discussed issues relating to the functions and manpower review at a meeting with representatives of the Association of Community Health Councils of England and Wales in September.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will publish a table showing how many family health service authorities fall into (a) band 1, (b) band 2 and (c) band 3 according to the population of the area covered by the authority;

(2) if she will publish a table showing how many district health authorities fall into (a) band 1, (b) band 2 and (c) band 3 according to revenue budget.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

Fact-finding Trips

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with officials from (a) Worcester royal infirmary or (b) Worcester district health authority regarding levels of expenditure within the district on fact-finding trips.

Mr. Sackville: None. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Worcester and district health authority, Mr. Prescott, for details.

Read Coding

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation has been made of the ability of Read coding to map to other classification systems.

Mr. Sackville: A report published in 1988 by the joint computing group of the Royal College of General Practitioners and the General Medical Services Committee of the British Medical Association[1], confirmed that the Read codes were compatible with the World Health Organisation's International Statistical Classification of Diseases, Injuries and Causes of Death (ninth revision) (Injuries and Causes of Death-9), and with the Classification of Surgical Operations and Procedures produced by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS).

In 1992 the Read codes were the subject of a report produced by the OPCS diagnostic support service[2]. This is the World Health Organisation's London collaborating centre for the classification of diseases. The report described an exercise to validate the cross-referencing of the Read codes to ICD-9. The report's recommendations have now been implemented.

Copies of both reports will be placed in the Library.

[1] "The Classification of General Practice Data": GMSC-RCGP Joint Computing Group Technical Working Party. JCG 20 1987-88.
[2] "Report on the Validation of the Cross-Referencing of NHSCCC-5 Codes to ICD-9": OPCS Diagnostic Support Service and WHO London Collaborating Centre for the Classification of Diseases.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who owns the intellectual property rights to the Read codes.

Mr. Sackville: The intellectual property rights to the Read codes were purchased on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health in 1990 thereby making the Read codes Crown copyright.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms have been put in place to ensure that the NHS will have the appropriate analytic and interpretive skills to make use of Read codes.

Mr. Sackville: The analytical and interpretive skills to use Read codes are no different from those currently exercised by clinicians, clinical coders and others in using other coding and classification systems.

However, the National Health Service Management Executive's information management group will be providing training packages in the use of Read codes, tailored to the needs of various professional groups in the NHS.

The specialty working groups developing Read codes are keeping clinicians informed: within the last 18 months they have produced over 100 publications and given 200 presentations.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the National Health Service Management Executive regarding the use of Read codes within the national health service.

Mr. Sackville: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health has agreed with the National Health Service Management Executive that, with the acknowledged support of the medical profession, it should promote and facilitate the use of Read codes within the NHS.

The NHS Management Executive's information management and technology strategy, launched by Ministers in December 1992, has the Read codes as one of its key elements. Copies of the strategy are available in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish details of the financial terms under which the clinical coding centre at Loughborough was taken into ownership by the NHS.

Mr. Sackville: The national health service for coding and classification was created following the purchase in 1990 of the intellectual property rights for the Read codes. The financial terms of the purchase are commercially confidential.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial arrangements exist for national health service organisations and others wishing to adopt the Read coding system.

Mr. Sackville: A recent executive letter, EL(93)87, copies of which are available in the Library, has announced changes in the forms of Read code licence now available to secondary care users in the national health service. Licences are available for individual providers, groups of providers and for all secondary care users within the NHS regions, at increasing levels of discount.

At present a different mechanism applies to general medical practitioners. The suppliers of GP computer systems pay a licence fee in order to include Read codes in their systems: that cost is recovered in the charges paid by GPs to use one of those systems.

Medical Records

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is taking to guarantee the confidentiality of medical records; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The confidentiality of personal health information is protected by the common law, the ethical obligations of health professionals and, where the information is held in computerised form, by provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984.

The National Health Service Management Executive issued guidance in September 1992, EL(92)60, which advised the NHS of the need to secure the confidentiality of personal information in the context of contracting, and which also reminded the NHS of the importance of safeguarding the security of its information systems. In addition, the Department plans to issue for consultation draft guidance to the NHS on the confidentiality, use and disclosure of personal health information. Copies of the guidance, EL(92)60, are available in the Library.

NHS Policy Board

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the full membership of the present NHS Policy Board, with the professional status of each member.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

The Rt. Hon. Virginia Bottomley, JP, MP
Secretary of State for Health (Chairman)

Sir Roy Griffiths
Company Director (Deputy Chairman)

Mr. John Bowis Esq., OBE, MP
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State

Dr. Kenneth Calman
Chief Medical Officer

Professor Cyril Chantler
Professor in Paediatric Nephrology

Sir Tim Chessells
Businessman and Accountant

The Baroness Cumberlege, CBE
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State

Mr. Peter Gummer
PLC Chairman and Chief Executive

Mr. Graham Hart
Permanent Secretary, Department of Health

Ms Kate Jenkins
Independent Management Consultant

Dr. Brian Mawhinney, MP
Minister of State for Health

Ms Sheila Masters
Chartered Accountant

Mrs. Yvonne Moores
Chief Nursing Officer

Sir Duncan Nichol
Chief Executive, NHS Management Executive

The Hon. Tom Sackville, MP
Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State

Oral Health

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to announce details of her Department's proposed oral health strategy.

Dr. Mawhinney: In due course.

Prescriptions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pharmacies in (a) Pendle, (b) Lancashire, (c) the north-west and (d) England dispense fewer than 1,700 prescriptions per month.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table:

Total number of pharmacies		Dispensing less than 1,700 per month	Per cent.
Pendle	18	3	17·0
Lancashire	303	35	12·0
North West	838	94	11·0
England	9,763	1,790	18

Notes:

i. "Pendle" comprises the postcodes BB8 and BB9 covering Colne, Barnoldswick, Earby, Nelson, Bierfield, Trauden, Bartley. This information was obtained from the Public Enquiry Office at the House of Commons and Lancashire Family Health Services Authority.

ii. Lancashire as per the FHSA area.

iii. North West as per the North Western Regional Health Authority.

iv. The source of the prescription data is Table C20 from the Prescription Pricing Authority, and includes pharmacies that operated throughout the 1992-93 financial year with closures excluded and new openers annualised. New openers' prescription numbers are "annualised" using raising factors. A factor of 12 was applied to get an approximate monthly figure.

Dental Services, London

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had in the last six months regarding the availability of hospital dental and orthodontic services within the London area.

Dr. Mawhinney: The London implementation group, which was established to report to Ministers on progress in carrying forward policies to improve London's health services, has met the British Dental Association, the Eastman dental hospital and the Institute of Dental Health to discuss the provision of dental services, including hospital services, in the London area. The London implementation group is now considering the need to examine the provision of these services in more detail.

Regional Policy Board

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria will be used in the selection of the eight regional policy board members whose appointment she announced on 21 October.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 27 October at column 695.

East Yorkshire DHA

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the contract for the construction of the new headquarters of the East Yorkshire district health authority and Humberside family health services authority was put out to tender.

Mr. Sackville: I understand that the contract for the construction of the new headquarters was subject to competitive tendering.

Office Costs

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 on rent and other costs associated with the offices of her Department at Richmond house, 79 Whitehall, London.

Mr. Sackville: Richmond house is a Crown building and the Department of Health pays an annual assessed rent to Property Holdings. The assessed rent for 1993-94 based on the space currently occupied by the Department of Health amounts to £5·5 million.

Other costs directly associated with the accommodation —for example, contribution in lieu of rates, fuel—amount to £2·336 million.

Hypothermia

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list, for each year since 1975, the number of recorded deaths from hypothermia in (a) England and Wales and (b) the United Kingdom as a whole.

Mr. Sackville: The information for England and Wales is shown in the table. The information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Number of deaths (a) with hypothermia as the underlying cause of death and (b) with any mention of hypothermia on the death certificate, all ages, England and Wales, 1975-1992.

Year	Underlying Cause	Mentions
1975	25	511
1976	21	585
1977	14	613
1978	21	708
1979	435	863
1980	261	596
1981	276	685
1982	326	664
1983	221	538
1984	266	555
1985	440	827
1986	437	837
1987	269	559
1988	194	440
1989	166	372
1990	152	368
1991	249	534

Note:

1 The figure for underlying cause between the years 1975-78 and 1979-92 are not comparable. This is due to the change from the 8th to the 9th Revision of the International Classification of Diseases (ICD). The 8th revision code is assigned to ICD 788.9 while the 9th revision code is assigned to ICDs 778.3 and 991.6.

2 For 1986 to 1992 neonatal deaths are included in the mentions but not for the underlying cause of death (neonatal deaths were not given an underlying cause of death from 1 January 1986 onwards).

Staphylococcus Aureus

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice has been issued by her Department regarding the infectious disease multi-resistant staphylococcus aureus.

Mr. Sackville: Guidelines on the control of methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus (MRSA) were issued by professional organisations in 1985 and revised in 1990. Copies will be placed in the Library. The Department supports the advice given in these guidelines which are applicable to other multi-resistant staphylococcus organisms.

The Department of Health issued general guidance to the national health service on hospital infection control in 1988, HC(88)33, copies of which are available in the Library. A joint Department of Health/Public Health Laboratory Service working party is currently updating this and we expect to issue revised guidance in 1994.

The staff of the PHLS are able to offer detailed advice to the professionals involved in hospitals affected by MRSA.

GPs (False Claims)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps have been taken by her Department to ensure that FHSAs are able to safeguard against general practitioners submitting false claims for the number of patients registered at their practice; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Family health service authorities are required to validate general practitioners' claims for fees and allowances, and where appropriate, to make payment accordingly. Regional health authorities are responsible for monitoring the performance of their FHSAs in the general discharge of their duties. The national health service central register can assist FHSAs in checking a patient's registration and the name of the previous doctor.

Morning-after Pill

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had regarding the possibility of making the morning-after pill available without prescription.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms Primarolo) on 26 October at column 607.

Northumbria Health Authorities

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals she has for the amalgamation of Newcastle district health authority with North Tyneside health authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: We understand that the Northern regional health authority is planning to carry out a public consultation shortly on a proposal to merge Newcastle district health authority and North Tyneside district health authority.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Literacy

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the impact of improved literacy levels on departmental expenditure.

Mr. Burt: The assessment and provision of information to the public on benefits is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Mr. Michael Bichard to Mr. Patrick Cormack, dated October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions raised about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what assessment he has made of the impact of improved literacy levels in departmental expenditure.

All publicity material and external claim forms are tested, at pre production stage, with representatives of the customer group, and when appropriate their advisers. This research ensures all relevant factors and considered and taken account of including any differentials in resource requirements.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many absent parents in receipt of income support are paying a contribution towards maintenance by means of deducion of benefit as a result of a reference to the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: The latest available information, collected in August 1993, indicates that deductions from income support in place of payments of child maintenance, at the standard rate of £2·20 a week, were being made from 1,522 absent parents. This information is taken from the management information statistics collated by the Benefits Agency, and is provisional.

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the recent case in Teesside county court involving the Child Support Agency; and if he will take steps to clarify the legal position of fathers who are already making maintenance payments as a result of a court order or an agreement made between the parties concerned.

Mr. Burt: Under child support legislation, parents with care not on income support, family credit or disability working allowance and who have a court order or written maintenance agreement will be able to apply to the agency between April 1996 and March 1997, and not before. Where a relevant benefit is in payment, the case will be taken on by the agency before April 1996, regardless of whether there is an existing court order or written maintenance agreement.

The case before the Teesside combined court involved a parent with care not receiving relevant benefit who had previously sought to have her existing court order revoked so that she could apply to the agency before 1996. It is for the courts to decide whether, in any particular case, it is appropriate for them to revoke an existing court order. I welcome the court's decision and although it sets no precedent, it may discourage others from attempting to jump the queue.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate for 1993-94 or give the most recently available estimate of the number of (a) employees who pay national insurance contributions, (b) employees with earned income above the NIC ceiling, (c) employees with earnings less than the income tax threshold who pay NICs, (d) self-employed who pay class 4 NICs, (e) self-employed who pay class 2 NICs, (f) self-employed who pay class 3 NICs, (g) all self-employed people paying NICs, (h) self-employed who pay no NICs and (i) self-employed with profits above the upper profits limit for NICs.

Mr. Hague: The information requested is as follows:

(a) 17·7 million;
(b) 3·0 million;
(c) 0·5 million;
(d) 1·9 million;
(e) 2·4 million;
(f) Reliable estimates are not available;
(g) In addition to those at (e) a number of self-employed earners pay Class 3 NICs to make-up their contribution record or Class 1 NICs from concurrent employment as an employed earner. Reliable estimates of the numbers involved are not available;
(h) 0·45 million;
(i) 0·43 million;

Note: Figures (a-e) have been rounded to nearest 0·1 million.

Means-tested Benefits

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 678, what are the figures for tax-paying households in receipt of means-tested benefits for the latest year now available.

Mr. Burt: Pursuant to the hon. Member's question tabled in July, I wrote to the hon. Member on 28 September 1993 and provided him with the latest available information. A copy of the letter was placed in the Library.

Mortgage Payment Assistance

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his latest estimate of the number of households receiving assistance with mortgage payments (a) for interest-only mortgages and (b) for endowment mortgages; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what was the number of home owners in receipt of income support at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the form requested. However, according to the latest available figures, 536,000 claimants are receiving income support to help with their mortgage interest payments and a further 59,000 are receiving income support to help with their housing requirements but no help with mortgage interest.

Housing Benefit

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to change the housing benefit rules as they apply to 16 and 17-year-olds who are looked after by social service departments.

Mr. Burt: Housing benefit is payable only to people who are liable to pay rent. I intend issuing further guidance to local authorities to clarify the circumstances in which housing benefit is properly payable to young people being looked after by social service departments. The local authority associations will be consulted before this guidance is issued.

Residential Homes

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the level of benefits paid to people in residential nursing homes.

Mr. Burt: A total of 273,000 people receive help through income support with residential care and nursing home fees at a cost of £2·5 billion[1]. This compares with 12,000 people who received such help in 1979 at a cost of £10 million.

Since April 1985 practically all the income support limits for residential care and nursing homes have been increased in real terms. The limit for elderly people in residential care homes increased by 13 per cent. in real terms and the limit for elderly people in nursing homes by 36 per cent.

These limits are reviewed each year as part of the general benefit uprating exercise and an announcement will be made as usual later this year.

[1] Income Support Quarterly Statistical Enquiry: Residential Care and Nursing Home Report November 1992.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to alter the invalidity benefit rules to disqualify people who undertake voluntary work.

Mr. Scott: We are reviewing invalidity benefit in the context of the fundamental review of social security expenditure. The review covers all aspects of the benefit including rules relating to the treatment of work. No decisions have yet been made.

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the number, age and gender of claimants without accommodation, by Benefits Agency local and district offices, and the number who are submitting sick certificates.

Mr. Burt: I understand from Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, that the information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Industrial Injuries Disablement Benefit

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will extend the right to apply for industrial injuries disablement benefit for those suffering from chronic bronchitis, emphysema or both to shipyard workers as well as miners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council advises my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on the prescription of diseases for industrial injuries disablement benefit. I understand the council has not received the necessary scientific evidence to suggest that bronchitis and emphysema should be recommended for prescription in relation to shipyard workers.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many mothers on means-tested benefits have been financially penalised for not naming absent fathers since April 1993.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member shortly and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Jim Cunningham, dated 28 October 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Child Support Agency it is my responsibility to answer questions about relevant operational matters. I am therefore replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many mothers on means tested benefits have been financially penalised for not naming the fathers since April 1993.

To date, 22 Reduced Benefit Directions in respect of parents with care who have refused without good cause to co-operate with the Agency have been passed to the Benefits Agency to implement. The majority of these have not yet been implemented.

I hope you will find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

NATIONAL FINANCE

VAT (Domestic Fuel)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration is being given to exempting day nurseries from VAT on fuel.

Sir John Cope: None. Many fee-paying day nurseries already pay VAT on their purchases of fuel. Nurseries that use small amounts of fuel and charitable providers of free day nursery care may currently buy fuel zero-rated, but such supplies will become liable to VAT at 8 per cent. from 1 April 1994 and at the standard rate from 1 April 1995.

Ms Quin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what regional assessment of the effect of VAT on domestic heating his Department has undertaken.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 27 October 1993]: No specific regional assessment has been made. Expenditure within a region varies widely and depends on a wide range of factors.

Office Costs

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated amount to be spent in 1993-94 on rent and other costs associated with the offices of his Department at Parliament street, London.

Sir John Cope: The Treasury's rent and works service charges for its offices in Parliament street are estimated in 1993-94 to be:

Rent (including VAT)	6,748,822
Works services charge	1,370,850

This accommodation is on the common user estate owned by the Crown and administered by Property Holdings. In addition a contribution in lieu of rates of £1,676,655 has been made to the Crown Property Unit of the Valuation Office of the Inland Revenue.

It is also estimated that in 1993-94 other associated Treasury costs in the Parliament street building will be as follows:

Fuel and Utilities	280,000
Cleaning Costs	260,000
Charges for maintenance and minor new works	250,000

Private Pensions

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what additional costs are included in departmental budgets and accounts in respect of achieving an equivalence in accounting treatment with the additional costs incurred by private sector companies in respect of the loss of tax relief on private sector pensions above the earnings cap.

Mr. Dorrell: None. Departments are expected to contain any pay-related costs within their existing budgets.

EC Contributions

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out what happens to the level of resources available to the European Community for each of the years for 1993 to 2000 on the basis of the growth rates assumed at Edinburgh and for average European growth rates of 0·25 per cent. per annum, 0·5 per cent. per annum, 1 per cent. per annum and 2 per cent. per annum less than those assumed.

Mr. Nelson: On the basis of the economic growth assumptions and the own resources ceilings agreed at the Edinburgh European Council, the information requested for the years 1993-1999—the period covered by the Edinburgh financial perspective—is as follows:

	1993	1994	1995	1996	1997	1998	1999
Own resources ceilings (percentage of GNP)	1·20	1·20	1·21	1·22	1·24	1·26	1·27
Own resources ceilings (mecu—1992 prices)
Edinburgh economic assumptions[1]	65,820	67,272	69,527	71,858	74,859	77,968	80,551
Reduced real growth in Community GNP:
–¼ per cent. per annum	65,521	66,799	68,871	71,002	73,790	76,667	79,014
–½ per cent. per annum	65,359	66,470	68,364	70,308	72,890	75,547	77,669
–1 per cent. per annum	65,035	65,816	67,359	68,935	71,116	73,347	75,038
–2 per cent. per annum	64,387	64,516	65,379	66,249	67,672	69,107	70,004

[1] Edinburgh assumed real growth in Community GNP of 1·4 per cent. in 1993, 2·2 per cent. in 1994 and 2·5 per cent. a year thereafter.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what review he is currently giving to membership by the United Kingdom of the ERM; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: I have made it clear that sterling could not join the ERM for some time ahead—possibly not in this Parliament. Re-entry cannot be considered until there is greater convergence between the monetary policies appropriate for all the Community economies and I should also need to be satisfied that the system would be operated to the benefit of all its members.

Income Tax

Mr. Mandelson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the direct revenue yield in a full year at 1993-94 levels of income from restricting (a) personal allowances, (b) relief from pension contributions and (c) other reliefs to relief at (i) 25p and (ii) 20p giving, in each case, the numbers of people affected.

Mr. Dorrell: Estimated full-year yields at 1993-94 income levels based on a projection of the 1991-92 survey of personal incomes and other survey data are given in the table. The figures do not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of such changes, and show the yield from restructuring each allowance or relief separately. If two or more were restricted the total yield would be greater than the sum of the individual figures.

	Restriction to
	Basic rate		20p
Effect of restricting	Yield £ million	Numbers affected Millions	Yield £ million	Numbers affected Millions
(a) Personal allowances[1]	1,600	2·9	6,500	25·7
(b) Relief for pension	530	1·4	1,100	10·5
(c) Other reliefs	200	0·6	[2]n/a	n/a

[1] Including the married couples' and related allowances.
[2] Information on reliefs given at source is not available from the Survey of Personal Incomes so it is not possible to estimate the effect of restricting other reliefs to 20 per cent.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn), 24 February, Official Report, column 585, if he will update the estimates given to include figures for 1993-94, expressing all estimates in 1993-94 prices.

Mr. Dorrell: The table shows the direct revenue costs in a full year compared with reintroduced tax rates of 45, 50, 55 and 60 per cent. The band widths for the tax rate schedule have been calculated by uprating the corresponding parts of the 1987-88 regime by movements in retail prices index as in the statutory indexation formula. The estimates take account of the introduction of independent taxation from 1990-91 and the restriction of mortgage interest relief to the basic rate from 1991-92.

	Estimated change in tax revenue at rates in excess of 40 per cent.
Year	At current prices £ billion	At 1993-94 prices £ billion
1988-89	2·6	3·4
1989-90	3·2	3·9
1990-91	3·7	4·1
1991-92	4·3	4·5
[1]1992-93	4·4	4·5
[1]1993-94	4·6	4·6

[1] Provisional estimates.

The estimates do not allow for any behavioural effect that might have resulted had the tax rates above 40 per cent. been retained and do not include capital gains tax.

Balance of Payments

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answers to the hon. Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 17 February, Official Report, column 206, if he will update the estimates giving figures for 1994-95 and for a full year.

Mr. Dorrell: Assuming statutory indexation in 1994-95 the basic rate limit would be £24,200. Estimated costs on yields at 1994-95 income levels compared with the indexed base are given in the table.

Band of taxable income over which 35 per cent. rate would be charged	Revenue cost at 1994-95 income levels from introducing a 35 per cent. rate £ million
£	In 1994-95	Full-year
24,200—26,000	140	190
24,200—30,000	380	510
24,200—35,000	600	800

Level of taxable income above which 50 per cent. rate would be charged	Revenue yield at 1994-95 income levels from introducing a 50 per cent. rate £ million
£	In 1994-95	Full-year
50,000	1,450	1,950
60,000	1,210	1,620
70,000	1,030	1,380

The estimates do not allow for any behavioural effect that might result from such changes to the tax system and do not include capital gains tax.

CAMBRIDGE REFERENCE LIBRARY

Coin Designs

Mr Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans Her Majesty's Government has to issue new designs for circulating coins.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to approve my recommendation for a new series of designs for the reverse of the £1 coin. The designs will represent each of the four parts of the United Kingdom and will be adopted in turn during the years 1994-97.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 230

SESSION 1992–93

18th October, 1993—29th October, 1993

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
